

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

RE-PRINTED BY HIGGINBOTHAM AND CO.,

P R E F A C E.

THE frequent enquiries made for the WILSON'S MACKENZIE COLLECTION and the high prices secured for second-hand copies at auction sales, have induced the present Publishers to reprint it. The work has for a long while been quite out of print and even used-copies are scarcely met with. It is now got up in a cheaper, handy form with catch-headings on each page, and in one volume instead of two as originally published. The Index has been carefully revised and enlarged.

Opportunity has also been taken to prefix a brief outline of the life of Col. MACKENZIE, of the steps taken from time to time to catalogue his "Collection," and of the proposals for its utilization.

Should inducement offer, it is intended, at some future date, to print, as a companion volume, the late Rev. WILLIAM TAYLOR's able reports, on the portion of the "MACKENZIE COLLECTION" transferred to the Madras Government from Calcutta alluded to at page xv.

LT.-COL. COLIN MACKENZIE, C.B.,

AND THE

" MACKENZIE COLLECTION."

COLONEL COLIN MACKENZIE, the collector of the valuable manuscripts catalogued in the following pages, was a native of the island of Lewis. Little is known of his parentage, education or early life. For some time before he came to India, as we learn from the evidence given by Sir ALEX. JOHNSTON, late Chief Justice of Ceylon, before the Select Committee of the House of Commons on the affairs of the East India Company in 1832,* he was employed by FRANCIS, the fifth Lord of Merchistoun, in searching for, and getting together, all available information respecting the knowledge possessed by the Hindus of Mathematics in general and of the nature and use of Logarithms in particular. This was done with a view to enable that nobleman to write a life of his ancestor, JOHN NAPIER, the inventor of English Logarithms: but before the work was completed, LORD MERCHISTOUN died. Mr. MACKENZIE, desirous of prosecuting his oriental researches in India, then applied for and, through the influence of LORD SEAFORTH, whose protégé he also was, obtained an appointment as Cadet of Engineers on the Madras Establishment of the East India Company. He came to India in 1782, just a century ago, with letters of introduction to LORD MACARTNEY, the then Governor, and to Mr. JOHNSTON, who filled an important post at Madura, the ancient seat of a Hindu College celebrated for the extent and variety of the knowledge which its members had acquired in Astronomy, Mathematics and every branch of Indian Literature.

* Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. I, p. 333.

Happily for Col. MACKENZIE, Mrs. JOHNSTON, daughter of his late friend and early patron and wife of the gentleman to whom he had received an introduction, was at this time herself engaged in carrying out her deceased father's intention of indicting the life of the author of Logarithms. For this purpose, she had in her employ the most distinguished Brahmins in the neighbourhood of Madura; and, wishing to avail herself of the Colonel's help also, she and her husband invited him to join them at that station. He did so in 1783. Col. MACKENZIE's intercourse with the Brahmins impressed him with the idea that the most valuable materials for a history of India might be collected in different parts of the peninsula, and during his residence at Madura, he first conceived and formed the plan of making that collection which afterwards became the favorite object of his pursuit for 38 years of his life, and which is now the most expensive and most valuable collection of historical documents relative to India that ever was made by any one individual in Europe or in Asia.

From 1783 to 1796, the first thirteen years of his Indian career, Col. MACKENZIE was almost exclusively engaged in military and professional duties. These were troublous times when the country was just emerging from famine, penury and war. As he himself states, in a letter to his friend Sir ALEX. JOHNSTON, written in 1817 and quoted in the following INTRODUCTION by Professor WILSON, he was employed towards the close of the war of 1783 in the provinces of Coimbatore and Dindigul; then on Engineering duties in the provinces of Madras, Nellore and Guntur ; throughout the whole of the war, from 1790 to 1792, in Mysore and in the countries ceded by the Nizam ; and subsequently in Ceylon. These frequent changes and removals from province to province, from garrison to camp and from one desultory duty to another as well as the circumscribed means of a subaltern officer, prevented him giving that undeviating attention to his favourite pursuit it demanded. It was not until his return from the Ceylon expedition in 1796, that accident rather than design gave a fresh impulse to the prosecution of his purpose of collecting manuscripts and information bearing on the Literature and History of India.

Col. MACKENZIE'S plans, the impediments, difficulties and discouragements he had to encounter, and the means used for prosecuting his researches with success are so fully stated, in his own words, in the INTRODUCTION that it is not necessary to refer to them here. Suffice it to note that he possessed favorable opportunities for furthering his wishes by the appointments he then held in the Survey Department. From 1796 to 1806 he was employed in the investigation of the Geography of the Deccan and in mapping the country ; and on the completion of this work, he was appointed Surveyor-General of Madras. In 1811, he accompanied the military expedition to Java, where also he was active in collecting manuscripts and in contributing to a journal of Transactions published by the Batavian Society. In 1817 or 1818, the Colonel was appointed Surveyor-General of India.

Col. MACKENZIE left Madras to take up his appointment at Calcutta with his literary and antiquarian collections and with the principal natives employed by him in arranging and translating them, intending there, to prepare a Catalogue Raisonné of the whole and to give the translated materials such form as would facilitate their publication. The work was impeded by the death of several of his native Assistants and the illness of others. Meanwhile his friend, Sir ALEX. JOHNSTON, was busy pressing on the Chairman of the Court of Directors the advantages that would accrue to Oriental History and Literature if Col. MACKENZIE were permitted to return to England on leave in order that he might, with the assistance of the savants of Europe, arrange his valuable materials. But in this, both Sir ALEX. and the Colonel were disappointed. Before the matter could be finally arranged, Col. MACKENZIE died at Bengal in 1821 in the sixty-eighth year of his age, leaving untouched his Catalogue Raisonné, which advancing age, failing health, want of leisure and other impediments, prevented him from preparing.

In the course of his enquiries and during the formation of the collection, Col. MACKENZIE, however contributed from time to time several articles to the leading periodicals of the day devoted to oriental subjects. These are specified at page 8 of the INTRODUCTION, to which the reader is referred for particulars. In a literary way he also helped Col. WILKS in his History of Mysore by placing at his disposal several valuable papers on particular periods of history, written specially for his aid and information in arranging the materials for that valuable work. He also appears to have sent home to England, presumably to the Court of Directors of the East India Company, prior to his proceeding to Calcutta, seven folio volumes of materials relating to the geography and history of the country with general and provincial maps. These literary productions may seem to bear a small proportion to a whole life devoted to similar enquiries, but at all events they shew how very much valuable and interesting information may be gathered from the MACKENZIE'S Manuscripts. "It was the character of Col. MACKENZIE," says Sir ALEX. JOHNSTON, "to be diffident of sending anything forth to the world whilst there seemed to be any part of the subject susceptible of more complete elucidation. He was therefore chiefly employed in collecting materials for future works" rather than in prematurely arranging for publication fragmentary papers.

A very large portion of his collection was gathered together personally by Col. MACKENZIE himself during his visits on survey duty to all the most remarkable places between Cape Comorin and the Kistna in Southern India. The whole expenses incurred by that gentleman in this undertaking is vouched by Sir ALEXANDER to have amounted to upwards of 15,000£.

At the suggestion of Sir ALEX. JOHNSTON, and with the sanction of the Court of Directors, the MARQUIS OF HASTINGS, then Governor-General of India, purchased the collection on behalf of the E. I. Company from the widow of the deceased for 10,000£. The circumstances under which Professor WILSON offered to catalogue this collection, and the nature and object of his task are best learnt from his own INTRODUCTION which follows. It exhibits a luminous though brief view of the chief results of the collection and the degree in which it may be expected to illustrate the Literature, Religion and History of Southern India. His catalogue, printed at Calcutta, was published in 1828 and evidences a scholar-like pains-taking execution of the work.

A list of the collections made by Col. MACKENZIE is given at page 14. It embraces works or parts of works on Religion, History, Biography, Geography, Medicine, Literature and Science, Ancient Inscriptions, Plans, Drawings, Coins, Images and Antiquities, (vases, statues, beads, seals, rings, &c.,) in no fewer than fourteen languages and sixteen different characters. A large portion of this collection,—the Sanskrit, Arabic, Persian, Javanese and Burman books with the Plans, Coins, Images, Sculptures, &c., as well as several volumes of manuscript translations were sent to England in three separate batches in 1823 and 1825 and on a subsequent date. The whole of the books and tracts in the languages of Southern India and the Inscriptions were lodged in the Madras College Library in 1828. These latter, of which a classified list is given below, were for the most part palm leaves, and many of them in duplicate and triplicate.

IN TAMIL, there were 192 manuscripts comprehending the following subjects :—

Pauranic and Legendary History	44
Local History and Biography	39
Plays, Tales, Poems, &c., including religious and ethical compositions	72
Philology	10
Astronomy and Astrology	14
Medicine	10
Arts	3

IN TELUGU, 156 manuscripts :—

Pauranic and Legendary Literature	36
Local History, Biography, &c.	23
Poetry, Plays, Tales, &c.	82
Philology,	9
Astrology, Medicine and Mechanics	6

IN HALA KANARA, 99 manuscripts :—

Pauranic and Legendary History and Biography	48
Local History and Biography	17

- Tales, Poems, Ethical and Religious compositions, &c. 18
- Philology, Astrology, Medicine, &c. 16
- In CANARA, 31 Documents of a miscellaneous character.
- In MALAYALIM, 6 do. do.
- In MAHRATTA, 12 do. do.
- In URIYA or ORISSA, 23 do. do.
- In HINDI, 12 do. do.
- JAIN LITERATURE.—Mr. Wilson's catalogue mentions 44 MSS; but only those in the Hala Kanara and Tamil were received. They number more than one-half.
- LOCAL TRACTS, 255, in number. These consist of short accounts of particular places, remarkable buildings, local traditions and particular usages, prepared in general expressly for Col. MACKENZIE by his native agents or obtained by them during their excursions. They are in Tamil, Telugu, Canarese, Mahratta, &c.
- INSCRIPTIONS. These form the most laborious and, in Mr. WILSON's estimation, probable the most valuable portion of the whole collection. They are contained in 3 folio volumes and numbers upwards of 8000.

Two years later, in March 1830, the Committee of the Madras Literary Society and Auxiliary of the Royal Asiatic Society asked Government to transfer to them the MACKENZIE Collection, then lying "in a confused and utterly useless state, in the College Library." They hoped to extract much interesting and valuable information from "this mass of papers." But, in consequence of their limited finances, they proposed to select only one or two subjects to begin with, confining attention in the first instance to the Jain Literature and the Inscriptions in general. This idea of utilizing the manuscripts originated with one of Col. MACKENZIE's Pandits, C. VENCATA LUCHMIAH, who offered to continue the prosecution of his master's unfinished researches, and to examine and arrange such papers as were collected by him.* The Government accorded their sanction to the Literary Society's arrangement ; but there is nothing to shew that it was followed with any practical results. Some few articles based on these MSS. occasionally appeared in the Madras Journal of Literature and Science; but they do not seem to have had any connection with the plans and designs of that learned body.

Meanwhile, in England, Captain HARKNESS, Secretary to the Royal Asiatic Society, undertook to translate and digest a portion of the manuscripts sent to the East India House ; and M. JACQET of Paris expressed his intention to include in his Corpus Inscriptorium, upon which he was then busily engaged, all the Inscriptions belonging to the MACKENZIE'S Collection.†

Col. MARK WILKS was largely indebted to the MACKENZIE Collection for authentic information which he found useful in preparing his History of Mysore for the Press. Several of the earlier chapters of his work were chiefly compiled from materials placed at his disposal by Col. MACKENZIE. This he gracefully acknowledges in his preface to the book and bears unqualified testimony to the high value of the collection as embracing "all that is necessary to illustrate the antiquities, the civil, military and religious institutions and ancient history of Southern India." To the "grants" and Inscriptions Col. WILKS refers as ancient documents of a singularly curious texture, almost always fixing the chronology and frequently unfolding the genealogy and military history of the donor and of his ancestors with all that is remarkable in their civil institutions or religious reforms.

* Letter from Secretary, Asiatic Department, M. L. S. and A. R. A. Society to Government, dated 9th March, 1830.

For six years more the Madras portion of the Manuscripts remained unutilized in the archives of the Madras Literary Society as it had previously in the College Library. In June 1836, Pandit C. VENKATA LUCHMIAH again revived the subject of his being permitted to continue Col. MACKENZIE's researches throughout this Presidency with the aid of Government. His offer was submitted by the Madras Government to the Supreme Government, now designated the Government of India; and that authority referred it for the opinion of the Calcutta Auxiliary of the Royal Asiatic Society. The Committee of Papers of that Association intimated that they had no faith in LUCHMIAH's pretensions or qualifications for the work, and strongly urged the propriety of securing the services of the Rev. WILLIAM TAYLOR,* an oriental scholar of some note, since deceased, "for the thorough examination of the MACKENZIE records." They also recommended the publication of such papers as "he might select as the most valuable either in the elucidation of History or Native Science, Philosophy, Religion, Customs, &c." Mr. TAYLOR having expressed his willingness to undertake the work, was granted by Government an allowance of Rs. 400 per mensem for 18 months as remuneration to himself and for the maintenance of a small establishment of Assistants.

Mr. TAYLOR commenced his undertaking in about July 1837 and completed it in September 1838. The results of his labors were published from time to time in a highly interesting series of five Analytical Reports, in the Madras Journal of Literature and Science, vols. 7 to 10. On examination, Mr. TAYLOR found that some papers and portions of papers were irrecoverably lost, either by fading of the ink or destruction of materials by insects, and that others were in an advanced stage of decay while some few were cut out and taken away in whole or in part.* So far as possible he commenced the work of restoration at his own cost by having what could be retranscribed on royal demy writing paper, and handsomely bound in five folio volumes. One main object of the examination and collation of the MACKENZIE Manuscripts was to ascertain their precise nature and value in throwing light on oriental history, literature, mythology, fiction and romance, and to select for translation and publication the more important papers. No action appears to have been taken on these reports, and the MACKENZIE Manuscripts were again allowed to lapse into obscurity, a neglect which, considering the vast store of curious and interesting matter they were known to contain, reflects discredit on the learned Society that promised to apply their "whole resources" in utilizing them, and on a Government that had spent a lakh of rupees in purchasing a mass of records that were once deemed an object of high and national importance.

* See Men whom India has known, Supplement, p. 92.

In 1858, or 20 years later, the "MACKENZIE Collections" again came before the public in connection with the "East India House" and "BROWNE's Manuscripts," the collection having been meanwhile, in 1847, retransferred to the "College Library." It then formed the third volume of A Catalogue Raisonné of Oriental Manuscripts in the Library of the (late) College, Fort St. George, in charge of the Board of Examiners, by the Rev. WILLIAM TAYLOR." This catalogue was prepared under the orders of the Government of Madras and with the sanction of the Court of Directors of the E. I. Company. It contains a classified and a fuller epitome of the collection than that originally prepared by Mr. TAYLOR, and is valuable as shewing the materials available for utilization.

Mr. WALTER ELLIOT, late a member of the Madras Government, on this occasion renewed the proposal for the collation, translation and printing of those papers that might be deemed worthy of such distinction ; but the Court of Directors directed that no steps should be taken to this end without a reference to them. Since then the Government of India has passed from the E. I. Company to Her Majesty the Queen Empress, and after the lapse of about half a century, the question, how shall this magnificent collection be turned to the best account, still remains unsolved. Northern India has its "Bibliotheca Indica ;" but the literature of Southern India, containing a mine hitherto almost unexplored out of India and affording ample material for speculation and research by the literati of Europe, remains unnoticed. The old authors, whose writings are more curious than useful, do not perhaps suit the matter-of-fact tastes and habits of the present generation, yet still the utilization of a collection of such considerable value and extent as the Government Oriental Manuscripts, is well worthy the patronage of a liberal and enlightened Government. The subject of ancient manuscripts is now again attracting the attention of the authorities, and it is possible that in connection with this movement, something may be done to rescue from oblivion a collection calculated to throw much light on historical researches relating to India.

The Mackenzie Collection is now incorporated in the Government Oriental Manuscripts Library, of which Dr. GUSTAV OPPERT, the Professor of Sanskrit at the Presidency College, is the Curator. The whole collection, which was formerly lying about on wooden benches in the open air and even exposed to the danger of being stolen, has, by Professor OPPERT, been arranged and deposited in 20 teakwood glass cases. The whole collection amounts to about 8000 MSS., but the number of works is larger, as in one cadgan book there are often many different writings. The Library is now open to the public on all week days, and is much consulted especially by native scholars.

A fuller and more complete sketch of Col. MACKENZIE's literary life and labors will be found in a biographical notice contributed by Sir Alex. JOHNSTON to the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, London, vol. I, p. 333, which was extracted into the Madras Journal of Literature and Science, vol. II, pp. 262 and 354. "Men whom India has known" has also an interesting notice of the Colonel.

INTRODUCTION.

SEVERAL years have elapsed since the attention of oriental enquirers was attracted to the existence of an extensive Collection of literary materials, relating to the Antiquities of the South of India, accumulated by Col. Colin Mackenzie, the Surveyor-General of India, then recently deceased. An account of that Collection is now submitted to the Public. Before proceeding however to particularise the details, it may facilitate an appreciation of their value, to advert to the circumstances under which the materials were collected, and those which have led to their present description, the different divisions under which they have been arranged, and the light which they reflect upon the Languages and Literature, and the Religious and Political Revolutions of the South of India.

A Letter addressed by Col. Mackenzie to Sir Alexander Johnston in 1817, conveys an authentic view of the motives which led him to form the Collection, and the means which enabled him to prosecute his researches with success. His own words will best be employed to explain as much as is necessary to our purpose. They give also a not uninteresting outline of the Colonel's Indian Career.

“The first thirteen years of my life in India, may be fairly considered as of little moment to the objects pursued latterly in collecting observations and notices of Hindoo manners, of Geography, and of History; with every attachment to this pursuit, to which my attention was directed before I left England; and not devoid of opportunities in India; yet the circumscribed means of a Subaltern Officer, a limited knowledge of men in power or office, and the necessity of prompt attention to military and professional duties, could not admit of that undeviating attention, which is so necessary to the success of any pursuit, at all times, much more so to what must be extracted from the various languages, dialects and characters of the Peninsula of India.

“ In particular, a knowledge of the native languages, so essentially requisite, could never be regularly cultivated, in consequence of the frequent changes and removals from province to province; from garrison to camp, and from one desultory duty to another. Those encouragements to study the languages of the vast countries, that have come under our domination since my arrival in India, were reserved for more happy times and for those, who are more fortunate in having leisure for their cultivation; from the evils of famine, penury and war, the land was then slowly emerging; and long struggling under the miseries of bad management, before the immediate administration of the South came under the benign influence of the British Government.

“ In the whole of this period, in which I have marched or wandered, over most of the provinces south of the Kistna, I look back with regret to objects now known to exist, that could have been then examined; and to traces of customs and of institutions that could have been explained, had time or means admitted of the enquiry.

“ It was only after my return from the expedition to Ceylon in 1796, that accident rather than design, though ever searching for lights that were denied to my situation, threw in my way, those means that I have since unceasingly pursued (not without some success I hope) of penetrating beyond the common surface of the Antiquities, the History and the Institutions of the south of India.

“ The connexion then formed with one person, a native and a Bramin,* was the first step of my introduction into the portal

* The lamented C. V. Boria, a Bramin, then almost a youth, of the quickest genius and disposition, possessing that conciliatory turn of mind that soon reconciled all sects and all tribes to the course of enquiry, followed with these surveys. After seven years' service he was suddenly taken off from these labours, but not before he had formed his younger brother and several other useful persons, of all castes, Bramin, Jain and Malabars, to the investigations that have since been satisfactorily followed.

of Indian knowledge ; devoid of any knowledge of the languages myself, I owe to the happy genius of this individual, the encouragement and the means of obtaining what I so long sought. In the following papers you will observe fifteen different dialects, and twenty-four characters were necessary for this purpose. On the reduction of Seringapatam, in 1799, not one of our people could translate from the Canarese alone. At present we have these translations made not only from the modern characters ; but the more obscure and almost obsolete characters of the Sassanums (or Inscriptions) in Canarese and in Tamul ; besides what have been done from the Sanscrit, of which in my first years in India, I could scarcely obtain any information. From the moment the talents of the lamented Boria were applied, a new avenue to Hindoo knowledge was opened, and though I was deprived of him at an early age, his example and instructions were so happily followed up by his brethren and disciples, that an establishment was gradually formed, by which the whole of our provinces might be gradually analized on the method thus fortuitously begun and successfully followed so far. Of the claims of these individuals and the superior merits of some, a special representation has laid before this government since 26th September last unanswered. How they are to be disposed of on my departure for Bengal is still in doubt. The attachment existing, and increased in 18 to 20 years, leaves me no room to doubt but some will adhere to my fortune ; but it is to be confessed it is at some hazard in again exchanging a state of moderate comfort with their families for a state of dependance in a distant country ; and this uncertainty of an adequate provision for these useful people renders my situation at present more uncomfortable than I wish to say.

“ For these thirteen years, therefore, there is little to shew besides the Journal and Notes of an Officer employed in all the campaigns of the time ; first towards the close of the war of 1783 in the provinces of Coimbatour and Dindigul, and afterwards in professional duties in the provinces of Madras, Nellore and Guntour, throughout the whole of the war from 1790 to 1792 in Mysore, and in the countries ceded to the Nizam by the peace of 1792, and from that period engaged in the first attempts to methodize and embody the geography of the Deckan, attempts that were unfortunately thwarted or impeded by measures not necessary here to detail; the voyage and campaign in Ceylon may be noticed as introductory to part of what followed, on my return to resume the geography of Deckan.

“Some voluntary efforts for these purposes, had at last excited the notice of a few friends in the field in the campaigns in Mysore, too partial perhaps to my slender talents and ardor for the pursuit, and in 1792, after the peace of Seringapatam, I was sent a subaltern from the army in Mysore, by the desire of the late revered Lord Cornwallis, with the small detachment at first employed in the Nizam’s dominions for the purpose of acquiring some information of the geography of these countries, and of the relative boundaries of the several States, then assuming a new form and new limits.

“From 1792 to 1799, it were tedious to relate the difficulties, the accidents and the discouragement that impeded the progress of this design. The slender means allotted from the necessity of a rigid, no doubt just, economy; the doubts and the hindrance ever attendant on new attempts; difficulties arising from the nature of the climate of the country, of the government; from conflicting interests, and passions and prejudices difficult to contend with, and unpleasant to recollect.

“In the year 1796, a general Map of the Nizam’s dominions was submitted to Government for the first time, compiled and digested from various materials of various authority described in a Memoir that accompanied; and designed rather as a specimen for future corrections, and shewing what was wanting as much as what was done. It had however the use of bringing the subject into one point of view; further enquiry improved its supplements in 1798 and 99, and some encouragement was then held forth that induced perseverance, tho’ little effectual assistance was given. My removal* from any share in the direction of

* It is too late now to apply a remedy and too painful to refer to original documents to show how the most public spirited plausible reasons may be advanced for measures most absurd and hurtful to the interests of the public and of science; otherwise this might be produced as an additional

the Deckan surveys in 1806, put a stop to the further improvement of this Map ; yet the subject has not been neglected and it is hoped may one day be resumed on the revival of the materials since collected, though on a more circumscribed scale than what was once intended.

“ In returning to Hydrabad in 1798, for the third time, to resume the investigation of Deckan Geography, measures were proposed, and in part methodized for analyzing the whole Deckan ; and before 1799, considerable help was attained by obtaining a copy of the regular official Dufter of the Deckan in its provincial and even minuter divisions which has been since translated from the Persian ; as well as certain MSS. of authority which were proposed as the basis of the Plan to be followed in the enquiry and description. The Deckan was in fact then a terra incognita of which no authentic evidence existed, excepting in some uncertain notices and mutilated sketches of the marches of Bussy ; and in the travels of Tavernier and Thevenot ; which convey but little satisfaction* to the philosophical accuracy of modern times.

“ This plan in its bud was nearly overset by the new war with Tippoo ; it may be satisfactory however to know that the attempts then made were not without use both in a military light, (as described more fully in official reports) and in anticipating measures that have since been or may be still advantageously followed in arranging the History, Antiquities and Statistics of that interesting country.

“ After the reduction of Mysore in 1799, and in the arrangements that followed, I was employed in assisting the Commis-instance of the erroneous measures in those times. All that had been intended and partly executed by the measures encouraged in the Government of Lord Cornwallis and Wellesley was nearly overset, and almost lost sight of ever since, and though our arms now occupy positions in the most distant parts of the Deckan, no systematic plan is yet adopted for concentrating the results and combinations of our marches and expensive surveys in that country into a more correct General Map.

sioners with geographical information, to promote the arrangement and a knowledge of the limits of the subject of the partition. On my return to Madras the Governor-General, the Earl of Mornington, being justly of opinion, that a more complete knowledge of these countries was indispensibly necessary for the information of Government, was pleased in the handsomest manner, without solicitation or any personal knowledge, to appoint me to survey Mysore, assisted by an establishment suited rather to an economical scale of expenditure than to so extensive an undertaking; but to be carried through a country yet so little known, that the position of some of the provinces ceded by the treaty of partition could not be ascertained till this survey was advanced under peculiar circumstances of embarrassment. For instance—Holall ceded to the Marattas, Goodicotta on the N. W. of Chitteldroog mistaken for a small Fort North of Colar on the east of Mysore, and many other instances, whence some knowledge of the country rendered a survey indispensable.

“ Consonant to my original ideas, I considered this occasion favorable for arranging a plan of survey embracing the statistics and history of the country as well as of its geography; and submitted a plan for this purpose which was approved of by this Government. Three assistants, and a naturalist were then for the first time attached to me, yet this moderate establishment was immediately after disapproved of in England, and a design that originated in the most enlightened principle, was nearly crushed by the rigorous application of orders too hastily issued and received in India in the end of 1801, when I had, at very considerable hazard of my health, just completed the survey of the northern and eastern frontier of Mysore.

“ How far the idea suggested was fulfilled it is not for me to say; from adverse circumstances one part was nearly defeated; and the Natural History was never analyzed in the manner I proposed and expected in concert with the survey; the suspense I was placed in from the reduction of the slender stipend allotted to myself, both for salary and to provide for increasing contingencies, was not only sufficiently mortifying, but was aggravated by the overthrow of the establishment first arranged for the work, while other branches* were favored, in the application of the Director's orders. The effects of these measures on the public mind and even on my assistants; contributed to paralyze every effort for its completion; but notwithstanding these difficulties the success attending the first researches, and a conviction of its utility induced me to persevere till 1807. The geography of the province of Mysore was literally completed in the minutest degree of 40,000 square miles of territory; considerable materials were acquired of its statistics and of its history; and the basis laid for obtaining that of the Peninsula on a plan undeviatingly followed up ever since.

“ Much of the materials collected on this occasion were transmitted home in 7 folio volumes with general and provincial Maps; but it is proper to observe that still more considerable materials for the history of the south are in reserve, not literally belonging to the Mysore survey, though springing from the same.

“ It is also proper to notice that in the course of these investigations, and notwithstanding the embarrassments of this work, the first lights were thrown on the history of the country below the Ghats, which have been since enlarged by materials constantly increasing; and confirming the information acquired in the upper country. Among various interesting subjects may be mentioned,

1. The discovery of the Jain religion and philosophy and its distinction from that of the Boudh.

2. The ancient different sects of religion in this country and their subdivisions, the Lingarunt, the Saivam, Pandarum, Mutts, &c., &c.

3. The nature and use of the Sassanum and inscriptions on stone and copper; and their utility in throwing light on the important subject of Hindoo tenures; confirmed by upwards of 3,000 authentic inscriptions, collected since 1800.

* In the Regulations of Survey of October 1810, no less than 20 Military Officers were attached to the Quarter Master General, exclusive of the Military Institution, and the establishment of Native Surveyors under the Revenue Department. The results arising from those Departments compared with that of the Mysore survey, would afford the most just means of judging of the utility of either of the works.

4. The design and nature of the monumental stones and trophies found in various parts of the country from Cape Comorin to Delhi, called Veeracul and Maastie cul, which illustrate the ancient customs of the early inhabitants and perhaps of the early western nations.

5. The sepulchral Tumuli, Mounds and Barrows of the early tribes, similar to those found throughout the continent of Asia and of Europe; illustrated by drawings, and various other notices of antiquities and institutions."

It may be here observed that the results of a few of these enquiries were from time to time communicated to the public, and in the interval described, the following papers from the pen of Col. Mackenzie were printed:

1. Account of the construction of a Map of the Road from Nellore to Ongole.
Dalrymple's Oriental Repertory, vol. I.
2. Description of the route from Ongole to Innaconda and Belamconda with a map. Ibid.
3. Account of the Kommam tank. Ibid., vol. II.
4. Description of the source of the Pennar River Ibid.
5. Sketch of the life of Hyder Ali Khan.
Asiatic Annual Register, 1804.
6. History of the Anagundi or Vijaya Nagar Rajas. Ibid.
7. History of the Rajas of Anagundi from enquiries made on the spot. Ibid.
8. Account of the Marda Gooroos. Ibid.
9. Account of the Batta Rajas Ibid.
10. Description of the Temple at Sri Sailam, Asiatic Researches, vol. V.
11. Remarks on some Antiquities on the West and South Coasts of Ceylon. Ibid., vol. VI.
12. Extracts from Journals descriptive of Jain Monuments and Establishments in the South of India. Ibid., vol. IX.

There are also translations of several Inscriptions in the same volume, furnished by Col. Mackenzie.

Of these, the papers relating to the Jains were the most novel and important, and first brought to notice the existence of a Sect, which is very extensively dispersed throughout India, and includes a considerable portion of its most respectable and opulent natives.

After the conclusion of the Mysore survey, Col. Mackenzie was appointed Surveyor-General at Madras, but had scarcely time to take charge of his office, when he was called away to accompany the expedition to Java in 1811. After the military objects of the expedition had been effected, his attention was directed to his favorite pursuits, and many books and documents were collected. He also took a lively interest in the Batavian Society, and contributed some valuable notices to the pages of its Transaction. A Journal of a visit to the Ruins at Brambanam has been thence transferred to a London journal. Colonel Mackenzie adverts also in the letter to Sir A. Johnston to detailed reports submitted by him to the Governments of India, copies of which have not been found amongst his papers, nor, as he observes, were they placed upon record at the Bengal Presidency.

After resuming charge of the office of Surveyor-General at Madras in 1815, Col. Mackenzie was enabled to superintend for a short time the continuance of a survey of the Ceded Districts, instituted upon his recommendation in 1809, and prosecuted upon the same plan as that of Mysore—adding an extent of 30,000 square miles to the 40,000 previously laid down. The results of these surveys have been published in Arrowsmith's Atlas of the South of India. The collection of books, papers and inscriptions went hand in hand with the survey—nor was this part of the Peninsula the only field from which similar gleanings were made—they were collected throughout the whole of the Provinces subject to the Presidency of Fort St. George by natives trained for the purpose. These operations were not of much longer continuance, for shortly after his return, Col. Mackenzie was appointed Surveyor-General of all India, and quitted Madras for Calcutta. His literary and antiquarian collections were brought round from the former Presidency, and the principal natives employed in arranging and translating them came also to Calcutta. Colonel Mackenzie's intentions in consequence, are thus explained in the letter which has been quoted.

“I will only further just notice the effect of this removal on the enquiries and Collection here described. The people roared by me for several years, being natives of the coast or the southern provinces, and almost as great strangers to Bengal and Hindoostan as Europeans, their removal to Calcutta is either impracticable; or where a few, from personal attachment (as my head Brahmin, Jain translator and others) are willing to give this last proof of their fidelity, attended with considerable expense; and without that assistance, most of what I had proposed to condense and translate from the originals in the languages of this country, could not be conveniently or at all, effected at Calcutta.

“I mean however to attempt it, and hope in this stage, preparatory to my return to Europe to effect a condensed view of the whole Collection, a Catalogue Raisonné of the native manuscripts and books, &c., and to give the translated materials such form, as may facilitate the production of some parts should they ever appear to the public; at least by persons better qualified, if the grateful task be not permitted to my years or to my state of health.”

The attempt thus announced was never made. Much delay was necessarily occasioned by the change of residence and charge of a new office. Several of the natives died, and the survivors were rendered ineffective by sickness. The purposes of Col. Mackenzie were finally disappointed by his indisposition and death in 1821.

The preceding observations will afford a general notion of the manner in which the Collections of Col. Mackenzie were accumulated.

Through a considerable part of his career he may be said to have collected them in person, visiting in the course of his surveying operations almost all the remarkable places between the Krishna and Cape Comorin, and being accompanied in his journies by his native assistants, who were employed to take copies of all inscriptions, and obtain from the Brahmans of the temples, or learned men in the towns or villages, copies of all records in their possession, or original statements of local traditions. When not himself in the field, Col. Mackenzie was accustomed to detach his principal native agents into different districts to prosecute similar enquiries, furnishing during their absence either in English or in their own language to be subsequently translated, reports of their progress. Their personal expences were in general defrayed by the department to which they were attached, but all extra expenditure, and the cost of all purchases, were defrayed by Col. Mackenzie himself. The outlay thus incurred probably exceeded a lac of rupees, which sum has been liberally sanctioned by the Court of Directors for the purchase of the documents.

By the means thus described a collection was formed at a considerable cost of time, labour and expence, which no individual exertions have ever before accumulated, or probably will again assemble. Its composition is of course very miscellaneous, and its value with respect to Indian history and statistics remains to be ascertained, the collector himself having done little or nothing towards a verification of its results. This indeed cannot be successfully attempted by any single individual, as a familiarity with fourteen languages and sixteen characters can scarcely be expected, from any one person. It is the more to be regretted, that Col. Mackenzie did not live to execute some connected view of the principal facts his collection furnishes, whilst he commanded the aid of the agents by whom it was formed, who under his superintendence had learned to feel a lively interest in their task, who had acquired a knowledge of the leading results which it were vain to look for in any other natives, and who are now for the greater, and most valuable part, dead or dispersed.

In the absence of any account prepared by the collector, the following catalogue may be received as an attempt to convey some accurate notion of the nature of the collection, and a short view of some of the principal conclusions that may be derived from its contents. It will be necessary however in the first place to explain the circumstances under which the catalogue has been prepared, that no censure may attach to the compiler for not performing more than he has endeavoured to accomplish, or for undertaking a task to which he acknowledges he brings inferior qualifications, the languages of the South of India never having been the objects of his studies.

The officer who succeeded Col. Mackenzie as Surveyor-General, professing no acquaintance with the subject of Col. Mackenzie's antiquarian collections, and expressing his wish to be relieved of all charge of the establishment connected with them, it became a matter of some perplexity how it should be disposed of, in contemplation of its becoming the property of the Company. As no other person in Calcutta, was inclined to take any trouble with such a collection, or perhaps so well fitted for the task, as myself, I offered my services to the Supreme Government to examine and report upon the state of the materials. The offer was accepted, and the manuscripts and other articles of the collection were transferred to my charge. I then learned that the native agents had set to work upon the Colonel's death to make short catalogues of the articles and books accumulated, and these were completed under my supervision. In the course of examining the lists as well as I could, I found them not only too concise to be satisfactory, but in many cases evidently erroneous, and altogether devoid of classification or arrangement. I therefore on submitting them to the Government suggested the necessity of a careful revision, and the advantage that might be derived from the publication of the result, which suggestions were favorably received, and the present catalogue has in consequence been prepared.

The various languages of the Peninsula being unknown to me except as far as connected with Sanscrit, I had no other mode of checking the accuracy of the natives employed in cataloguing the manuscripts, than to direct the preparation by them of detailed indices of the works in each dialect. These indices were accordingly compiled and translated, and their results again compressed into the form in which they will be found in the following pages, the accuracy being verified by such collateral information as was derivable from some of the translated papers in the collection, or from printed works of an authentic character. Although therefore some of the details may be occasionally erroneous, I have every reason to hope that the account of those books which I could not personally verify by perusal, will be generally correct, and worthy of some confidence.

The collection, as here detailed, consists chiefly of Manuscripts in the original languages, constituting what may be regarded as the literature of the South of India. The subject is hitherto almost unknown to the literature of Europe, and from its novelty if not from its importance, is likely to be thought entitled to special attention. The description of the Manuscripts constitutes therefore the body of the present publication, and that of the other articles is thrown into an Appendix. The first division of the Appendix is that of Local Tracts, short accounts in the languages of the Dekhin of particular places, remarkable buildings, local traditions, and peculiar usages prepared in general expressly for Col. Mackenzie by his native agents, or obtained by them on their excursions. A few works occur that properly belong to the literary class, but which escaped attention at the time of arranging the materials. Some of these Local Tracts will be found in an English dress amongst the translations, but the far greater portion are yet to be translated. The Local Tracts are followed by the Inscriptions the collection of which forms the most laborious, and probably the most valuable portion of the whole: very few of them are translated, but the whole of them have been examined, and abstracted, and drawn out in a tabular form, stating the object of the inscription, the date, where found, and in whose reign or by whom inscribed. Of three folio manuscript volumes containing these abstracts, two have been prepared since the death of Col. Mackenzie.

The inscriptions are followed by a list of the translated or extracted English papers which were left bound up in volumes, at Col. Mackenzie's death, and to them succeeds a detail of similar papers, in loose sheets: the value of the latter is much diminished by the very imperfect manner in which most of them have been executed, the English being frequently as unintelligible as the original: with a very few exceptions the translations are the work of natives alone.

It is unnecessary to advert more particularly to the other articles of the Appendix, and it is sufficient to include them in the following enumeration of the contents of the collection, from which a generally correct view of its character and extent may be derived.

We shall now proceed to take a short view of the chief results of this collection, and the degree in which it may be expected to illustrate the Literature, Religion, and History, of a considerable portion of Hindustan.

LITERATURE.

THE first division of the catalogue, the Books in the Sanscrit language, offers little of value. The works are for the most part such as are to be found in great abundance, and in better condition, in other parts of India, and are not recommended by rarity or local peculiarity. In general they are in very bad order, being more or less imperfect, and being rather engraved than written with an iron style upon palm leaves, a mode of writing which even when the letters are blackened by a composition of lamp black and oil is very unfavourable to prompt and easy perusal: a new manuscript of this kind presented for the first time to the most learned Pundit, is decyphered by him slowly and with pain, and the employment of such rude materials is almost as much a hindrance as a help to the dissemination of learning. Another difficulty in the way of the ready perusal of the Sanscrit books is their being written, as will have been seen in the foregoing enumeration, in thirteen different characters.

There is one division of the Sanscrit books, which is in a great degree of local origin and interest, that of the Máhátmyas, the Sthala or local Purānas, the legendary histories of celebrated temples and objects of pilgrimage, and especially of those in the Dekhin, which are exceedingly numerous. These tracts describe the circumstances under which the place originally acquired its sanctity, the period of which is almost always in some former Yuga or great age; the foundation of the first temple or shrine, the different visits paid to it by gods and heroes, its discovery and renovation in the present age, the marvels which have resulted from its worship, and the benefactions made to it by modern sovereigns. In this latter portion some genuine history is occasionally preserved. These legends are professedly sections of some of the Purānas, particularly the Brahmānda and Skānda, but this is a mere fiction, as where the entire Purānas, whence they are said to be extracted exist, these sections or chapters are found to constitute no part of their contents. The Máhátmya is sometimes fully as extensive as the whole Purāna of which it is said to be a part, and the aggregate of those in the Mackenzie collection amounting to a hundred and twenty-two, is infinitely more considerable than that of the eighteen Purānas.

There are also amongst the Sanscrit books a few Cheritras, historical and biographical narratives of some local value. They are however of too marvellous and legendary a complexion to be of much historical importance, although they may furnish some indications of real events.

The catalogue has been classed according to the languages in which the books are written, but one exception has been made to this order, and the division subsequent to the Sanscrit manuscripts is that of the Literature of the Jains—most of these manuscripts are Sanscrit compositions, but a few are written in the dialects of the Peninsula. As forming a distinct class however it was thought better to place them under a common head.

The books thus collected are, with one or two exceptions, now for the first time offered to the enquiries of European readers. Colonel Mackenzie as has been mentioned, as the merit of originally noticing and describing the peculiar tenets of this numerous division of the natives of India, deriving his information from personal intercourse with several well informed members of their community, and visits to some of their principal shrines. The description which he published in the 9th volume of the Asiatic Researches, some notices by Dr. Buchanan in the same place as well as in his travels in Mysore, and the account given in the same volume of the Researches by Mr. Colebrooke of the Jain teachers and some of their peculiar tenets as derivable from their own authorities, furnish the only authentic notices of a sect, which is widely spread through India particularly in the west and south. The catalogue of their books collected by Col. Mackenzie forms therefore a valuable accession to our knowledge of the Jains. The list comprises forty-four different works, of which those styled Puránas are in general of great extent. The character of the legends of which they consist will be readily estimated by the specimens given, from translations found in the collection, and which sufficiently evince the late origin of the sect, in their attempt to improve upon Brahmanical exaggeration, by exaggeration infinitely more extravagant. The Puránas are attributed to Jína Sena Achárya said to be cotemporary with Vikramáditya, but some traditions identify him with Jináchárya who was the Guru or spiritual preceptor of Amoghaversha a Jain prince in the Arcot district in the end of the ninth century, a period at which they may possibly have been compiled—other legendary collections are acknowledged to be of that or of a later date. Besides these, Jain literature comprehend a few books on Medicine, Grammar and Arithmetic, and rituals and treatises on the religious and moral obligations of the sect.

The literature of the Jains is succeeded by the catalogue of books in the Tamul language which may be considered as the most classical of the languages of the peninsula. It is the speech of that part of the south of India known as Drávira, comprising the ancient kingdoms of Ohola, Chera, and Pándya, and now comprehending the districts of South Arcot, Salem, Coimbatour, Kumbhakonam, Tanjore, Trichinapali, Madura, Dindigal, Tinnivelli and great part of Mysur, in all which it is spoken, according to Mr. Babington, by more than five millions of people. According to that gentleman, and to the late Mr. Ellis it is a language not derived from Sanscrit, but of independent origin. Their remarks are as follows :

“ It (Tamul) is not derived from any language at present in existence, and is either itself the parent of the Telugu, Malayalam, and Canarese languages, or what is more probable, has its origin in common with these in some ancient tongue, which is now lost, or only partially preserved in its offspring.

“ In its more primitive words, such as the names of natural objects, the verbs expressive of physical action or passion, the numerals, &c., it is quite unconnected with the Sanscrit, and what it thence so largely borrowed, when the Tamuls, by intercourse with the more enlightened people of the north, began to emerge from barbarity, has reference to the expression of moral sentiments and abstract metaphysical notions, and is chiefly to be found in the colloquial idioms. In this remarkable circumstance, and in the construction of its alphabet, the Tamul differs much from the other languages of the south, which are found to admit the Sanscrit more largely in literary and poetical compositions than in the ordinary dialect of conversation, and which adopt the arrangement of the Sanscrit alphabet with scarcely any variation. The higher dialect of the Tamul on the contrary is almost entirely free from Sanscrit words, and idioms, and the language retains an alphabet which tradition affirms to have heretofore consisted of but sixteen letters, and which so far from resembling the very perfect alphabet of the Sanscrit, wants nearly half its characters, and has several letters of peculiar powers.

“ Neither the Tamul, the Telugu nor any of their cognate dialects are derivations from the Sanscrit. The latter, however it may contribute to their polish, is not necessary to their existence, and they form a distinct family of languages with which the Sanscrit has in a later times especially intermixed; but with which it has no radical connexion.

“ The members constituting the family of languages which may be appropriately called the dialects of Southern India are the high and low Tamul, the Telugu grammatical and vulgar, Carnataka or Oannadi ancient and modern, Malayalma or Ma- layalam, which, after Paulinus a Bartholomeo, may be divided into Sanscrit (Grandonico Malabarica) and common Malayalam, though the former differs from the latter only in introducing Sanscrit terms and forms, in unrestrained profusion; and the Tuluva, the native speech of that part of the country to which in our maps the name of Oanara is confined.

“ Besides these, there are a few other local dialects of the same derivation, such as the Codugu, a variation of the Tuluva spoken in the district of that name called by us Coorg. The Cingalese, Maharashtra and the Oddya, also, though not of the same stock, borrow many of their words and idioms from these tongues. A certain intercommunication of language may indeed always be expected from neighbouring nations however dissimilar in origin, but it is extraordinary that the uncivilised races of the north of India should in this respect bear any resemblance to the Hindus of the south; it is nevertheless the fact, that, if not of the same radical derivation, the language of the mountaineers of Rajamahal abounds in terms common to the Tamul and Telugu.”

The opinions of such competent authorities, cannot be contested, and it must be admitted therefore that the base of the Tamul language has an independent origin. It is also evident from the character of its literature, as shown in the catalogue, as well as from tradition, that it has been independently cultivated under unusual patronage, and has boasted of its own college, established by regal authority at Madura, and a number of able writers from every class of the population.

The tract from which Mr. Ellis's sentiments are cited, is one of three treatises it was his intention to prepare on the Tamul, Telugu, and Malayalam languages. The first, if ever completed has not come to hand, and it is from the second that the passage is extracted.* There still remains therefore much to be explained regarding the history of the Tamul language, and particularly how it happens, that the names of places of note, cities, mountains, rivers, temples, and shrines are Sanscrit, and have been so apparently from a period prior to the Christian era. Cape Comorin or Oomari, Madura, the Kaberis or Kaveri River, the Malaya mountains or Malaylayam and a variety of places in the Peninsula, having been known to the ancients, as they are to the moderns, by appellations of Sanscrit origin. The Tamul language must have been but little cultivated, the districts must have been indifferently civilised, if the natural features of the country had no distinguishing denominations, until the Brahmans or Brahmanical Hindus immigrated from the north, a political event which is recognised by all the traditions of the south of India.

Although therefore we must grant that the Tamul language had an independent origin, we can scarcely suppose with Mr. Ellis that it had an independent literature, prior to the introduction of Sanscrit. Mr. Ellis states that in the Tamul countries there has ever been a contention for pre-eminence of knowledge between the Brahmans and the inferior castes. "When the former established themselves in Southern India they found a native literature already existing, which, though they introduced the language and science of the north, they were compelled during their long contest with the Jains, to cultivate in their own defence." But Sanscrit was less the language of science, than religion, and that the religion of the Peninsula was Hindu, and even sectarial or Saiva at the commencement of the Christian era, we may infer from the name of Captain Komari, (? Cape Comari,) corroborated by Arrian's notice that it derived its name from a goddess whose temple was then in the neighbourhood, as it is still, and who is none other than Kumári, the virgin Durgá, the daughter of Daksha, the yet unwedded bride of Siva. The Sanscrit geographical nomenclature of the Peninsula is, as already observed a further argument in favor of the uncultivated state of the Tamul language when the sacred dialect of the Brahmans was introduced.

That the Tamul language was independently cultivated in a very high degree, and from a period of some remoteness is unquestionable, but it seems to have been most successfully studied at a comparatively modern date, and subsequent to the dissemination of Sanscrit literature. This view of the case would coincide with that already taken of the early rudeness of Tamul, and is warranted by the traditions that relate to the Madura College, and the character of Tamul literature, as it appears from the catalogue. The College was founded it is said by Vamsa-sekhara Pandya Rajah of Madura, for the cultivation of Tamul, and this prince was long subsequent to the prevalence of the Saiva faith, at least according to the same authorities. The legend also asserts that the professors were compelled to admit the Tamul writer named Teruvalluvar into their ranks, and according to Dr. John, his reputed sister Avyar, the moral poetess flourished in the ninth century. Another very eminent Tamul writer Kamban, wrote at the close of the same century, in which, therefore, we may infer the language was most widely and successfully cultivated.

On referring to the list of Tamul books it will be found, that they furnish undeniable proofs of their having been written subsequently to the great body of Sanscrit composition, as they are in fact nothing but translations from Sanscrit. Thus the great work of Kamban is the translation of the Rámdyana. We have also a translation of a great part of the Mahábhárat and in the Máhátmayas, in which Tamul next to Sanscrit abounds, we have numerous legends translated from the Puránas. Many of the poetical and narrative works are translations from the classical dialect. We might also infer the later date, of such Tamul literature as is original, from its being the work in a great measure of Súdras and of Jains, as if it had been part of an attempt to oppose and overthrow the predominance of the Brahmans, to whose priority, therefore, it bears witness.

That part of Tamul literature which is original, consists chiefly of histories more or less legendary of the Ohola, Pándya and Chera countries, of moral and didactic poems, and of treatises on Philology and Medicine ; of the former some are very recent compilations having been prepared for the use of Col. Mackenzie, but others are of reputed antiquity, and the Pandya Rajakal is ascribed to Narakira, Bána, and Kapila, three of the original professors of the Madura College. The moral poems form a curious and interesting division, as being the works of persons of the lowest caste, or Pariars, and yet enjoying the highest estimation. One of the authors, Avyar, a female, has been made known to European readers by the translation of several short didactic works by her, in the seventh volume of the Asiatic Researches. In the following pages will be found an extensive extract from an unfinished translation by the late Mr. Ellis of a celebrated poem of the class, the Koral of Teruvalluvar.

The father of Tamul Grammar and Medicine is said to be the Saint Agastya, who indeed is reputed to have invented the Tamul language. His Grammar is lost, and the Medical works attributed to him are of very doubtful authenticity, but the tradition, coupled with the uniform assertions of Brahmanical works, as the Rámáyana, and the Skanda Purána, and others, that Agastya took up his residence far to the south, renders it very probable that this Saint was instrumental in introducing letters, if not religion, amongst the tribes of Drávira. The substance of his grammar is said to exist in that of his pupil, Tolghappiam, but the work is scarcely intelligible from its brevity and obscurity. In fact almost all the classical writings have ceased to be intelligible to the generality of the people, and the language of Drávira is distinguished into the Shen and Kodan, or high and low Tamul, the latter being that in ordinary use. Both these dialects have been cultivated by European writers, and a grammar of each was composed by the celebrated Missionary Beschi. A new edition of his grammar of the common dialect was republished by the College of Madras, as well as a translation by Mr. Babington of his grammar of the Shen Tamul, and a Tamul and English Grammar has been published in England by Mr. Anderson of the Madras Civil Service. Some Manuscript Dictionaries exist, but none have yet been printed.

The next division of the catalogue consists of manuscripts in the Telugu language, which are scarcely less numerous than those in Tamul, as might be expected from the extent of country in which the dialect is spoken. The limits of its use are thus defined by Mr. Campbell.

“The language is commonly, but improperly, termed by Europeans the Gentoo. It is the Andhra of Sanscrit authors, and, in the country where it is spoken; is known by the name of the Trilinga, Telinga, Telugu, or Tenugu.

“This language is the vernacular dialect of the Hindoos, inhabiting that part of the Indian Peninsula, which, extending from the Dutch settlement of Pulicat on the coast of Coromandel, inland to the vicinity of Bangalore, stretches northwards, along the coast as far as Chicacole, and in the interior to the sources of the Tapti; bounded on the east by the Bay of Bengal, and on the west by an irregular line, passing through the western districts belonging to the Soubahadar of the Deccan, and cutting off the most eastern provinces of the new state of Mysore; a tract including the five northern circars of Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Rajahmundry, Masulipatam, and Guntoor; the greater portion of the Nizam's extensive territories, districts of Cuddapah and Bellari ceded by him to the British; the eastern provinces of Mysore; and the northern portion of the Carnatic: nor is this language unknown in the more southern parts of India, for the descendants of those Telugu families which were deputed by the kings of Vidyanagara to controul their southern conquests, or which occasionally emigrated from Telingana to avoid famine or oppression, are scattered all over the Dravira and Carnataka provinces, and ever retaining the language of their forefathers, have diffused a knowledge of it throughout the Peninsula.”

The Telugu language as has already been shewn, is not a mere derivative from Sanscrit, but has an independent origin and is of independant cultivation. The radicals according to Mr. Ellis are the same as in the cognate dialects of Tamul, Canara, &c., and it differs from them only in the affixes used in the formation of the words from the roots. Although however it is not the offspring of Sanscrit, it is very extensively blended with that language in the states known as Tatsamam or Tatbhavam, the words in the former being the very same, taking only the Tamul inflexions, and those of the latter being derived mediately or immediately from the Sanscrit. (As S. Vanam, T. Vanama a forest and S. Samudra, T. Sandaramu the ocean.) The rest of the language, exclusive of other foreign terms, is the pure native language of the land, and is capable of expressing every mental and bodily operation, every possible relation and existent thing, and with the exception of some religious and technical terms, no word of Sanscrit derivation is necessary to the Telugu.*

Although however the Telugu dialect is not a derivative from Sanscrit, its literature is largely indebted to the writings in that language, and is unquestionably long posterior to their being naturalised in Southern India. The works of highest repute are translations from Sanscrit: the oldest works extant are not of higher antiquity than the end of the twelfth century, whilst its Augustan era, the reign of Krishna Deva Raya of Vijayanagar, dates in the beginning of the sixteenth. The first attempts to reduce the usages of the language to rule, appear to have been made late in the thirteenth century, when Nannya Bhatta, a Brahman of considerable learning, and the translator of the first two books of the Mahábhárat compiled a Telugu Grammar in Sanscrit. Mr. Campbell in the preface of his Grammar states that the most ancient grammarian of whom mention is made in the native books is the sage Kanva, who appears to have been to the people of Andhra or Telingana, what Agastya was to those farther south, their initiator into the mysteries of Hinduism. His works, and those of other writers of supposed antiquity, are not now to be found, and all the treatises of Telugu Grammar at present extant consist of Sanscrit commentaries on the series of Apothegms of Nannapa or Nanniah Bhatt. The age of this last, although conjectured by Mr. Campbell to be remote, is ascertained by documents of which he was not in possession, inscriptions recording grants made by his patron, Vishnu Verddhana Raja of Râjâmahendri, to be as above stated, the close of the thirteenth century. Mr. Campbell admits that the Brahmans were the first who cultivated the Telugu, and brought it under fixed rules, and consequently recognises the prior introduction of Brahmanical literature.

The principal portion of Telugu literature is translation, and we have the Mahábhárat, Vishnu, Varáha, and Bhágavat Puránas besides Pauranic stories in the Máhátmyas, and a number of poems, and tales rendered from Sanscrit into Telugu. At the same time translations or appropriations from Sanscrit form a smaller proportion of Telugu, than of Tamul literature, and we have in the former a number of sectarial legends especially of modern origin, as the acts of the Alwars and Jangamas, or the Vaishnava and Saiva saints of peculiar schisms originating as late as the twelfth century with Rámánuja and Básava. As in Tamul, there are many local Cheritras, historical and biographical compositions, containing amidst much exaggeration and fiction materials for history: another important peculiarity is the insertion of the biographical or genealogical account of the patron of the author in the commencement of most works, sometimes of great minuteness of detail. Telugu literature comprises also a large collection of poems and tales, some of which are original. It is a curious circumstance that no Nátaks or dramatic compositions appear to exist in Telugu whilst in Tamul they are frequent.

Telugu like Tamul comprises a high and low dialect, the former of which is used in writing, the latter in conversation and official business. The language of composition is so different, Mr. Campbell observes, from the colloquial dialect, that even to the learned the use of commentaries is indispensable for the correct understanding of many of their best works.

Telugu has been extensively cultivated of late by our countrymen under the auspices of the College of Madras, and a Grammar and Dictionary Telugu and English compiled by Mr. Campbell have been published at that Presidency, besides various works intended to facilitate its acquisition.

The next division of the catalogue is that of the Karnátar or Kanara manuscripts distinguished into two classes as Hála Kanara and Kanara, the former being the ancient language and that of literary composition, whilst the latter, as in the two preceding dialects, is the language of daily use, and of local tracts of recent preparation.

The limits of the Kanara language are thus described by Col. Wilkes.

“The principality which in later times has been named from the obscure village of Mysore was the south western portion of the ancient Carnatic, frequently named also the country of Kanara, or the country in which the Kanara language was spoken. According to this criterion, the northern limits of that extensive region commenced near the town of Beder in the latitude of $18^{\circ} 45''$ N. about sixty miles N. W. from Hyderabad; following the course of this language to the S. E. it is found to be limited by a waving line which nearly touches Adwanee (Adoni) winds to the westward of Gooti, skirts the town of Anantpur, and passing exactly through Nundidroog, touches the range of ghats; thence pursuing their southern course to the mountainous pass of Gujjelhutti, it continues to follow the abrupt turn caused by the great chasm of the western hills between the towns of Coimbatore, Palatchi, and Palgaut, and sweeping to the north west skirts the edges of the precipitous western Ghats, nearly as far north as the sources of the Kistna; whence following an eastern, and afterwards a north-eastern course, it terminates in rather an abrupt angle near Beder already described as its northern limit."

To these Mr. Mekerrell adds the province denominated Kanara by Europeans, but as observed by Mr. Ellis, the native speech of that province is the Tuluva, a dialect of Kanara, an observation which is also made by Mr. Balbi upon the authority of the Ablé Dubois, although that missionary has been either misunderstood, or has made a strange mistake in the assertion that there is no such country or language as Kanara. It can scarcely be supposed his objection is one of sound only, or that by Kanara he understands something different from Karnata.

The Kanara language is one of the cognate forms of speech of the Peninsula, agreeing in its radicals with the Tamul and Telugu, and differing from them only in its inflexions; a great number of its words are also common to them, and its idiomatic construction is, Mr. Ellis states, not similar only but the same.

Although a division of the catalogue is appropriated to Kanara books it can scarcely be considered as forming a class of literary compositions, as it consists chiefly of local and occasional tracts, many of which were prepared by the direction or for the use of Col. Mackenzie. They differ however in their form from the manuscripts classed originally as local tracts, and have therefore been allowed to retain their place amongst the literary collections. The Hála Kanara is very differently circumstanced, and has an independent and a curious literature.

It is highly probable that the only literature cultivated in the south of the Peninsula for a considerable period was Tamul; the kingdom of the Madura princes, and subsequently that of the Chera dynasty, comprehending Mysore, Bednur, Travancore and Malabar. The cultivation of the local dialect of the Kanara was of subsequent date, but it preceded that of Telugu, and appears to have been patronised by the Balal or Valála dynasty of princes, who reigned at Dwarasamudra the Dolsamander of the Mohammedan historians from the eleventh to the beginning of the fourteenth century. Thus, a grammar of the ancient dialect is said by Mr. Mekerrell to have been compiled by Kesava about seven centuries ago, and we have in the following catalogue the translation of a section of the Jaimini Bharata, dedicated to Viravelála Deva who reigned about the middle of the thirteenth century.

Although the literature of Hála Kanara consists in part of translations from Sanscrit, and consequently like its cognate literature is subsequent to that of the Brahmans, it comprehends a distinct and extensive class of works, which are neither derived from Sanscrit, nor are the work of the Brahmanical caste. They are composed by priests of a particular branch of the Saiva faith, that of the Lingamites, and relate to the actions and doctrines of the founders and teachers of the sect. The schism originated in the twelfth century, and the works connected with it are consequently posterior to that date. Some of them are of great extent, consisting wholly of legends relating to individuals of celebrity in the sect, occasionally interspersed with Pauranic stories, but for the far greater part, original. They are extravagantly absurd, and mostly insipid, but many of them are highly characteristic, and indicate a state of religious practice and belief, almost as foreign to the genuine Hindu creed, as to common sense and sound morality. Besides this branch of indigenous literature, we have also amongst the Hála Kanara books some historical documents, relating chiefly to the Wadeyar kings of Mysore of which Col. Wilkes has made ample use in his history of the south of India, and some original fictions, of an amusing character, in which we may trace many of the marvels that have interested our early years in another hemisphere.

For the country in which the Malayálam language is spoken and the character of the language, it is best to refer to the authority of Mr. Ellis, in the printed but unpublished dissertation on the subject.

“ The country of Malayálam, lying on the west coast of the Indian Peninsula, is, according to the Ceralotpati, divided into four Khandams or provinces. The most northern, commencing at Gocarnam, and extending southward to Perumbuzha near Mangalore, is called Tulurájyam, the kingdom of Tulu; from Perumbuzah to Pudupattanam, near Nileswaram the country is called Cúparajyam: thence to Cannéti near Collam (Quilon), lies Céralárajyam; and thence to Canyacumdri (Cape Comorin) Múshicarajyam. The Malayála or more properly the Malayálma, is at present the language of the two last provinces. It is spoken likewise, in Cupam, but in this province and in Tulu, which constitute the district, on which in recent times the name of Kanara has been imposed, the Tuluva, a distinct dialect, though of the same derivation as the Malayálma, prevails among the aborigines, and a variety of tongues among the Haiga, Concana, Cannadá, Telugu and other tribes who have long colonized the country. There is a certain variation in dialect between the language of Ceralam and Múshicam, and, indeed, in the several Nádus into which they are divided, but none of sufficient importance to require particular notice. In the latter province affairs of state are conducted in the Tamul language, which is there, consequently, much more prevalent than in the former.

“ The Malayálma is like the Coduntamizh, an immediate dialect of the Shen Tamizh: it differs from the parent language generally in the same manner as the Codun, in the pronunciation and idiom, but more especially in retaining terms and forms of the Shen Tamizh, which in the former are obsolete. But its most material variation from its cognate dialects is, that, though deriving from a language superfluously abounding in verbal forms, its verbs are entirely devoid of personal terminations, the person being always indicated by the pronoun. It is this peculiarity which chiefly constitutes the Malayálma a distinct tongue and distinguishes it in a peculiar manner from all other dialects of Tamul origination."

The same authority informs us that the language is written in three characters the Aryam, the Col. Ezhutta and the Vett Ezhutta or as it is termed in the south district, Malayala Tamul. The first is a variety of the Grantham, and expresses the Nagari alphabet, the second is the character in which public grants are drawn up, and the third, the clipped or abbreviated letter, is only a modification of the second; and both differ little from Tamul; except in the mode of joining the vowels to the consonants, and in the manner of writing.

The Malaydlam language as well as those already noticed, borrows largely, particularly in its literary compositions, from Sanscrit and is distinguished into higher and lower dialect. As a member of the Peninsular family it is prior in common use, to Sanscrit, whilst from its greater simplicity it may be inferred more modern than the Shen Tamul, agreeably to the principle that the higher the antiquity the more artificial is the structure of all language, a rule to which Mr. Ellis remarks, there is no reason to believe that the Tamul dialects constitute an exception.

The list of Malaydlam books is of very limited extent, and is almost restricted to the Kerala Utpatti, entire, or in portions. This work, of which some notice appears in the fifth volume of the Researches by Mr. Duncan, gives an account of the origin, history and institutes of Malabar, and seems to serve as a code of laws as well as a historical record. It is ascribed to the celebrated Sankara Acharya but cannot be wholly his work, as it notices events long subsequent to any period that can be assigned for the date of his existence. It is in prose, and the only work of the kind, according to Mr. Ellis. There are some poetical translations from Sanscrit, as the Rámáyana of Ezhutt Atchen, but he states also, that the Malayálam has never been cultivated as an independent literary language.

The history and structure of the Mahratta language have not yet found such able illustrators as the preceding, and its connections and affinities are in a great measure to be ascertained. It is spoken with some variation of dialect through the whole tract of country that is bounded on the north by the Satpoora mountains, and extends from Nandode on the west along those mountains to the Wyne Ganga east of Nagpore, the eastern limit is formed by that river to its junction with the Wurda, whence it may be traced by Manikdroog to Mahood. From the latter place a waving line may be extended to Goa, whilst on the west it is bounded by the ocean. The population of the country is estimated at six millions.

The Marhatta language although spoken by such numbers of people is but imperfectly cultivated by those who use it. It has a grammatical system of inflexion in part peculiar to itself, but offering much that is analogous to the grammar of Hindi. It does not belong to the southern family of dialects, but is a member of a series which extends from Guzerat to the banks of the Jumna across the Doab and along the Ganges to Behar. It is very largely interspersed with Sanscrit, and derives its literature from the same source although not exclusively. The list of books comprises amidst the translations from Sanscrit, some from Hindi, and the local tracts or Bakhirs are rather inaccurately designated, as they comprehend both translations from Sanscrit and original compositions, the latter of a biographical and historical character, and of some value as national records of the important events in which the Marhattas have borne a part since their rise to political power through the enterprising talents of Sivaji. The language is written in two characters, the Balaband and Mor; the former is a very slight modification of Devanagari: the latter is a variety of the same, but more considerably altered. Its introduction is attributed to Hemanda Panth the Guru and minister of Ráma Deva the Raja of Devagiri, Deogerh or Dauletabad. This person being famed for his medical skill was carried off to cure Vibhishana the king of the Rákshasas of Lanka, and on his return brought with him amongst other valuable or curious things, the characters in use amongst the demon race of that island.

The Uriya or Urissa language spoken in the province of Cuttack, extended northwards nearly to Midnapur, and southwards to Kimedi, it is bounded to the east by the sea, but on the west mixes with the Gond at Sonepur : on its southern boundary it adopts Telugu words, and on the north intermingles with Bengali, to which it is closely allied. The difference is rather in accent and intonation and in the use of provincialisms, than in structure or inflexion, and the words are the same. They are indeed as well as in Bengali, Sanscrit, with so very few exceptions, that if the Sanscrit vocables were excluded neither could pretend to be a language. The only basis of either is probably a few terms for the commonest objects of existence, sufficient for a state of absolute barbarism. It does not seem probable that the Uriya has even yet received elementary cultivation, or that it possesses a grammar. From the works found in the collection it appears however to have been cultivated, although not in any important department of literature. The subjects principally treated of are the passionate and mystical worship of Krishna, love tales, and local records. The collection however is not so rich in these last as might have been expected, with reference to their abundance in the province, where according to Mr. Stirling,* every temple has its legend, and every Almanac maker his Pánji and Vansávali, records and genealogies of the princes of the country in the local tongue.

The division entitled Hindi books comprises a variety of dialects, but all with one or two exceptions, modifications of a common language, that of the Hindus of Central India, to which the term Hindi may be therefore legitimately applied. It seems to be a question yet undecided, how far Hindi and Hindustani are distinct forms of speech, and before this can be determined, what constitutes distinct form of speech must be agreed upon : the elements of both tongues are unquestionably the same, and the inflexions of Hindi even in the Briji Bhakha variety, differ in no important respect from those of the Urdú. They are nevertheless mutually unintelligible, and are so far different languages ; the Hindi retaining its own or Sanscrit words, the Hindustani in every possible case substituting for them words of Persian and Arabic origin. Although therefore the frame work is nearly unchanged, it is filled up in a wholly various manner, and for all the ordinary purposes of speech the dialects are distinct, whatever may be their original identity. The Hindi again varies probably in every hundred square miles, and the language of Agra and Ajmer may present wide discrepancies. The differences are however in words, rather than in inflexions, and they are only dialects of a language radically the same ; or perhaps it may be granted individual members of one common family. They are all most copiously intermixed with Sanscrit, and although they may claim a base separate from the superstructure, the former is of the scantiest possible dimensions, and is completely overshadowed by the latter.

The Hindi dialects have a literature of their own, and one of very great interest. The indications of it in the present instance are limited to but few specimens. These are the Chhatra Prakás and Prithwi Raja Oheritra or histories of Ohhatra Sal of Bundelcund, and of the last Hindu king of Delhi Pithoura or Prithwi Raja. Many such works are current amongst the Rajput states, which are not yet known to Europeans. There are also some specimens of Hindi writing in the works of Kesava Dás which are of interest, as shortly preceding the earliest Hindustani compositions, and connecting the foreign with the indigenous literature. There is also a number of works on theological subjects, which seem to have been very popular with the Hindus of Upper Hindustan during the latter reigns of the Mogul princes, and to have given rise to a great variety of sectarial divisions to which these works belong. The list comprises also two or three popular works current amongst the Jains of Upper India, one of which the Kalpa Sutra is in Prakrit.

Estimated as collections of Arabic and Persian literature the works in these languages are of little consideration, but some of them are of local value. Several of the Persian books particularly contain histories of the Mohammedan principalities of the south, which afford ample means of supplying the many deficiencies in the only published account of those states, or Scott's History of the Dekhin.

The Hindustani books or writings in the Urdú language and Persian character, are few and are of no great value. The character of the language in which they are composed has been already adverted to in speaking of the Hindi manuscripts.

We shall now proceed to sketch the second series of results afforded by the collection, or the illustrations they furnish of the course of religious belief in the Peninsula.

RELIGION.

THE books and papers in the Mackenzie Collection do not enable us to trace the state of the Hindu faith in the south of India with much precision, until periods comparatively recent, or subsequent to the tenth century. Previous to that date, the traditions are brief and irregular, but they are sufficient with other sources of information, to enable us to form, with some confidence, a general notion of the introduction and progress of a foreign faith, that of the Brahmans of Northern India, amongst the people of the Dekhin.

All the traditions and records of the Peninsula recognise in every part of it, a period when the natives were not Hindus. What creed they followed does not appear, but it may be reasonably inferred that if any, it was very rude, and such as might be expected from a barbarous people, for the same authorities assert that prior to the introduction of the colonies from the north the inhabitants of the Peninsula were foresters and mountaineers, or goblins and demons.

It may seem something rather extraordinary, but it is the obvious consequence of the oldest traditions, that the extreme south was first colonised, and civilised by a Hindu race, thus indeed furnishing a clue to the real purport of what appears to be the most ancient Sanscrit poem, the Rámáyana. The great object of Ráma's adventures in the Peninsula, during which it is to be observed he encounters no cities, and no tenants of wood and cave, except anchorites, monkies, bears, vultures, imps and demons, is to relieve the holy ascetics from the dread of Rávana and his giants who were not confined to Lanka, but spread through the great Dandaka forest identical with almost the whole of the Peninsula. At the head of the ascetics was Agastya, the first apostle of Dravira, the traditionary author of its language, as well as of its religion, and whose exertions for the dissemination of the Hindu religion were in all probability seconded and rendered successful by Ráma and his army. After the annihilation of the barbarian chiefs, who had resisted the spread of the new doctrines, and the appointment of friendly monarchs both in Kishkindha and in Lanka, Ráma returned to Ayodhya, but the consequence of his incursion was the resort of individuals from his native dominions, pilgrims as it is said, but as it is admitted, eventually colonists. Two of their chiefs Pándya, and Tayaman Nale, both of the agricultural caste and both from Ayodhya, laid the foundations of the Pandyan and Chola kingdoms. At what period this happened, must be matter of mere conjecture. The traditionary accounts refer as usual to dates of extravagant antiquity, and are therefore of no value. That the Madura kingdom existed in the time of Augustus Cæsar we know from Strabo, and the author of the Periplus describes the Malabar coast as subject to the Pandyan king. We find at a little later period in Ptolemy, a vast number of towns and different principalities as well as nomadic races, as if towards the centre of the Peninsula civilization had not wholly extended. Some considerable interval of course must have elapsed for the conversion of a solitary forest into the populous resort of commerce, and we may, speaking very vaguely it must be confessed, allow ten centuries for this revolution. This computation derives some support from the enumeration of seventy-two Pandyan kings preceding Kuna or Guna Pándya whom there is reason to place in the ninth or tenth century of Christianity. That the lists are correct in details is very unlikely; but the total number may possibly not be far from the truth, and it would give nearly fifteen centuries for the duration of the Pandyan kingdom to the date indicated, or the fifth or sixth century before Christ for its origin. Allowing then some centuries for the concentration of straggling colonists into a regularly organised state, the civilization of the south may possibly be extended to ten centuries before Christ, although even that antiquity may be thought too considerable. At any rate the whole body of Peninsular tradition is adverse to the admission of high antiquity, and still more so to the ill-considered theories which have connected the south of India with Egypt in antiquity, civilization and religion.

The introduction of the Hindu religion into Malayalam, or the principal tracts on the Malabar coast appears to have occurred about the same time as into Dravira. The Brahmans were brought it is said by Parasu Rāma from Ahikshetra, which in the Mahābhārata is a city in the north of India. They were called Arya Brahmans from being natives of the holy land Aryabhumi, central or Brahmanical India according to Menu, and we have seen that one of the written characters of Malabar that which is most allied to Nagari, is still termed Aryaka, as probably of Brahmanical introduction. Possibly traces of these events may be indicated by the Ariaca province and Purros Mons of Ptolemy, although the former is rather misplaced, whilst Adisathra is possibly connected with the Ahikshetra of the legend; if there be not indeed some further reference to the local traditions, in the Aii or Aiorum Regio of Ptolemy. Ahi in Sanscrit means a snake, and it was found necessary, it is related, to invite the Brahmans into the country to remove the dread of snakes with which the province, like any other overspread with jungle, abounded. These snakes, were after the coming of the Brahmans, propitiated by worship as the Sthala Devatas the gods of the soil and the Aiorum Regio or Ahi desa, the territory of serpents, would accordingly be an appropriate designation for such a country. At any rate these coincidences are sufficient to shew that Hinduism was established on the Malabar coast anterior to the Christian era.

As we proceed northwards, the traces of the early condition of the religious faith of the people are more indistinct than those hitherto followed, but such as they are, they continue to indicate the comparatively recent origin of the existing creed. According to one tradition, the Brahmans were invited to Srikakola near the mouth of the Krishna by a prince named Sudakshina, and according to another they first came to the south of the Narmada with Uttunga Bhujā the father of Nanda, or were invited by Nanda about the beginning of the Christian era. The account most generally current assigns the introduction of the principal families to Mukunti Pallava prince of Dharanikota in the third century of Christianity. If, as conjectured by Mr. Campbell, Trilinga, the origin as is usually asserted of Telinga is traceable in the Triglyphon or Trilingum of Ptolemy, and Modogalingam of Pliny, we should have the Saiva faith established in the upper and eastern portion of the Peninsula in the beginning of the Christian era. It is scarcely possible however to suppose that the geographical position of the country could be so far erroneous as it must be in this case, the Triglyphon of Ptolemy lying in the situation of Arakan or rather of Tippera. It can scarcely be doubted however that the Hindu faith existed on the Coromandel coast in the days of Ptolemy, as we have in his tables a number of names of places evidently of Sanscrit origin, by their terminating in pura and nagara, synonymes of a city, as Mapura, Minnagara and others.

On the opposite coast, or in Tuluva, and the Concan we have every reason to believe that the Hindu religion was introduced scarcely if at all anterior to the Christian era. The local traditions assert that the first prince who brought the Brahmans into the Concan, was Mayúra verma, one of the Kadamba princes who reigned at Banavási, a name that occurs unaltered in Ptolemy. His son, extended the settlement of the Brahmans into Haiva and Tuluva or Kanara, and the north western districts of Mysore. Mayúra verma appears to have reigned in the third and fourth century after Christ, but it is difficult to suppose that the Hindu faith, had not extended itself earlier to these countries. It does not appear however to have made much progress when Ptolemy's geography was compiled. Except Banavási, few of the ancient names in this part of India bear any resemblance to Sanscrit, and a considerable tract of coast is occupied by what are termed piratical nations, or in other words possibly by inhospitable barbarians. The evidence of classical antiquity is therefore as far as it extends, in favour of the absence of Hinduism in this part of the Peninsula in the first century of the Christian era. That it was near at hand however may be admitted upon the evidence of Banavási, and such other places as bore Hindu appellations, particularly Nasik still called Nasuk or Nasika, so termed according to tradition from Ráma's having here cut off the nose of Surpanakhá the sister of Rávana. Ptolemy's Nasika is indeed north of the Nanaguna or Tapti river whilst the present Nasik is some way to the south, but independently of such errors as are to be expected in ancient geography, it is not impossible that places of reputed sanctity sometimes suffer removal, and that the name and tradition do not always continue attached to the same spot, particularly when the situations are not far removed.

The same appears to be the case with regard to the upper part of the Coromandel Coast or the country of Orissa. According to Arrian, the coast before coming to the mouths of the Ganges is occupied by the Kirrhadae, a savage race. Ptolemy places them immediately east of the Ganges, to which they may possibly have extended but he has a tribe that bears a designation of precisely similar import, the Sabara upon what appears to be the Mahánadí river. The classical Kirrhadae are beyond question the Kirátas of Sanscrit, and the Sabara, the Savaras, of the same, foresters and mountaineers, uncivilised barbarians, and their presence in the situations described is an evidence against the prevalence of the Brahmanical system in those countries earlier than the first century of the Christian era.

It has been already observed that the prevalent division of the Hindu faith in the earliest period of its establishment appears to have been the worship of Siva, and the traditions of the different countries corroborate this view, for the tutelary divinities of both the Pandyan and Chola kingdoms were forms of that deity or his bride. In Telingana the first princes are reputed to have been Vaishnava, but this is the only division in which that faith predominated. In the course of time, however, probably by the seventh or eighth century, a variety of modifications existed, to reform which Sankara Achárya, it is related, was born. He did not attempt to abolish all the varieties of the Hindu faith, but whilst he recalled the attention of the Brahmans to the tenets of the Vedas, and the injunctions of the inspired legislators, and thence founded the division known in the south as the Smartah

Brahmans, who disclaim, although they may practice, the exclusively preferential worship of any form of the supreme deity, he gave his sanction to the continuance of certain sects, over whom he permitted sundry of his disciples to preside. These were the Saivas, Vaishnavas, Sauras, Sáktas, Gânapatyas, and Kápalikas or Yogis. The renewed impulse given by Sankara to the observance of Saiva worship appears to have stimulated the worshippers of Vishnu to an effort to obtain the supremacy, and in the twelfth century Rámanuja, founded the sect of Vaishnava Sanyasis who have ever since exercised considerable influence in the south of India. That the dissemination of the doctrines of Ramanuja was attended with political convulsions is darkly alluded to in the traditions which represent him as protected by the Velala prince, Vishnu verddhana, against the persecution of Kerikala Chola; and the admitted transfer of the great shrine of Tripeti from Saiva to Vishnu, although assigned by tradition to a miracle, is not likely to have been effected without a severe struggle. Other innovations probably sprung out of the disturbances that prevailed at the period. About the same time or something earlier perhaps, in the course of the eleventh century, a new form of the Saiva religion was instituted, that of the Lingawants by Básaveswar and his nephew Chenna Basaveswara. That this change induced some public convulsion is acknowledged by the concurrence of various traditions which represent the king Bijala Raja as having been murdered by some of Básava's disciples. The religion spread very widely, and is now extensively diffused throughout the Dekhin.

A subsequent innovation, a revival of Vaishnava doctrines took place at a still later period, as late as the thirteenth century in the person and institutions of Madhwáchari. Adapted like the Jangama form of the Saiva faith to popular acceptance, it proved equally successful, and may be considered to divide with that religion, the adherence of the greater part of the population of the Peninsula not of the Brahmanical tribe.

After so much has been said of the violent persecution of the Bauddhas, in the south of India, and their extermination by the most cruel tortures, it is somewhat extraordinary that so few traces of their existence at all, should be found in the Collection. There is no book nor record whatever purporting to be the work of a Bauddha. A few incidental notices occur in different memoirs, but they are brief and unsatisfactory, and are not unfrequently of erroneous application, the Jains being intended although the Bauddhas are mentioned, and in one instance, in the standard history of Malabar, the name Baudenmar is perhaps applied to Christians, and is without doubt given to the Mohammedans.

That there were Bauddhas at one time in the south of India cannot be questioned. Imperfect as the traditions are, they indicate their presence, and architectural remains near Trivatore and at Amaravati, as well as the Bauddha caverns at Ellora Karli, and on Salsette, substantiate the fact. It is impossible however to avoid concluding from all the evidence that is procurable, that they existed at no very modern date, in small numbers, and for a brief period; that they enjoyed little popularity or patronage, and that they never were the objects of a general or sanguinary persecution. That they were exposed to unjust and vexatious treatment in some places, and consequently withdrew from them, possibly beyond sea, is little doubtful, and it is equally certain that their enemies were not the Brahmans alone, but that their expulsion was fully as attributable to the growing power and intolerant preponderance of the kindred schism of the Jainas.

The earliest controversy of importance that is described is said to have taken place between the Bauddhas and Mánikya Vāsaka; the minister of one of the Pandyan kings. The controversy it is narrated took place at Ohidambaram, but it is worthy of remark, that the advocates of the Bauddha faith came over from Ceylon, for the purpose of holding the disputation. They were of course confuted, but no note of any persecution occurs. The date of Mánikya Vāsaka is not very satisfactorily ascertained but it was not improbably in the course of the seventh century.

The confutation of the Bauddhas of Malabar by Kumaril Bhatta a northern Brahman as noticed in the Kerala Ulpatti and consequent persecution, are narrated very briefly and no date is given. If the events occurred at all they preceded the time of Sankara.

The only other notices that are worthy of attention, relate the expulsion of the Bauddhas from their college and temples at Ponataga Nagaram near Trivatur. They are said in one account to have come from Benares in the third century of the Christian era, and to have settled about Kanchi, where they flourished for some centuries ; at last, in the eighth century, Akalanka a Jain teacher from Sravana Belligola, and who had been partly educated in the Bauddha College at Ponataga disputed with them in the presence of the last Bauddha prince, Hemasitala, and having confuted them the prince became a Jain and the Bauddhas were banished to Kandy. Nothing more of any value, can be added to the history of this sect, from the present collection. We know that the Bauddha religion continued in Guzerat till a late period or the end of the twelfth century, when Kumára Pála of Guzerat was converted by the celebrated Hemachandra to the Jain faith, but by the fourteenth century it seems to have disappeared from the more southern portion of the Peninsula.

The substance of most of the collections regarding the Jains has already been published by Col. Mackenzie. According to the information procured from the establishment at Sravana Belligola, the Jains of the Dekhin were the objects of royal patronage as early as the seventh century before Christ : an inscription cut on a rock is adduced in evidence, but this testimony is solitary, and is at variance with all other documents. There is indeed on the contrary, an inscription placing Chámunda Raya, in the eighth century of Sálivadhana, whilst the only Chamunda of any note, a prince of Guzerat, flourished in the eleventh century of the Christian era. But the strongest argument against the accuracy of the date is, that amongst a very considerable number of Jain inscriptions, or nearly a thousand, there is no other of a similar period. The earliest grants are those of the Jain princes of Homchi a petty state in Mysore, which commence in the end of the ninth century. From this they multiply rapidly in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, particularly under the Velala Rajas, and extend to the sixteenth and seventeenth under the Rajas of Vijayanagar, who although not of the Jain persuasion, seem to have shewn liberal countenance to its professors.

To this evidence which is of the most unexceptionable description, the traditions of the country offer no contradiction. In the Pandyan kingdom, the Jains rose upon the downfall of the Bauddhas, and were suppressed in the reign of Kuna Pandya, which could not have occurred much earlier than the ninth or tenth century or might have been as late as the eleventh. The subversion of the Bauddhas of Kánchi by the Jains took place as has already been mentioned, according to some authorities no earlier than Sáka 710 or A. D. 788. The Bauddha temples at Devagond and Vellapalam were destroyed by Jain princes in the eleventh century. About the same time the Lingawant Saivas put to death Vijala the Jain king of Kalyan, and demolished the temples of the sect. Vishnu verddhana the Velala Rajah of Mysore was converted to the Vaishnava religion in the twelfth century. It is highly probable therefore from these accounts as well as from the inscriptions, that the Jain faith was introduced into the Peninsula about the seventh century of the Christian era; that its course south was stopped at an early period, but that it extended itself through the centre and in the west of the Peninsula, and enjoyed some consideration in the tenth and eleventh centuries; that it was mainly instrumental in its outset to the declension of the Bauddhas, and that in the twelfth century the joint attack of Saivas and Vaishnavas, put a final term to its career, and induced its decline. There are however still many Jain establishments in the Dekhin, and the religion is not without numerous and affluent votaries.

The extension of the Mohammedan religion into the South of India was wholly dependant on their political power. A remarkable exception to this occurs in the case of the conversion of the Raja of Kerala to Mohammedanism, apparently in the ninth century. This occurrence is recorded in the Kerala Utpatti but neither in that nor in any other document in the collection, is one of its consequences, the formation of a Mohammedan population, the Mapillas of the Malabar coast, described. The collection is also silent on the subject of the native Christians of the Peninsula, and throws no light on their ancient or modern history. These omissions resulted from the character of Col. Mackenzie's agents, who as Hindus and Brahmans were not likely to feel any interest in these subjects nor to communicate freely with the persons from whom alone, information could be obtained.

A review of the religious revolutions of the Peninsula would be incomplete without some notice of the numerous and celebrated cavern temples, with which it abounds, and its other monuments of a religious character. The collections of Col. Mackenzie furnish no addition to our knowledge of the former: the subject indeed is capable of little except graphic illustration, and there being few drawings or plans of any value relating to them. The omission is of little importance, for the topic has been handled in the Asiatic Researches, and the Transactions of the Bombay Literary Society, and in the latter particularly by Mr. Erskine in a manner that leaves nothing to desire. To extensive knowledge that writer adds sound judgment, discriminative observation, distinct conception, and perspicuous description, and his account of Elephanta, and his observations on the Bauddha remains in India, should be studied attentively, by all who would investigate the history of the Bauddhas and Jains. The caverns in general are Saiva and Bauddha. There are a few Jain excavations at Ellora but none at Elephanta or Keneri. There is no satisfactory clue to the date of any of these excavations, but there is no reason to think that any of them bear a high antiquity. It may be questionable whether the Saivas or Bauddhas took the lead in these structures, but there is some reason to suppose the latter, in which case the Saiva appropriation being consequent on the downfall of the Bauddha faith Mr. Erskine observes, the Elephanta caverns cannot be much more than eight centuries remote. The Bauddhas according to a tradition previously alluded to, came into the Peninsula only in the third century after Christianity, and their excavations could not therefore have been made earlier than the fifth or sixth. The Saivas who formed similar caverns were a particular sect or that of the Jogis, as is proved by the sculptures, the large earrings, the emaciated penitents, and the repetition of the details of Daksha's sacrifice, a favorite story in the Saiva Purānas, none of which probably are older than the eighth or ninth century. In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, therefore, we may infer the comparatively recent formation of these monuments. There is nothing in their construction that Hindu architects of the present day would not be as well qualified as ever to accomplish.

Sculptured rocks are analogous to cavern temples, and the history of the one may throw some light upon that of the other. The most remarkable monuments of this class are the sculptured rocks of Mavelipuram or Mahabalipur the city of the great Bali, who has proved so mischievous a Jack a lantern to European scholars, leading them astray from India into Palestine and Mesopotamia, and filling them with a variety of preposterous fancies. Now local tradition asserts that these rocks were sculptured not more than five or six centuries ago by artists from the north, and the subjects of the carving, the recumbent Vishnu, and particularly the presence of Krishna and the cow-herds of Vrindavan, leave no doubt of the accuracy of the chronology, for the worship of the boy Krishna, is a very modern innovation. That there was a city on this spot in remote periods, and that there may be ancient remains in the vicinity are not improbable, but the modern origin of these particular monuments shew that we are not obliged to go back to very distant ages for such laborious architecture to be devised or accomplished.

Many of the great temples of the South of India as those of Rameswara, Srirangam, Tanjore, Chilambaram, Conjeveram and Tripeti are genuine Hindu monuments, and probably are still of the same style of architecture as when first erected, but there can be no doubt that as they are, they are modern constructions. The local Puranas which, as has been noticed, are local fabrications, refer the original foundation of each shrine to extravagantly remote periods, very commonly a preceding Yuga. They then admit intervals of neglect, and the discovery of the spot by some comparatively modern sovereign, and when they particularise the construction of individual edifices, or the grant of specific endowments, we find the persons are of very modern date. The reigns of the Vijayanagar kings, the Rajas of Mysore and the Nayaks of Madura, or from the fourteenth to the eighteenth century form the season in which the records most frequently recur. The Yádava and Belal sovereigns appear occasionally amongst the founders and benefactors of sacred shrines, whilst a great number are said to owe their origin to Chola kings of very questionable antiquity. Except at Madura, the capital of the Pandyan princes, we do not find any edifices ascribed to those sovereigns, and even at Madura many of the most remarkable structures, such as the choultry of Trimal Naik, are works of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

HISTORY.

THE earliest political divisions of the South of India have already been adverted to, in describing the first introduction of colonists and civilization from the north. The settlers subsequent to the invasion of Ráma, established themselves at the extremity of the Peninsula and founded the Pandyan, Chola and Ohera principalities on the Western coast, whilst the country of Kerala was civilised by Parasu Ráma, and formed about the commencement of the Christian era, an independent kingdom. In the Carnatic, Tonda was reduced to a regular form of Government by a branch of the Chola ruling family, whilst farther north Andhra formed the chief state on the east and Tuluva on the west. At later periods the political divisions of the Dekhin followed the rise and ascendancy of particular families, and the Yádava, Belála, Ganapati, Gajapati, and Vijayanagar princes with the Marhatta Chiefs, and Náyaks of Madura, take the place of the ancient kingdoms. We shall endeavour to give a brief view of the various states and families as derivable from the Mackenzie Collections.

PANDYA.

The Pandyan kingdom was no doubt extensive and powerful at a very early period. The name was familiar to the Romans in the days of Augustus, and the Hindu king is said to have sent ambassadors to the emperor.

At some short time afterwards, the state seems to have comprehended the Coast of Malabar, which is included by Arrian amongst the possessions of the Pandyan king. Its limits, in general, are more restricted, and the kingdom of Ohera or the southern part of Coimbatore, and the line of ghats form its western, and the Velar river its northern boundary; on the east and south it is bounded by the sea.

The founder of the kingdom according to the local traditions was a person named Pándya a native of Oude, and of the agricultural caste. Various lists of princes are given as the successors of this individual, either in this or the preceding Yuga. The ordinary enumeration is above seventy, but some accounts with more consistency if the origin be so remote, assert that the whole number was three hundred and fifty-seven, down to Kuna Pándya, with whom all the lists close. Besides these lists we have numerous records of the actions of sundry of the Pandyan princes, particularising a few apparently authentic facts. They appear for the most part to be derived from a Sanscrit work, entitled the Hálásya Mahátmya of the Skanda Purána, which gives an account of the sports or miracles of Sundareswara, the form of Siva worshipped at Madura, as occurring in the reigns of the different kings. A Tamul version of this work was written in the middle of the eleventh century, and the original has therefore the character of some antiquity, being composed possibly in the course of the tenth century or early in the eleventh, and thus fixing the date of the last prince it enumerates, or Kuna Pándya, to some anterior term. He is in this work the seventy-fourth prince, and if he flourished in the ninth or tenth century, and the lists at all be correct, we are enabled with a very moderate computation to carry the commencement of the Madura sovereignty according to this record to the third or fourth century before Christianity. We have every reason to think this may be not very far from the truth, and the lists of princes, which it may be observed also, are found to agree very tolerably in the order of the names, may be entitled to some confidence. It is not unlikely that the compilers of the Hálásya Mahátmya followed records preserved in the Madura temple and college, and have thus been able to give a tolerably regular and rational view of the series of kings. Its composition has been a check upon subsequent chronicles, and few of the materials for a history of the states of the Dekhin found in the Mackenzie Collection are so complete or regular as for that of Madura.

The first capital of the state was Kurkhi, the Ko khi apparently of the periplus: the next was Kalyanpur. Madura was the third. The latter was founded by Kulasekhara with whom the seventy-four princes commence, referring therefore the original establishment of the principality to an earlier period than that named above, and furnishing grounds for a conjecture previously started, that this part of the Peninsula might have been organised about five centuries before the Christian era.

The third sovereign was a princess, but being subdued in battle by a king from the north, or by Siva in that form, she gave her hand to the victor. The prince it is said was named Sundara, and the tutelary deity of Madura is still Sundareswara, the Linga erected by Sundara. The tradition may therefore imply the introduction of that form of worship. The queen, as an incarnation of Devi as Minákshi, was also elevated to divine honors, and worshipped ever afterwards at Madura under that designation.

Few details of any value are given of the next following princes, beyond their frequent hostilities with the neighbouring kings of Chola, whose capital is placed at Kanchi, and who are sometimes described as Samanal, heretics or Bauddhas. The eighth king of Madura, Anantaguna, also, is said to have been assailed by the Kirátas, foresters of Chedi or according to the Tamul version of the Hálásya, the barbarous tribes of Marawa. Marawa however was part of the Pandyan kingdom from the first, and the assailants were probably from some other country, or from the mountainous regions along the western ghats.

A prince also appears as the nineteenth, twenty-second, or twenty-ninth of different lists, Varaguna, who holds a more prominent place in Chola history than in that of Madura, a blank in the former being ascribed to his marriage with the princess of Chola, and the consequent union of the two sovereignties. This must have occurred after the Christian era, as we have the capital of the Chola kings distinguished by Ptolemy from that of the Pandyan, and the Chola kings do seem to have merged into the Pandyan for some considerable time in the first ages of Christianity.

Shortly after the reign of Varaguna a series of twenty-four or twenty-five princes occurs, of whom the names only are recorded, and they are succeeded by Vamsasekhhara who appears to have been the first of a new dynasty. The different accounts concur in ascribing to him the construction of the fort and palace of Madura, and the renovation of the ancient city. If as might be suspected by this renovation of the city, we are to understand its foundation, this prince must have been anterior to the Christian era, but this is incompatible with the period of Varaguna's reign, and with the duration of the rest of the series. The computation upwards from the last of this dynasty Kuna Pándya, will place Vamsasekhara in the fifth or sixth century. His reign is further interesting from his being the reputed founder of the Madura College.

The reign of Arimerddana the sixty-first or sixty-second prince, is remarkable for the cotemporary existence of a celebrated personage in the literary and religious history of the Peninsula, Mánikyavásaka, the minister of the Pandyan king. He adopted the faith of Siva, and the practice of a mendicant life, composed a number of hymns in praise of Siva, and defeated the Bauddhas of Ceylon in a disputation held at Chilambaram.

The twelfth prince from Arimerddana is Kuna Pándya. He is placed by some accounts in the Saka year 950 or A. D. 1028, and this agrees tolerably well with the date deduced for him from that of the translation of the Háldsya Múhátmya. In his reign, the Jains who had become powerful in Madura and enumerated this prince amongst their disciples, were discomfited by Jnyána Samandhar, a Saiva priest, and the king became a convert to the latter faith. Some time before the reign of Kuna Pándya the Madura college it is said, had been abolished, but this is questionable.

The Pandyan kingdom ceased from about the ninth or tenth century to hold that eminent place in the political history of the Peninsula, which it had apparently occupied for some centuries. Its decline was owing to the extended power of the Chola sovereigns on one side, and subsequently to the establishment of the Belála princes on the other. It continued to struggle on however partly as a tributary and partly as an independent principality, engaged in contests of various vicissitude with its Chola, Marawa, and Karnáta neighbours, until the middle of the sixteenth century, when the sovereignty devolved on the series of princes known as the Náyaks of Madura. The first of these, Nágama Náyak was an officer of Krishna Ráya king of Vijayanagar, who was sent to assist the Pandyan prince against the Ohola Raja. Nágama deposed his ally, and declared himself independent. His son Viswanáth was despatched against him by the Vijayanagar Raja, and defeated and sent his father prisoner to the Court. His loyalty was rewarded with the Government of Madura, which descended to his posterity. Sixteen princes of this race held the Government of Madura, and Trichinopoly, to the middle of the eighteenth century. Some of them left curious and splendid monuments of their reigns, and several were patrons or persecutors of the Catholic Missions in that part of the Peninsula. Their final downfall may be considered as one of the indirect causes of the British ascendancy in India as the success of Ohanda Saheb in obtaining possession of Trichinopoly from Minákshi Ammal, the Madura princess and regent, encouraged him to embark in those ambitious schemes against the Subadar of the Dekhin, which involved the French and British settlements in the political revolutions of the Peninsula.

CHOLA.

The history of the Ohola kingdom is much less regular and consistent than that of the Pandyan, and the traditions relating to it are as perplexing and contradictory as they are abundant. Lists of the princes, legends relating to them, and even inscriptions dated in their reigns, are extant all over the Peninsula, but are so little accordant, that it is exceedingly difficult, if not impossible to derive from them any information on which reliance can be placed.

The sources of confusion, independent of those which naturally occur from the lapse of time and imperfect tradition, are evidently two. The one is the use of an epithet as a proper name, and its application to different individuals, thus Kulottunga Chola is he who is the elevator of his family, and although it may have originally designated an individual prince, it has unquestionably been borne by very different persons, at exceedingly distant periods. The other source of perplexity is the employment of the term Chola in a much wider sense than it legitimately expresses, and its adoption by the princes of districts considerably removed from the original Chola country. The fame of the Ohola princes seems to have led the Rajas of other provinces to assume the title, and frequent grants are found at Rajamahendri, and in the Northern Circars, which purport to be made by princes, who are termed, in all probability with little exactness, Oholas.

The ancient history of the Chola kingdom commences at the same time, and in the same manner, as that of the Pandyan. The country along the Oauvery, which had been overrun by Rákshasas, the chief of whom Trisiras gave his name to the celebrated fort of Trichinopoly (Trisirapalli), was first cleared and cultivated by Tayaman Nalé a settler from Oude, or from Upper Hindustan. The limits of the country were afterwards extended to the Kutakeri on the west and the southern Pinakini or Pennar on the north. The sea formed the eastern boundary, and the Velar divided Chola from Pandya on the south. As comprehending Tonda Mandalam the northern boundary extended beyond Tripeti, and in recent times appears to have been pushed far into the Telugu countries, but the legitimate boundary to the north is that of the Tamul language, or a line drawn from Pulicat towards Bangalore, including consequently the whole of the Carnatic below the ghats, with Trichinopoly and Tanjore.

The first stage in the history of the Ohola kings, is that immediately subsequent to the foundation of the principality. Forty-eight or forty-four kings are said to have reigned in a former age, but nothing more than their names, and those not of frequent recurrence, are preserved. It is nevertheless probable that several of the few events of Ohola history which have been commemorated, belong to this period, and in particular we may assign to it the construction of the capital Wariur on the Oauvery, which seems to be recognisable in the Orthoura of Ptolemy the capital of Sornag; Shora or Chola Náyak, situated on that river. The extension of the territory further north by the reduction of Tonda Mandalam, the country of the Kurumbas or Nomadic Soretani is also referred to this early period by Mr. Ellis, but it seems to have belonged to a later date.

is said to have been occupied at an early period by wild tribes, who however, were themselves foreigners, coming from the north of India; and who exterminated the original barbarians of this part of the Dandaka forest. Although an uncivilised people, the Kurumbas, as they are styled, were not strangers to social organisation, as they had chiefs of their own, and fortified holds, and were not reduced without difficulty to subjection. According to tradition Kulottunga Chola, had a son by a female dancer attached to a temple, or in some of the versions, by a nymph of Pátála, who from his illegitimacy being debarred from succeeding to his parental dominions was sent by his father to win a principality for himself. The prince, named Adonda or Tondaman Chakraverti, subdued the Kurumbas, with the aid of his father, and introduced various races of colonists into the country from more civilised districts. It does not seem however that Tonda continued an independent state, for no separate lists of its princes are preserved, nor is any notice of its later fortunes handed down, except as part of the Chola kingdom. Its subjugation by a branch of the ruling dynasty of Chola is conjectured by Mr. Ellis to have occurred before the commencement of the Christian era, as many of the names by which places are still known, and which seem to have been imposed by the colonists are to be found in Ptolemy's tables, thus the Arcati Regio Soræ, is considered by him to be the Arcot of modern times: the original term Arcadu being a Tamil compound of Al or Ar, the banyan tree, and Cadu a forest, and Arcot being the chief town of one of the Nádus or early divisions of the country although not the capital. This he supposes to have been Káncchi or Conjeveram, which is considered as the metropolis of the Chola kings in their early intercourse with the Pandyan monarchs. Káncchi is said to have been founded by Adanda Chakraverti, and made his capital, but its own traditions ascribe its restoration, or in other words its foundation to Vira Chola, a prince cotemporary with Sáliváhana in the first century of Christianity. The chief temples of this celebrated place of Hindu devotion, are of much more recent origin, and no traces of it appear in the classical geographers. The specification by Ptolemy of the inhabitants of this part of the Peninsula as a Nomadic tribe seems also to indicate the existence of the Kurumbas, as an independent people in his day, for the colonists whose descendants still occupy the country are Vellalas an agricultural not a pastoral people. It is therefore probable that this transaction belongs to a more modern date, and that the Tonda country was not settled until after the separation of the Chola from the Pandyan principality. The line of sea coast may perhaps have been occupied earlier, but the tracts a little removed from it, were but imperfectly civilised in the first centuries of Christianity. Another event of some importance, the destruction of Wariur by a shower of earth, and the removal of the capital to Kumbakonam or to Ganga Gondavaram can scarcely be referred to the first period, as it gives designation to a prince of a subsequent era, named Wariur Chola, and if it be as above conjectured identifiable with Orthoura.

The Chola kingdom merged by marriage as has been noticed into the Pandyan, and continued so for 570 years. The duration of the interval may perhaps not be very accurately stated, but the occurrence seems very probable, and explains why the Chola records are so much more defective than those of Madura. Whether the cause be correctly assigned is also doubtful, but we may be satisfied to admit the traditional memory of the result, and to conclude that the kings of Madura extended their authority over the whole tract between the eastern ghats and the coast, for a considerable period during the early ages of Christianity.

The series of princes who succeeded, is very differently stated by different authorities. Lists preserved at the temples of Tripeti, Chandragiri and Permatpur, make the number twenty-three, whilst others at Kondatur and Kánchi give eighteen, supplying also dates or from Sal. 136 to 830, (A. D., 214 to 908,) an interval of 694 years, which is much too considerable for eighteen reigns, giving an average of 39 years to a reign. The more extensively received enumeration, however is sixteen, resting upon the authority of the Vrihadíswara Máhátmya a Sanscrit work of which translations in Tamul and Mahratta exist. Although not of unexceptionable authenticity, it should be a preferable guide to the barren lists above adverted to, but there are some irreconcilable contradictions between its series of princes, and the dates assignable to some of them from other sources, and the total number is in all probability less accurate than that of the local lists. That some of the princes particularised in all had a real existence is undoubted, as it is verified by inscriptions. The inscriptions of the Chola princes in the Dravira country and language are exceedingly numerous : every temple abounds with them. Unfortunately however the old Tamul inscriptions, the antiquity of which is easily recognisable by the style, very rarely present any other date than that of the year of the reign in which the circumstances they record took place. They are consequently of little chronological value.

According to the Vrihadīswara Māhātmya the first of the series, Kulottunga, was distinguished originally only for his devotion to Siva, by whose favour he became possessed of great wealth, which he employed to raise forces, defeat his enemies, and occupy the country on both sides of the Cauvery. He erected a number of temples to different forms of Saiva, and amongst others one of great splendour to Tungeswara, the form of that divinity worshipped at Tanjore, which may hence be considered as the Chola capital.

The names and chief actions of these Chola princes as recorded in the Vrihadīswara Māhātmya will be found in another place* as well as an attempt to establish the period of Kulottunga's existence in the ninth century, upon what appears very good authority. At the same time it is difficult to suppose that the series of Chola princes, and the many celebrated shrines originating with them should not have borne an earlier date, and we cannot satisfactorily refer them to the Kulottunga of the Sanscrit text. A very current tradition, indeed places Kulottunga in the time of the poet Kamban who has left his own date on record Sal. 808 (A. D. 886,) and makes him the last not the first of his race. The story may perhaps originate in some change of dynasty, but it is scarcely admissable at all, for Kamban's work is dedicated to Rājendra Chola not to Kulottunga. Supposing them to be the same individual, it leaves as probable the existence of two Kulottungas about this date, and the prior antiquity of a race of princes whose names are now lost or but partially preserved in the local lists. Rájendra Chola appears to have been a very distinguished member of the dynasty, and his inscriptions describe him as victor over the Pandyan and Chera princes and those of Utkala and Virat. He is said even to have undertaken maritime aggressions, and embarking on board ship to have subdued Yelanki, or Ceylon, Kalinga or the northern part of the Coromandel Coast, Gaur and Bengal. These are no doubt exaggerations, but they leave it likely that Rájendra was a prince of more power than any Chola monarch could have enjoyed after the Yádava and Belal Rajas had the ascendancy, and this consideration confirms his living in the ninth century. There were no doubt many Chola Rajas after him although of more circumscribed authority, and the destruction of the family in the time of Kamban, unless it were in the person of Rájendra, as the subverter of a prior dynasty, is therefore an idle fiction.

The Chola princes of this race are said to have carried their arms far into Telingana and Kernata but to have been checked in their career in the former direction by the Yádava princes in the beginning of the eleventh century, and finally expelled from the northern tracts by the Kakateya princes in the twelfth. They continued to hold the government of their original possessions to a much later date, either independently or as feudatories to Vijayanagar. The flight of Rámánuja from Tanjore above the ghats is invariably said to have been in consequence of the persecution of the Chola king, and it occurred in the twelfth century. Grants by a prince named Potambi Chola with the title of Madhurántaka destroyer or conqueror of Madura, are found dated in Sal. 1153 (A. D. 1231.) In the sixteenth century, as has been noticed, an officer of the Vijayanagar Government was despatched to protect the Raja of Madura from his Chola neighbour and in the end of the seventeenth similar aid being afforded to the Nayak of Tanjore against the Nayak of Madura introduced the Mahratta family, by which it is still governed. Ekaji the half brother of Sivaji being ordered by the superior state of Vijayapur or Bijapore to march to the aid of the Chola prince, relieved him not only from the attacks of his enemies but the cares of administration, and usurping the supremacy put an end to a dynasty that had been masters of the greater part of Dravira through many successive centuries, and had attached a degree of credit to the Chola name, which led to its adoption in other portions of the Peninsula.

One of these appropriations appears to have occurred in the Carnatic, and a series of nine Cholas is sometimes enumerated, a few of whom are borrowed apparently from the genuine lists, but others, if they ever had a real existence were wholly unconnected with the Chola dynasty. These princes are described in the Nava Chola Cheritra, a Telugu work, (p. 305), and were named Kerikála Vikrama, Uttunga, Adivara, Varadherma, Satyendra, Manujendra, Vira, and Uttama. The object of the record is to detail the encouragement given by these princes to the Jangama religion, and is therefore not likely to be very authentic. Of four of the nine, Adivara, Varadherma, Satyendra, and Manujendra, no traces occur in any other accounts.

Other instances of the use of the term Chola are found in the Telugu countries, and in these, individual appellations, as Kulottunga, Rajendra, Vicrama, and Vira, and Kerikala, are assumed. The adoption of these names and titles appears to have been divided between two families, grants by both of whom are very numerous and are nearly cotemporary; the one dating from Sal. 1022, to 1097, (A.D. 1100 to 1175), in the reigns of Gonka Raja Kulottunga Chola and his son Rajendra Chola of Velanad, and the other embracing the period of Sal. 1023 to 1104, (A. D. 1101 to 1182), being chiefly grants by Kulottunga Chola Vishnu Verd-dhana of the Chalukya princes of Rájamakendri. There is also a grant by a Kerikala Chola in Sal. 1114 (A.D. 1192,) who is described as the great grandson of Gonka Raja, prince of Velnad, the country of the East of the Tungabhadra and along the Krishna. In the ceded districts occur the grants of a Deva Chola, who took Gandikota in Sal. 1244, (A. D. 1322) and an Ahobala Deva Chola in Sal. 1342 (A.C. 1410). With exception of the Rajamahendri Cholas the others were petty chiefs, little better than Zemindars, in which class we may also reckon another Kerikala Chola who is said to have been conquered by one of the Jupalliwaras or Zemindars of Jupalli in the Hyderabad country.

CHERA.

Another political division of the south of India which may be traced to periods of some antiquity, is that of the Chera kingdom, which is always enumerated along with the Pandyan and Chola states, by original authorities. The boundaries of this principality seem to have been of little extent, and it was probably most commonly feudatory to its more powerful neighbours, except where it had extended its northern limits so as to interpose a mountainous barrier between it and its enemies. The northern limit of Ohera varied at different periods, being originally placed at Palini near Dharapura, whilst at a subsequent period the capital, Dalavanpur or Talcad above the Mysore ghats indicates a considerable extension of the boundary in this quarter, and the Chera principality probably included the greater portion of Kernata. Its eastern limits were the possessions of Chola and Pándya, and the western those of Kerala. In its early state however it comprehended the extreme south of the Malabar coast or Travancore, and consisted of that province, Wynád, the Nilgiri mountain district, the southern portion of Coimbatore, and part of Tinnevelly. In this tract we have in Ptolemy the people called Carei, and not far from it Carura Regia Cerebothri, in which, making an allowance for inaccuracies of sound and expression, we have the Cheras, and Carur still a city in this district, and Cherapati, the sovereign of Chera.

It seems probable therefore that in the commencement of the Christian era, Chera, or as it is also called Kanga, was an independent principality. Of its history, either before or since, little satisfactory occurs, until periods comparatively modern. Lists of princes, one of thirty, and another of twenty, who it is said ruled in the Dwapar and beginning of the Kali age, are given, but they are unaccompanied by details: another series of twenty-six princes adds the political events of their reigns and closing with the conquest of the province by Aditya vermá, a Chola prince in A. D. 894, it enables us to place the commencement of the dynasty in the fifth century. The occupation of the country by the Chola Rajas was not of very long continuance, and in the course of the tenth century the capital Tálcá was that of the first or second sovereign of the Hayasála or Belál dynasty of the sovereigns of Karnata. The name of Chera appears to have been discontinued from this period, and the districts were annexed to the neighbouring principalities of Karnáta, Madura, or Tanjore.

KERALA.

Before leaving the southern extremity of the Peninsula it will be convenient to advert to another ancient division of some interest, the state of Kerala or Malabar. The country intended by this designation in its widest sense extends from Gokernam to Cape Comorin, but it was subdivided into four provinces as has been already noticed, Tuluva, Cuva, Kerala, and Mushica: of these no traces occur in Ptolemy except Cuva which he gives without any alteration, Cuva, only as a city not a province. It is possible that the Paralia of his tables may be a wrong reading for Karalia or Kerala, and in the Aycotta of the Malabar coast near Koranganur, some vestige of the Aül or Aiorum Regio may be conjectured. As already observed some other identifications along this coast may be made, as Nelcynda or Nilkantha with Nileswara, and Purros mons with the mountain of Parasuráma, to whom the whole tract is said to owe its origin.

This hero after the destruction of the Kshetriya race bestowed the earth upon the Brahmans, who repaid the obligation by banishing him as a homicide from amongst them. Being thus at a loss for a domicile he solicited one of the ocean, and its regent deity consented to yield him as much land as he could hurl his battle axe along. Parasuráma threw the weapon from Gokernam to Kumári, and the retiring ocean yielded him the coast of Malabar below the latitude of 15°.

The introduction of Brahmans into this province, which has already been noticed, appears to have been accompanied with a political organisation of very unusual occurrence in the east. The Government was vested in a sort of hierarchal senate, formed of the Brahmans of the sixty-four districts, into which they parcelled out the country; the land they rented to people of inferior castes, reserving to themselves the right to property in the soil, and the management of public affairs. The defence of the whole or the use of weapons, was intrusted to ten divisions and a half, out of the sixty-four, and the executive Government was consigned to one individual, and a council of four others appointed by the Brahmans of the sixty-four villages for three years each. This arrangement however in the course of time gave way to the election of one sovereign, of the military caste, who took an oath on his installation to acknowledge the authority of the Brahmans, and do nothing contrary to their interests, or without their concurrence. This Military Governor was brought, in the first instance, it is said, from a foreign country : what country is not mentioned : according to Arrian and Pliny, Malabar was included in the Pandyan kingdom, and it is probable therefore that in the early ages of Christianity the Brahmans of Kerala had been induced or compelled to accept a Military Viceroy from the monarch of Madura, retaining in consideration of their sacred character, and actual privileges, substantial influence in the internal administration of the Government.

Subsequently to these events which appear to belong to periods of some antiquity, the history of the province is very imperfectly preserved. The separation of sixty-four districts into two portions, thirty-two north and thirty-two south, indicates the distinction of Tuluva from Kerala but on what account it was made is not recorded : we shall find it again noticed elsewhere. Obscure traditions then occur of the temporary prevalence of the Bauddha faith, and its final suppression by six learned Brahmans, who came from other countries, and of the encouragement given by Kula Sekhara, a prince who is placed by some authorities in the fourth and by others in the seventh century of Christianity, to persons of that description to settle in Kerala.

From the death of this prince an extraordinary anachronism in the Malabar annals assigns the appointment of kings or Viceroys to Krishna Ráya the king of Vijayanagar in the sixteenth century. Eighteen rulers of this class are enumerated, each of whom reigned for twelve years, thus occupying an interval of 216 years. The last of the number, Oheruman Perumal, is celebrated for a very singular event in the annals of the Hindus, his conversion to the Mohammedan religion. He finally retired to Mecca, dividing on his departure the Kerala kingdom into eighteen or more distinct principalities. There is no reason to doubt the general accuracy of this story. A Raja of Malabar did become a Mohammedan, and whether he went on pilgrimage to Mecca, or not, his apostacy was no doubt the occasion of political convulsions, and made the plea of general disobedience by his officers who took the opportunity of rendering themselves independent. These events seem to have occurred in the ninth century, and at the end of the fifteenth we know that the Portuguese found the country broken up into numerous petty principalities, acknowledging a sort of feudatory obligation to a few of the more powerful of their number, but all affecting independence. Amongst the superior states was that of Kálicat, whose chief was entitled the Sámudrí Raja or Raja of the sea coast, and who was thence probably termed Zamorin by the Portuguese. The origin of Calicut was subsequent to the partition of the country by Oheruman Perumal. The foundation of another chieftainship furnishes an era in common use, and events in Malabar are ordinarily dated from the building of Kulam, Culao, or Quilon, which occurred in the ninth century.

KADAMBA.

The traditions of Malabar respecting the partition of the country amongst sixty-four families of Brahmans, and their subdivision into two sects of thirty-two each, one retaining the northern, and the other the southern portion or the country recur in the records of Tuluva, and that province is said to have been apportioned in a similar manner. The separation however is ascribed, not to Parasu Ráma, but to Mayúra Varmá, a prince of a dynasty known by the name Kadamba, which long reigned in this part of the Peninsula. To Parasu Ráma is attributed nevertheless the recovery of the whole tract over which they reigned from the ocean, and which is said to have extended from Nasik to Kanyá Kumári. The country so recovered was distinguished by Parasu Ráma, as the seven Konkans, which are severally named Kiráta, Viráta, Mah-ratta, Konkana, Hayga, Tuluva, and Kerala. Of these the Kadamba princes appear to have ruled over Hayga and Tuluva, or the modern Kanara, extending their authority inland over part of Karnáta confining with the limits of Chera. The Konkana appears to have been in ancient as in modern times, the residence of uncivilised and piratical tribes. The Kiráta country is of course that of barbarians, and the term Mahratta or Maháráshtra is of so vague an import, and the early traditions of the modern Mahrattas so utterly deficient, that it is not likely they existed as a separate and organised community in ancient times. In place of this division, indeed, some accounts specify Go-ráshtra but this should be more properly Hayga, which is also omitted, and another division that of Berbera inserted. Berbera, Kiráta, and Viráta are also said to form the kingdom of Trigertta : both Trigertta and Viráta are known by name in the Mahábhárat, but the latter is there placed much more to the north, and it is difficult to understand on what grounds it is included amongst the Konkanas. At any rate it appears probable from the classical geography, as well as the imperfect character and general tenor of the traditions regarding this part of the peninsula, that a considerable tract of country between the Godávery and Krishna rivers from the sea coast eastwards, continued to a comparatively modern date in the possession of scattered and barbarous tribes, or an untenanted expanse of mountain and forest, such as it was when Ráma with his wife and brother, resided in a cottage of leaves near the sources of the Godávery.

At the time that Parasu Ráma recovered Tuluva and Hayga from the sea, it appears that he obtained a population also, for it is asserted that he converted the fishermen of the coast into Brahmans. He then departed, telling them that if ever they had occasion for his aid, their wishes would bring him to their assistance : after some interval they were curious to see whether he would keep his word, and summoned him to their presence : upon his arrival, and learning the cause of his being put to unnecessary trouble, he was exceedingly wroth, and degraded them to the condition of Súdras, in which light the Brahmans of the Konkan are still considered.

When some ages had elapsed Siva and Párvati came to the Sahyádrí mountains, the Ghats above Konkan and Kanara, and in consequence of their pastimes a boy was born under a Kadamba tree whence the name of the dynasty: other accounts ascribe his birth to a drop of Siva's perspiration which fell upon a Kadamba flower. The people of the country being at the time without a monarch, had recourse to a mode of election which is of frequent occurrence in the peninsular traditions. Due worship having been performed, a state elephant is turned loose, carrying a wreath, and the person to whom the animal presents it, is chosen king. In this instance the wreath was given to the youth whose birth was so miraculous, and the first of the Kadambas ascended the throne of Tuluva. In consequence of his derivation from Siva he was born with a third eye on his forehead, visible only at the moment of his production, and was in consequence termed Trinetra Kadamba. He was a great benefactor of his people, and a devout worshipper of Siva as Madhukeswara and Kotiswara. His date is placed early in the Kali age, but inscriptions occur in his name dated Sal. 90 or A. D. 168. It is not very likely that the Sáliváhana era should have been adopted thus early, else the date is not inconsistent with the subsequent traditions. It must be observed, however, that in this case the city Banavási existed before the Kadamba family, as it occurs in the vicinage of the Malabar coast something near its actual position in Ptolemy's tables.

The sixth prince of this family, or the third according to some accounts, was Mayúra Vermá to whom the foundation of Jayan-tipur is attributed. This is usually identified with Banavási, but some notices make it Kundapur on the sea coast. This is the prince to whom the introduction of the Brahmans is ascribed. The place whence he brought them, and their number, are variously given, as Ahikshetra or Vallabhipur, and one hundred, or thirty-two thousand; all the traditions agree that he distributed the country below the ghats into sixty-four portions, which he gave to the Brahman colonists, and the very large proportion which the Brahmans of Kanara and Tuluva bear to the whole population, indicates a considerable immigration of this class at some distant period. The greater part are also admitted to belong to the Pancha Gaura, the five Gaura Brahmans, or those of northern Hindustan. Mayúra Vermá is said to have established four cities in each of which he placed a Brahman Governor : these were Kasargodi, Barkur, Mangalur, and Kadaba. The marvellous adventures of this prince, a brief notice of which will be found in another place, (page 56) do not occur in what seems to be the chief authority for the history of the Kadamba Kings, the Sahyádrí Khanda of the Skánda Purána.

The Brahmans introduced by Mayúra Vermá attempted in the reign of his son and successor to leave the province, but they were brought back, and in order to prevent a repetition of their attempt were compelled to leave unshorn a lock of hair on the forehead as a distinguishing mark. The son of Mayúra Vermá is variously named Kshetra Vermá, Chandragada, and Trinetra Kadamba. This latter it is said, extended the Brahmans to the southern portion of Tuluva or Gokérna, which was under the Government of a kinsman of the prince named Chandrasena. The son of Chandrasena, Lokáditya married the sister of Trinetra, and had by her a daughter, whom the king of the mountain Chandálas, solicited as a wife for his son. The request was seemingly complied with, and the king and his attendants invited to Tripura, the residence of Lokáditya, to celebrate the marriage. Whilst unsuspecting of peril they were assailed by the soldiers of Lokáditya, and his brother-in-law, and destroyed, and the authority of the Kadamba prince was extended in consequence above the ghats into Carnáta. The Brahmans followed this accession of territory.

From the first of the Kadamba dynasty to the last, seventy-one or seventy-four princes are enumerated but their names alone are particularized. They were followed, it is said, by the Abhiras, Mauras, &c., the lists of princes given in the Puránas, who could have had no connexion whatever with the dynasties of the south. The interval is thus filled up to the reign of a Sankara Deva in Sal. 1858, or A. D. 1386, the date of the origin of the Vijayanagar kingdom. The period from Sal. 90 that of Trinetra Kadamba to 1258, is 1168 years, and these distributed amongst seventy-four princes would give fifteen years to reign, an average not unlikely if we can suppose the princes enumerated to have had a real existence. There is little doubt also that the first princes of Vijayanagar were descended from a Tuluva family of ancient origin and power, whose dominions extended towards the western sea: whether they were connected with the Kadamba family does not appear, but that this race continued to hold possessions in Kernáta, till near their time, is proved by grants at Banavási, Savanur, and Gokernam, dated in the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth centuries by Kadamba kings. Their territorial possessions, and their personal independence during this period were no doubt subject to many fluctuations, and the Belal Rajas of Karnáta appear to have exercised some supremacy below the ghats, and even the Telinga kings of Warangal extended their conquests thither. Under the patronage of the former of these, the Jain religion was very widely diffused throughout Tuluva, and in the interval between the decline of the Belal kings, and the ascendancy of the Vijayanagar kings, a number of petty independent Jain Rajas sprung out of the officers of the former princes. They were allowed to retain their possessions under the Vijayanagar kings, but the management of the country and command of the military force, were vested in three deputies, appointed by the superior sovereign. A branch of the Vijayanagar family appears to have settled after their downfall, in Sonda, whilst Sadasiva Raja conferred in the end of the sixteenth century the government of Guti, Barkur, and Mangalur, upon a petty chief, whose descendants known as the Rajas of Ikeri reduced the Jain Rajas to subjection, and continued to hold authority in Kanara till the middle of the last century, when their dominions were annexed to the Mohammedan kingdom of Mysore.

NORTH OF THE KRISHNA.

The collections of Col. Mackenzie do not present any satisfactory materials, for tracing the ancient history of the countries north of the Krishna on the western part of the Peninsula and the fabulous stories of Vikramáditya, Sálivádhana and Bhoja which relate to them, differ in no respect from those common in other parts of Hindustan, and reflect little light upon the real history of the country or its princes. Materials for an accurate record of the political transactions of modern times, the fortunes of the Mohammedan kingdoms and the Marhatta confederacy are not deficient, but it is unnecessary to notice these, as the results are already well known by the translations of Scott, and the works of Orme and Duff. It is sufficient here to observe that the foundation of Deogerh or Dowletabad is attributed to a shepherd named Ramji who resided on the mountain, and discovered a hidden treasure in the year of Kali 2500 or about five centuries before the Christian era. His minister was Hemanda Panth by whom the Mahratta written character was invented. The excavations at Ellora are ascribed to Ila the son of Buddha the son of the moon. The Rajas who ruled subsequently at Ellore, are said to be Yuvanáswa, Dandaka, Indradyumna, Darudhya and Ráma Raja, none of whom, except the last, probably ever heard of the place. The legendary origin of Násika has already been given. In more modern times, or 500 years ago, a Raja entitled Gauri Raja is said to have ruled here and at Tryambak. He is said to have been a brother of Ráma Raja of Dowletabad, of which the date would tolerably well admit. His nephew at the same time governed the country below the ghats or the Konkan. At that time a ferryman named Jayaba rose in insurrection, defeated and deposed the nephew of Gauri Raja, and became master of the Konkan from Junar to Ankola. Jayaba extended his power above the ghats, but was checked by the progress of the Mohammedans. Seven princes in succession descended from this person, continued to hold the government of the low country.

BELAL KINGS.

The ancient history of Kernáta is but little elucidated by any of the documents of the Mackenzie collection. The Pandyan and Ohera princes, and those of the Kadamba family, probably divided it in a great measure amongst them, and we may feel satisfied that no other series of any consideration exercised the sovereignty, until those whom we shall hereafter notice. There were no doubt at various intervals petty princes holding portions of it with a greater or less degree of independent authority, such as the Jain princes of Humchi to whose inscriptions we have already referred: authorities of a similar description prove that princes of Telugu origin, and particularly those of the Chálukya family of Kalydna, held portions of the country, and the Yádava princes of Ohandragiri also, in all probability extended their sway over part of its northern districts. In later times the Ganapati princes of Warangal included part of it in their territory, and finally the Rayas of Vijayanagar, established within its limits, ruled over Karnáta as well as the other divisions of the Dekhin. Before noticing any of these however we may pause to describe a dynasty of Karnáta princes of considerable eminence in the annals of the south, that of the Haysálas or Belálas.

The founder of this dynasty, like that of many others of the south of India, is the hero of sundry marvellous traditions. He is said to have been a person of the family of Yadu or that of Krishna : some accounts make him a Raja, others, a peasant or a cowherd, but all agree that he derived his name and fortune from killing a tiger, which had infested the vicinity of a shrine of Vasantikā, a sylvan goddess near Sasakapuri. Some traditions say he killed the animal in defence of a Rishi or holy sage, on whom he attended, whilst others relate that he undertook to destroy the animal at the request of the villagers, who consented to pay him annually for the duty, a quarter of a fanam on every Kandy of grain they raised on their fields. With this revenue he engaged followers, and made himself formidable to his neighbours, increasing his demands upon them until they amounted to fourteen fanams for the same quantity of corn as that for which they had originally agreed to give a quarter fanam. The name of this individual was Sála, to which the exclamation of the Muni, Hohe, kill! being prefixed, his designation and that of his family became Hohesala or Haysála. He also bore the title of Belála from Bala strength, with reference to his prowess. It is not unlikely that he was a Zemindar or petty Raja in the Carnatic, subject or feudatory to the Kangyam or the Ohola Raja, until by his prudence and enterprise he elevated himself to be the founder of an independent dynasty.

The number of the Belála Rajas, according to one genealogical account is seventeen, but the ordinary enumeration, particularly that of various inscriptions, apparently worthy of confidence, is nine. There is a greater variety in the duration assigned to their authority, and the records of various temples in Telingana limit it to eighty-seven years, whilst the genealogical list extends it to more than five centuries. The dates of the inscriptions extend from Sal. 991 to Sal. 1235, or two hundred and forty-four years giving nearly thirty years to a reign, an average certainly exceeding that of most series of princes when at all protracted, but which we have no reason to dispute in the present case, resting as it does upon many concurring documents. The first date may be perhaps a little too remote, but the last we know from Mohamedan history is the period at which the capital of the Belal kings was taken and destroyed, and according to all probability their power irretrievably subverted.

The first capital of the Belal princes was Talkád but Vinayditya the second of the race, was obliged, it is said, to retire into Tuluva; his son, called in some places Yerayenga, and in others Vitala Deva recovered possession of the ancient capital, and extended his authority over part of Dravira on the south-east, and westwards into Kanara.

The fourth prince named Betada or Beldla and subsequently Vishnuverddhana is of great celebrity, as the patron and protector of the Vaishnava reformer Rámánuja. The Chola Raja it is related, having insisted that his subjects should sign a paper attesting their belief in the supremacy of Siva, Rámánuja refused to subscribe and to escape the consequences of the Raja's indignation, fled above the ghats, into the territory of the Belál Raja. The Belál Rajas had hitherto been Jains, as is sufficiently proved by their grants to Jain temples, and establishments, but the wife of Betada was of the Vaishnava persuasion, and induced her husband to protect Rámánuja who afterwards effected the Raja's conversion. This change of religion was in some degree brought about by the insolence of the Raja's Guru, a Jeti or Jain priest, who refused to take food in the palace, because the Raja was mutilated, having lost one of his fingers. Resentment of his conduct disposed Betada to adopt the doctrines of Rámánuja, and he became a Vaishnava. It does not appear however that he molested the Jains: on the contrary, many grants were made to them in his reign, and in the reigns of several of his successors either by the Rajas themselves, or their chief officers. At a later period, the Rajas and their ministers appear to have deserted the faiths of Vishnu and Jain, for that of Siva, and the shrine of Mallikarjuna near Tálkad became the repeated object of their munificence. Vishnu Verddhana greatly extended the limits of the Balála principality, capturing Banavási, and subjugating part of Telingana: grants by this prince occur dated as late as Sal. 1055, (A. D. 1133) which agrees well enough with the date usually assigned to Rámdnuja.

Narasinha Raya or Vijaya Narasinha is said by some authorities, to have made Dwárasamudra his capital, whilst other traditions ascribe the foundation of that city to the first of the dynasty. His successors however Vira Belála, and Vira Narasinha appear to have been of more eminence, and to have elevated the Belála sovereignty to its greatest power, when the whole of Karnáta as far as to the Krishna, was subject to their sway, and the provinces of Malabar and Canara on the west, the Dravira country on the south and east, and part of Telingana on the north-east, acknowledged them, if not as immediate masters, yet as exercising supreme authority over them through their officers, or through the native Rajas as vassals, and tributaries.

The successor of Vira Narasinha Belála is the first of the series who seems to have patronised the worship of Siva and is hence commonly designated as Saiva Belála: the power of the dynasty was now in its decline, as the Rajas of Kerala, Ohola, and Kanga asserted their independence, and in an attempt to reduce the latter the army of the Belála Raja was almost annihilated by sickness, and was compelled to retire within the barriers of their native ghats. He is said however to have repelled an incursion of the Gauda Raja from the north, and driven the invaders back across the Tungabhadra. It is not clear who is intended by the assailant, unless it be the Gonds, the territory occupied by which tribe probably descended much lower to the south than of late years, and included part of Berar: they may have therefore ventured upon a predatory incursion into the Carnatic. Many grants in this reign are made in the name of the Dandanáyaka, Danaik, the general or military prime minister: the same is observable in the two following reigns, and at this early period therefore Hindu sovereigns seemingly lapsed into the same career, which they have pursued in more modern times : a few reigns of enterprise and vigour, which found and extend the power of a rising race, are followed by a succession of indolence and sensuality, in which the servant becomes the master, and the pageant prince is set aside by his more active minister : in the struggle that ensues a new dynasty is established on the ruins of the old, or the state is subverted by a foreign enemy. Such seems to have been the case in the present instance, and although it is not probable that the Belál kings could have opposed any effectual resistance to the Mohammedan arms, yet it appears likely that internal disunion and decay, facilitated their downfall, and prepared the way for their utter extermination. Dwárasamudra was taken and plundered by a Mussulman army in A. D. 1310-11, and from that period nothing more is preserved by tradition, or in inscriptions, of the Belála kings.

THE YADAVAS.

The authority of the Belálas was limited on the north by the Krishna river, and as there can be little doubt of their disposition to extend their domains far beyond that boundary, we must infer that they had obstacles to encounter in that quarter of more magnitude, than to the east or west. During the latter years of their sovereignty these were presented probably by the power of the Ganapati princes of Telingana, but it is not easy to discover any antagonists of equal strength in the earlier part of their career.

The general lists of the princes of the Dekhin place a dynasty anterior to the Belálas and immediately subsequent to the Pandya and Chola monarchs. These are denominated the Yánavas and eighteen names are enumerated of Rajas who are said to have ruled from Sal. 730 to 1012 or A. D. 808 to 1080. Few circumstances are added to this nomenclature. The capital was Naráyanaram, and Chandragiri and Tripeti were the chief seats of their fame, the fortress at the former, and the principal temples at both, being attributed to some of the family. The resumption of the temple of Tripeti from the Saiwas, and its appropriation to the Vaishnava religion by Rámánuja is said to have occurred in the reign of Toya Yádava the twelfth of the number, which if correct, proves the chronology of these princes to be wrong by about two centuries, and they must have flourished from the eleventh to the thirteenth century or nearly the same time as the Beldál princes; according to some accounts however it was Toya Yádava who cleared the thickets on Chandragiri, and built the fort, whilst other accounts ascribe this to his predecessor Imadi Narasinha, and affix the title of Sribhášhya conferred upon him by Rádmánuja, to his successor Talalugotena Raja. Again Teruvenda Yádava is said to have built the principal temples at Tripeti before the time of Rádmánuja, and he is the fifteenth of the series. The accuracy of any of these identifications is therefore rather questionable, but there is no doubt that a dynasty of princes reigned at Narayan varam about the tenth and eleventh centuries, of sufficient political importance to impose a check upon the extension of the Chola and Belála sovereignties in this part of the Peninsula.

CHALUKYAS.

The princes of this denomination, appear distinguishable into two families, one of which reigned at Kalyán in Karnáta, and the other gave sovereigns to Kalinga, the part of Telingana extending along the sea shore.

Of the former of these, the records are far from satisfactory: a great number of grants in Karnáta are found, which appear to proceed from members of this dynasty, but the family title seems to take the place of individual designations, as the denomination of Tribhuvana or Triloka Malla occurs for nearly two centuries, or from Sal. 924 to 1114 (A. D. 1002 to 1192): the greater number are from Sal. 960 to 990 (A. D. 1033 to 1068) making the granters consequently cotemporary with the first Belála princes. Other names occur, with dates, included in the above range, as that of Víra Ráya of the Chálukya family, king of Kalyán and Banavási, in Sal. 1000 (A. D. 1078), and Someswara of the same race and country, in Sal. 1095, (A. D. 1173.) The latter is also described as the son of Nirangola the son of Raksha Malla entitled Tribhuvana Malla sovereign of Kuntaladésa, the capital of which is Kalyán, the constructor of the hill fort of Kurugode, and the subjugator of the Chola and the Gurjara Rajas; the latter would extend the attempts, if not the conquests of these princes, far to the north-west, and indicates as well as the possession of Banavási a state sufficiently powerful to stop the progress of the Balálas north-west of the Krishna. The grants in which the names of these princes occur are usually made to the shrines of Siva, but about this period of the history of Kalyán its princes were of the Jain persuasion. What relation Vijala Ráya of Kalyán bore to Someswara has not been ascertained, but the former is invariably entitled a Chálukya prince, and was therefore of the same family as well as capital: all the traditions relating to him and to the celebrated Básava the founder of the Jangama religion in the eleventh century, describe him as king of Kalyána, and of the Jain religion. He was murdered by the followers of Básava; and Kalyána, it is said, was utterly destroyed. It is not unlikely that religious disputes undermined the power of the Kalyán kings, and the principality disappeared before the extending sway of the Ganapati kings of Telingana, who appear to have been at first either feudatories of these Chálukya kings or members of the same family.

The maritime division of Telingana or the country from Dravira to Odra from the modern Carnatic to Orissa, appears to have been distinguished from very early times by the appellation Kalinga. It is always so termed by Sanscrit writers, and is known to the nations of the eastern archipelago by the same title or Kling. The inhabitants are described by Pliny as Novissima gens Gangaridum Kalingarum. The history of this tract however is very imperfectly filled up by the documents before us, and until comparatively recent times the traces of its political condition are few and indistinct. The ancient capital is said to have been Srikakola on the Krishna, which was built by Sumati sovereign of all India. It was afterwards the residence of Andhra Ráya a king who is identified with Vishnu, and worshipped as a form of that deity by the name of Andhra Madhusúdana. He is said to have transferred the capital to Rajamahendri on the Godavery, and this is described as the residence of a series of Chálukya princes for some considerable time, from that of Aswamedha Datt the grandson of Janamejaya and consequently a prince of the Pándava race, till the end of the thirteenth century, or the date of Rájanarendra, the son of Vimalayádttya, the patron of Nannaya Bhatt; the last rests upon the authority of inscriptions, the former is a fable. The reputed descendants of the Pandavas were first driven to and finally remained at Kundavola in the Nellore district, and at some subsequent date, princes of the Chálukya dynasty, reigned at Rajamahendri. A list of the kings of this race is given in an inscription which comprises twenty-four descents, and a period of four hundred and two years. The inscription is unluckily without a date. It does not include Rájanarendra nor his father, nor does it allude to the Ganapati kings who flourished in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and it is therefore probably anterior to both. The name or title Vishnuverddhana occurs in it six times, and one of these may be a prince whose grants are very numerous in the Rajamahendri district, who is designated as Kulottunga Chola, the Saptama or seventh Vishnuverddhana. That these are both titles is unquestionable, and that the former, as well as the latter, was assumed by more than one of the Kalinga princes is evident from the grants in the same name at Rajamahendri extending nearly a century from Sal. 1020 to 1104 (A. D. 1098 to 1182.) As the genealogy referred to, does not profess to take up the family from its commencement, we can scarcely venture to compute the period of its origin, although it is not likely to have been very recent. If the last prince entitled Vishnuverddhana, properly named Saktiverma, were the same with the seventh Vishnuverddhana, the first of the series would be placed in Sal. 680 or A. D. 708, an antiquity perhaps higher than is allowable; but one inscription specifies a grant by Vishnuverddhana, Chálukya of Rajamahendri to a temple of Trivikrama in the Condavir district dated 2628 of Kali or 373 years before the Christian era; a date much more questionable. All that we can venture to assert is that these princes reigned at Rajamahendri from the end of the eleventh to the end of the thirteenth century, and may have commenced perhaps two centuries earlier. They might have been connected with the Chálukya of Kalyân, when the power of those princes extended over the country subsequently ruled by the Ganapati Rajas. The last of the list on the inscription, Saktiverma is said to have defeated and killed in battle Kerikála Chola.

Another race of Kalinga princes is found more to the south, in the Gantur Circar and country adjacent to the Krishna river on its approach to the sea. In this tract, traditions particularise a Mukunti Raja as flourishing about a century and a half after Salivāhana, or in the third century of Christianity, and as having encouraged the Brahmans of the seven tribes, which profess to be descended from the seven Rishis, to settle in the country, and granted them villages at Gantur, Kochila, Innagonda, Upatur and other places for their support. The capital of Mukunti Raja was Daranikota, west of Condapilli, and his descendants are said to have reigned for eight hundred years. Some accounts place Mādhavavermā, Kulaketana and Nilkantha, as we shall hereafter see, prior to Mukunti, whilst others call him the son of a girl of the mountain tribe or Chensuars by Mahādeva. The introduction of the Brahmans into this tract is also ascribed to another prince Trinetra Pallava, and an inscription to this purport occurs in the village of Upatur in the Gantur district dated 2000 of the Kali.

These princes, however, although they not improbably ruled over part of the Telinga country in former times, are too imperfectly handed down, for us to attach much importance to their history. The evidence of inscriptions is much more decided in favor of a later race, that ruled in Gantur, that of the Gonka Rajas; like the Rajamahendri princes they assumed the title of Kulottunga Chola, and they reigned about the same time as the former, only for a shorter period. Four descents may be made out of Valanati Kulottunga Chola Gonka Raja, his son Rajendra Chola, his son another Kulottunga, and a fourth prince of the same appellation, who appears to be a different person. Their grants which are numerous in the Gantur Circar extend from Sal. 1022 to 1120 (A. D. 1100 to 1198.) They were, it is related, annihilated in the political sense by the superior power of Ganapati Deva. The Chālukyas of Rajamahendri managed evidently to survive the Ganapati power, and one cause appears to have been an intermarriage with that family, for Pratāpa Rūdra the grandson of Ganapati Deva was the son of that prince's daughter by Chālukya Tilaka, the pride of the Chálukya race. They sunk finally beneath their northern neighbours, the Gajapatis of Cuttack.

We have still another series of kings to notice, who appear to have held the country about the Vennar. These, as has already been noticed, were originally from Rajamahendri, Mahhaséna the son of Aswameddha datta having been expelled from thence by Somasena a foreign prince. With the aid of the Kalinga king, he recovered Rajamahendri, but it was again lost to the family in the reign of his son, Somasekhara who was killed at its capture. His son Uttunga Bhoja escaped, and fled to Kondavole of which place he was elected Raja. He recovered Rajamahendri but conferred it on his general and continued to reside at his new capital. His son Nandana Chakraverti is said to have invited five hundred families of Brahmans from Benares, to whom he gave the village of Nandavaram, the formal grant of which on copper plates is still produced. These transactions of course occurred early in the Kali age. The country over which these princes ruled became subsequently subject to the Pandyan and Chola princes, the Yddavas of Chandragiri, and the Rajas or Paligars of Nellore and Condavir until incorporated with the Vijayanagar dominions.

ANDHRA KINGS.

The portion of Telingana removed from the sea coast, is known in Sanscrit and classical writers by the name Andhra. According to the first of these, the Andhra kings extended at one time their authority to Hindustan, and furnished a series of sovereigns to Magadha, whose capital was Palibothra. According to the latter, the kings of Andhra were sovereigns of great power in the early years of Christianity, and Pliny states of the Andhra king that he was the master of thirty walled towns, and could bring into the field 100,000 foot, 10,000 horse and a thousand elephants.

Notwithstanding these testimonies the local traditions are as usual unsatisfactory in all that relates to the early history of the country, and we have little worthy of notice anterior to the eleventh century, the commencement of the Ká Kateya or Ganapati

Rajas of Warangal. The history of the upper part of the Peninsula, and indeed every attempt at a general history of the whole of the South of India, as well as of different detached portions, commences in the native chronicles, with Yudhishtira, or at the end of the Dwapar and beginning of the Kali age, three thousand years before Christ. The interval to more modern times is thence filled very scantily, by a few descents taken from the Purānas, and Parikshit, Janamejaya, Satānika, Nanda, Ohandragupta, Sarangdhara and Sudrika are the only names that occupy this space till the time of Vikrama fifty-six years before the era of Christianity. To Vikrama, succeeds Sālivāhana, and then, with a very absurd disregard of all chronological consistency, comes Bhoja, who is thus placed anterior to dynasties that must have been longer prior to his time, if they ever existed. It is impossible therefore to include him amongst the monarchs of the south, as it is to place Yudhishtira in the number. It is not unlikely that Vikrama may have extended his authority to the south of the Nermadā, and Sālivāhana whose capital Pratishthāna, now known as Pythan, stood upon the Godaveri, is a legitimate monarch of the Dekhin. The countries along the Godaveri, or between it and the Nermadā, may have been subject to that prince and his successors, early in the Christian era, and their authority may have extended east and south so as to have comprised the upper part of Karnata, and the western portion of Telingana or Andhra. The traditions and monuments of the Peninsula, as far as the Mackenzie Collection extends, have however preserved no particulars of such reigns.

We have already adverted to the existence of a Raja of Gantur, Mukunti, early in the era of Sālivāhana. When Mukunti is not considered as the founder of a local dynasty, the ordinary course of enumeration is Sālivāhana, Mddhava vermā, Kulaketana, Nilakantha, and Mukunti, and these princes are not held to be sovereigns of part of Kalinga only, but of the whole of Telingana. They are followed by the Chola Mahārāja, intending thereby the series of princes so termed, as the period of their Government is said to be 217 years, bringing the whole to the year of Sālivāhana 437 (A. D. 515.) These are succeeded by eight or nine Yavana princes. It is difficult to understand what is meant by the term, as the name Yavana invariably implies foreigners, and in late times Mohammedans. In general, the only name specified is Yavana Bhujā but in one list we have the following named as his descendants :

Nanda who reigned years	62
Bhadra	70
Dumatsena	50
Satyasena	42
Sampati	67
Retnamadana	30
Sumanta	50
Vrishasena	46

or altogether with the reign of Yavana Bhujā which is called 41 years, 458 years bringing the last, to the year of Sálivāhana 875 (A. D. 953.) The succeeding princes are termed the Narapati, Gajapati, and Aswapati or the sovereigns of Warangal, and Orissa, and the Mohammedans. It appears therefore that the termination of the Yavana series is as far as the chronology is concerned, fully two centuries too early. As to its historical accuracy it is impossible to offer any conjecture, as nothing but names is traceable, and those names throw no light on the foreign origin of the individuals as they are all genuine Sanscrit appellations. Whether any such persons existed as these Yavanas is questionable, but the answer to the question must be sought in the countries between the Nermadā and the Krishna. Colonel Mackenzie's enquiries are for the most part bounded by the latter, except along the sea coast and the adjoining districts.

The Kākatēya family is traced to a still higher source, and deduced from the Pāndava family without the intervention of Vikrama or Sálivāhana. One account begins indeed with Vrīshasena, who may be thought the same as Yavana Vrīshasena, but in general the line proceeds direct from Janamejaya through Satānika, and Kshemaka to his two sons Vijaydrka, and Somendra. Their sons, named severally Vishnu Verddhana, and Uttunga Bhujā disagreeing, the latter quitted Upper India, and settled to the south of the Godaveri. His son Nanda who founded the fort of Nandagiri, married the daughter of the Ohola king, by whom he had Vijayapála. His son was Somada or Somadeva whose cattle grazed between the Godaveri and Krishna rivers. They were harried or driven by the Cuttack Baláhadu or prince so titled, apparently the Balhara of the arabic voyagers in the eighth and ninth centuries. The circumstance, which is not singular in the annals of the south, gave rise to a war, and its result is characteristic of the manners of the times, in which such a transaction could have occurred. Having in vain attempted to obtain redress or effect retaliation, Somadeva, had recourse to sacrifice, to procure a son who should revenge his father's wrongs. The Cuttack prince on hearing of this procedure, hastened to stop it, and marched to Kondar the capital of Somadeva, took it, and slew the king. The queen however then pregnant, fled to Anumaconda, where she was concealed by a Brahman named Mádhava Sermá. She was delivered of a son, who in compliment to her protector was named Mádhava vermá. The prince when he grew up won the especial favor of the goddess Padmákshi, and in consequence became master of Anumaconda and defeated and made tributary the sovereign of Cuttack. There was probably some such prince, as traces of him appear in so many various forms. We may attach what credit we please to his early history, to his receiving an enchanted sword and shield from Padmákshi which secured prosperity to his house for ten centuries, and to his own long reign of 160 years.

From Mádhava vermá seven descents, occupying a space of 475 years, proceeded to the prince who appears to have been the actual founder of the Ká Kateya princes of Warangal, Kakati Prolaya or Púla. He appears in the genealogy of the Ganapati kings, as the son of Bhuvanika Malla, or Tribhuvanika Malla, and in one inscription as the son of Tribhuvana Malla. We have already seen that this title belongs to a set of princes of the Ohálukya family of Kalyán, and it is rather unusual for a similar denomination to be borne by two families at the same time. They cannot well be the same, for about the same date the prince of Kalyán is named in various inscriptions, Someswara or Somadeva the son of Tribhuvana Malla, and bearing apparently the same title himself. The Rajas of Kalyán and Anumaconda might have been suspected to be rivals and enemies, and they might each claim an epithet which implies merely, the hero of the universe—but one inscription of the time of Kákati Prolaya is dated in the twenty-third year of Chálukya Vikrama, an acknowledgment of inferiority to the Chálukya princes. It seems probable therefore that before the Kákati family rose to power, they were officers or feudatories of the Chálukya kings of Kalyan. In their early career also, or in the end of the eleventh century of our era, when Kákateya Prolaya reigned, they were Jains, or at least the patrons of the sect. That the wife of Prolaya was a Jain, is proved by her grants—the name of the family is said to be derived from the goddess Kákati, possibly a Jain divinity, to whom Tribhuvana Malla addressed his devotions to obtain a son. The tutelary goddess of the family Padmákshi is also a Jain divinity.

Kákati Prolaya is said to have discovered by accident a Siva lingam which was a Parispatra, or Philosopher's stone, and by the transmutations effected with it, he became possessed of great wealth. As the stone was immoveable; Prolaya removed his capital from Anumaconda to the place where it was found, and there established the new capital of the Kákateya princes, Waran-gal. The date assigned to this event in some accounts is Sal. 990 (1068) but from the Raja's inscriptions, it should seem he was residing at Anumaconda as late as Sal. 1010 (1088.) He is described as a prince of a warlike character, the defeater of Telapa and Govinda Rajas, and even of the Chola king. As already observed however, he appears to have been a feudatory or officer of the Raja of Kalyána whose political ascendancy may have been about this time in the wane, so as to have permitted Prolaya to take upon himself the character of a sovereign.

On the birth of the son of this prince the astrologers foretold he would be the murderer of his father. To prevent this he was exposed, but was found by some persons attached to the temple of the Parispatra Linga, and brought up as an attendant of the inner temple. After he had grown to manhood, the Raja entering the temple suddenly, was treated by the son as a rude intruder and stabbed. The youth being apprehended, his story became known, and the dying Raja recognising the impossibility of evading the decrees of destiny, acknowledged his son, and nominated him his successor.

Rúdra Deva to expiate the crime of killing his father, built a vast number of temples, a thousand it is said, chiefly to Siva. He levied tribute on the Rajas of Outtack, and conquered the Valnad Raja. After some time his brother Mahádeva rebelled, defeated him in battle, and slew him, and assumed the direction of affairs. He left however to the son of Rúdra the title of Yuva Raja, heir and partner of the kingdom. Mahádeva lost his life in war with the Raja of Devagiri.

Ganapati Deva the son of Rúdra succeeded. He was a prince of considerable power, and gives a name to the family, who are often termed Ganapati as Kákateya Rajas. His first exploits were against the Raja of Devagiri in revenge of his uncle's death, and he compelled the Ráma Raja to pay him tribute, and give him his daughter in marriage. He then subdued the Velnad country, probably with the aid of some petty Palligars, particularly one named Jyáya whose two sisters Ganapati Deva married. Jyáya was also his general and fortified, with the Raja's permission, the island of Dévi at the mouth of the Krishna. The Raja also extended his arms to the south, on behalf of the expelled Raja of Nellore whom he restored, receiving in return his allegiance. Ganapati Deva is said to have persecuted the Jains, seizing their temples, and putting many of them to death. He was a devout worshipper of Siva to whom he erected many temples. He built several towns, and enclosed his capital with a stone wall, whence it was named Ekasila Nagara the entire stone city. He was a patron of Telugu literature, particularly, it is said, of Tikkana Somayaji but this is rather doubtful. Various inscriptions record his munificence to the Brahmans, and a document of this kind preserves a transaction of a curious nature, in which a large division of the Brahmanical caste was highly discontented. The Raja gave to his prime minister Goparaj Ramana, the power of appointing secular or Niyogi Brahmans, as the village accountants throughout the principality. The religious Brahmans, or those professing to follow the ritual of the Vedas, opposed the grant, but the influence of the minister prevailed. The inscription specifying this discussion is dated Sal. 1057 (A. D. 1145), but this is erroneous, unless the transaction took place in some other reign, as that of Kákati Prolaya for instance, for numerous inscriptions, as well as the subsequent history of Warangal sufficiently prove that Ganapati Deva lived about the middle of the thirteenth century, or from Sal. 1145 to 1183 (A. D. 1223 to 1261.)

This prince had no male issue. His daughter Umaka or Mumaka was married to Víra Deva or Vírabhadra entitled Chálukya Tilaka the ornament of the forehead of the Chálukya family. It has been conjectured above, that this might have been a prince of the Rájamahendri family. As the lady had not borne a child at the time of her father's death, her mother, Rudrama Devi assumed the regency; which she continued to hold for twenty-eight years, until a grandson was born and had arrived at maturity. This was Pratápa Rúdra the last prince of Warangal of political importance. Umaka bore also a second son named Anama Deva.

Pratápa Rúdra in the early part of his reign was no doubt a prince of power, although tradition ridiculously exaggerates its extent. He is said to have reigned from the Godaveri to Rameswara, and to have carried his arms into Hindustan as far as Prayaga or Allahabad. The territories over which he reigned appear to have extended across the Peninsula between the fifteenth and eighteenth degrees of latitude, being checked on the north-east by the Gajapati Raja of Orissa and on the north and north-west by the Ráma Raja of Devagiri—whilst on the south the Belála Raja and the remains of the Chola sovereignty checked his progress in that division: a more formidable enemy however now appeared on the scene, whom even the Raja of Warangal was unequal to encounter.

According to the traditions of the south, a Mohammedan chief, it does not appear of what state, and the Cuttack Raja being alarmed by the power and ambition of Pratápa Rúdra applied to Delhi for aid; an army was sent to their assistance and besieged Warangal, but was totally defeated. This happened repeatedly until the fated period of one thousand years, during which the goddess Padmākshi had promised prosperity to Mādhava verma and his posterity, expired. Warangal then fell, and Pratāpa Rūdra was taken and carried prisoner to Delhi. The Mohammedan historians confirm these occurrences generally, and place them in 1323 which agrees well enough with the Hindu chronology as derivable from Pratāpa Rūdra's inscriptions. After a short interval, the Delhi Sultan it is said, gave Pratāpa Rūdra his liberty, and he returned to Warangal where he shortly afterwards died. He was succeeded by his son Vīrabhadra in whose time Warangal, it is related, was again taken, and utterly destroyed. Vīrabhadra with his chief adherents fled to Kondavir and founded a new principality. These last events however are not compatible with other Hindu accounts apparently of an authentic character, nor with those of the Mohammedan writers. The Rajas of Warangal are represented by the latter as at various times the allies and enemies of the Bahmini Sultans and the Rayas of Vijayanagar, and although Kondavir became the seat of a new Government, all the records and traditions refer its origin to a new dynasty. Some accounts describe the succession of both Pratāpa Rūdra's sons, and the further continuance of the family as nominally tributary to the Gajapatis of Orissa. Warangal was finally occupied by the Kutteb Shahi kings, and merged into the Mohammedan principality of Golconda.

KONDAVIR.

Upon the decline of the Warangal kingdom the petty chiefs who had been reckoned amongst its feudatories availed themselves no doubt of the opportunity to throw off their allegiance, and assert a claim to independent sovereignty. The records of some of the Palligars trace their origin from this date, although the greater number were again absorbed in the extension of the Vijayanagar supremacy, and the present families date only from the downfall of the latter principality. It is therefore impossible, as it would be uninteresting, to particularise the several independent chiefs who shared amongst them the fragments of the Warangal state, and it will be sufficient to notice the fortunes of two of them : one of which rose to some importance, and left many memorials of its existence in public grants, and inscriptions, and the record of cotemporary writers. The capital of this family was Kondavir, and its authority extended along the Krishna, chiefly in the Gantur circar. On the south they were in contact with the Rajas of Nellore—on the north with those of Orissa, and on the west with the sovereigns of Vijayanagar, beneath whose ascendancy they sunk after an independent reign of about a century.

The first of the family is said to have been a farmer of Anumaconda, who obtained possession of the philosopher's stone. He removed with his treasure to Kondavir, constructed that and other strongholds as Venuconda, Ballamconda, and others and left them to his descendants. From his agricultural profession or rather from his being the head man of his district he was termed Reddi, and the family is known as the Reddiwar or Reddis of Kondavir. The migration of Dhouti Ala Reddi or Prolaya Reddi is variously dated, and the chronology of his descendants differs accordingly. Notwithstanding the comparatively recent occurrence of the event too, the era of the Reddywar rule is very inaccurately stated in all the traditions, and the whole are placed about a century too early, as is established by books and inscriptions. The number of descents is uniformly stated at seven, and this is apparently correct.

The first prince of whom authentic records exist is Ala or Anaváma Reddi; who is probably the founder of the political power of the family. An inscription at Amareswara on the Krishna, specifies his being in possession of Kondavir, Ardingi, and Raichur; his repairing the Causeway at Sri Sailam and the temple at Ameravati, both on the Krishna, and his defeating various Rajas, amongst whom the Kakateyas only are of note. The inscription is dated Sal. 1283, or A. D. 1361, and consequently follows nearly the period at which Warangal was taken by the Mohammedans, an event likely to have been followed by the erection of an independent state by a family, the members of which were previously opulent landholders or heads of a district, under that principality.

One tradition describes the downfall of the race to Raksha or Rachcha, who reigned oppressively and was assassinated;—

another, with great inconsistency ascribes it to the conquest of Langúla Gajapati, who flourished in the thirteenth century, a third account and not improbably the correct one, is that of the Amukta Málá, in which it is related that Kondavir, was taken in the reign of Vírabhadra Váma Reddi by Krishna Raya, the sovereign of Vijayanagar, in the beginning of the sixteenth century. The annals of Orissa, however relate the capture of Condapilly and consequently the invasion of the Reddi principality by Capeleswara, who reigned from A. D. 1451 to 1478, and it is not unlikely that he began the work of subversion which Krishna Raya completed. From the latter period till the overthrow of Vijayanagar by the Mohammedans, Kondavir continued to be part of the possessions of that state. The Reddiwar, were great patrons of Telugu literature, and Srinath, translator of portions of the Puránas and author of various poetical compositions, flourished under the last of the dynasty.

NELLORE.

This appears to have been the seat of a petty principality at various periods from the extinction of the Chola authority in the upper part of the Dekhin to the reign of the Ganapati princes. It had its own Rajas, apparently as late as the reign of Ganapati Deva, to whom one of its princes being expelled by his competitor Bayana, repaired for assistance. He was accordingly restored by the Raja of Warangal. Other accounts however state that the prince in the Government of Nellore was a fugitive from the western country, who was made sovereign of the province by Ganapati Deva. He was named Amboja Deva. On his death without issue, Mánavakesava, was appointed by the Warangal Raja, governor of the country, and he was succeeded by his son Mánava Siddhi: the latter is celebrated for his patronage of the family of Tikkana, three grandsons of Bháskara mantri, so named, of whom one was his minister, another his general, and the third and most illustrious, a poet the continuator of the Telugu translation of the Mahábhárat under the patronage of Pratápa Rúdra. On the downfall of the Warangal kingdom, Siddhi Raja was engaged in hostilities with Kátama petty Raja of Pálnád, and both lost their lives in the contest. Their principalities were presently after subdued by the Reddis of Kondavir.

GAJAPATIS OF CUTTACK.

The Mackenzie Collection is not rich in materials illustrating the history of Orissa. With the exception of some inscriptions, the only authority that is given is a genealogical account of the Gangavamsa princes, from Choranga Vamsa Deva in Sal. 315, to Purushottama Deva, in Sal. 985. Inscriptions by several of these princes prove that this chronology of the race is from five to six centuries too ancient, and Choranga or more properly Chora Ganga Deva must have lived in the twelfth century of the Christian era, whilst the last, Purushottama, reigned in the fifteenth or sixteenth. In general the inscriptions confirm the account given by Mr. Stirling,* which is altogether much fuller and more satisfactory than anything derivable from the Mackenzie Collection. A few trifling matters may perhaps admit of correction, and an inscription procured since Mr. Stirling wrote, by Mr. Colvin, shews that Choranga was not the founder of the Ganga Vamsa family, but that the first who came into Kalinga, was Ananta Verma,—also called Koldhala, sovereign of Ganga Rdrhi—the low country on the right bank of the Ganges or Tumlook and Midnapore: this occurred at the end of the eleventh century of our era, and from that till the beginning of the sixteenth, the same family occupied the province of Orissa, the boundaries of their rule being extended or contracted variously at various times according to the personal characters of the princes themselves and of those to whom they were opposed. They seem accordingly notwithstanding the contrary pretensions of their panegyrists, to have made little way to the southward, until the overthrow of the Warangal kings. In the course of the fifteenth century they penetrated to Conjeveram, but were compelled to recede before the superior activity and resources of the Rayas of Vijayanagar. The advance of the Mohammedans prevented the Vijayanagar princes from following up their success: the vicinity of the same enemies as well as intestine discord confined the Rajas of Cuttack to the natural limits of the province. In A. D. 1558, the Mohammedan general of Bengal invaded the country, killed the Raja, or compelled him to fly it was never known whither, and finally overthrew the independent sovereignty of Orissa.

* Asiatic Researches, vol. XV.

VIJAYANAGAR.

We now come to the last Hindu principality of any note in the annals of the South of India.

The foundation of the state of Vijayanagar is very generally admitted to have arisen out of the subversion of the Hindu Governments of the Kákteya and Belala Rajas by the incursions of the Mohammedans in the beginning of the fourteenth century, and traditions are tolerably well agreed as to the individuals to whom it is ascribed, Harihara and Bukka Raya, and the celebrated scholar Mádhava entitled Vidyaranya the forest of learning. Accounts however vary very considerably as to the circumstances which connected these persons with the event, or the share they bore in it.

One tradition ascribes the origin of Vijayanagar to Mádhava who having by his devotions obtained the favour of Bhuvaneswari was directed by her to the discovery of a treasure with which he built the city of Vidyánagar or Vijayanayar and reigned over it himself; leaving it to the Kurma or Kuruba family. Another statement describes him as founding the city, and establishing the principality for Bukka, a shepherd who had waited on him and supported him in his devotions. A third account states that Harihara and Bukka two fugitives from Warangal after it was taken by the Mohammedans encountered the sage in the woods, and were elevated by him to the sovereignty over a city which he built for them, and a fourth statement whilst it confirms the latter part of the story, makes the two brothers officers of the Mohammedan conqueror of Warangal, who were sent by their master, after the capture of that city, against the Belál Raja. They were defeated, and their army dispersed, and they fled into the woods where they found Vidyaranya. His treasures enabled them to collect another army with which they obtained a victory over the Beldl Raja, but instead of rendering him the servant of their superior, they set up for themselves, by the advice and with the aid of the hermit. There is good reason to know that none of these traditions are entirely correct, although they preserve perhaps, some of the events that actually occurred. Vidyāranya or Mādhava was a learned and laborious writer, and in various works particularises himself as the minister of Sangama the son of Kampa a prince whose power extended to the southern, eastern and western seas. He also terms Bukka and Harihara the sons of Sangama, and the same relationship is confirmed by inscriptions. The political importance of Sangama is no doubt exaggerated, but it is clear that Bukka and Harihara were not the mere adventurers they are traditionally said to have been. They were descended from a series of petty princes or landholders, possibly feudatories of the Belál kings or even of Pratāpa Rūdra, who took advantage of a period of public commotion to lay the foundation of a new state. Besides experience and talent, Mādhava may have brought pecuniary aid to the undertaking. His title Vidyāranya, and the scope of his writings, shew that he was a disciple of Sankarā chūrya, and in all probability he was connected with the Sringagiri establishment, the members of which alarmed by the increasing numbers of the Jangamas and Jains, and the approach of the Mohammedans, may have contributed their wealth and influence to the aggrandisement of the sons of Sangama.

However this may be, there can be no question that the city of Vijayanagar was founded by Bukka and Harihara, on the southern bank of the Tungabhadra river, about the middle of the fourteenth century. The date most commonly given for the foundation of Vijayanagar is Sal. 1258, or A. D. 1336, but this is perhaps a few years too soon. The earliest of the grants of Bukka Raya is dated in A. D. 1370, and the latest 1375. The period of his reign is usually called fourteen years which would place his accession to the throne in 1361. Some accounts give him a reign of thirty-four years which places him in 1341. So that the traditional chronology is not in all likelihood very far from the truth.

From Bukka to Virūpāksha, the third of the name, the usual lists give thirteen princes and a hundred and fifty three years. This series is not entirely confirmed by inscriptions, as is observed elsewhere, (page 265); we have from them but five princes in regular succession, and a sixth cotemporary with the fourth, who may have been the nominal minister or general, although in actual power the prince. There may be some omissions in the grants, but the number of Rajas in the ordinary lists is rather disproportionate to the whole interval, and allows less than twelve years for the average reign. In this time the Rajas of Vijayanagar, added considerably to their territorial possessions; having subdued the coast of Canara, and great part of Karnata and Telingana. The simultaneous origin and progress of the Bhamini kings prevented their extending their dominions to the north, and on more than one occasion the destruction of the principality was threatened by the superior prowess and enterprise of the Mohammedans. Towards the close of the fifteenth century the Hindu Rajas enjoyed a respite of some duration, in consequence of the decline of the Bhamini dynasty, and foundation of those of Bijapur and Ahmednagar. Instead however of consolidating their power, or taking advantage of the dissensions of their enemies, the opportunity seems to have been lost in discord and disorganisation at home.

The circumstances under which the Kuruba family became extinct are but obscurely adverted to in any of our authorities. The last prince was Virúpáksha whose grants extend from A. D. 1473 to 1478. According to some accounts his territory was subdued by a Telinga Raja, but others say that having no issue, he raised one of his slaves named Sinhama, a Telinga by birth, to the throne. Agreeably to the latter version of the story, Sinhama, entitled Praurha Deva, reigned but four years, and his son Vira Narasinha who succeeded him, but two: he being also childless gave his signet to his falconer, Narasa or Narasinha. An interval of eight years occurs between the inscriptions of Virúpáksha and Narasinha which these events would conveniently supply. There is no question that Narasinha was of a different family and nation from the preceding Rajas of Vijayanagar, and became irregularly possessed of the throne. He is admitted to have been a Telinga, and is usually called the son of Iswara Raja the petty sovereign of Karnul and Arviri, a tract of country on the Tunga-bhadra to the east of it, near its junction with the Krishna; his grants extend from A. D. 1487 to 1508.

Narasinha had two sons Viranarasinha and Krishna Raya, the former by one of his queens, the latter by a slave or concubine: a story is related of the exposure of Krishna Raya when a child by order of the queen who was jealous of the favour he enjoyed with his father. He was secretly brought up by one of the ministers, and restored to Narasinha when dying, who bequeathed to him the succession which by the judicious measures of the minister he secured. Some accounts state that he acted as the minister and general of his brother whilst he lived, and became Raja on the death of that prince, other accounts assert that the latter was deposed, and one narrative adds that he died of vexation in consequence. It is clear that the regal power was usurped by Krishna Raya, at first perhaps in a subordinate character, but finally as Raja.

The existence of an independent principality on the east so near as Karnul, the presence of the Mohammedan sovereignties on the north, and the continued series of Pandyan and Chola princes to the south, shew that the Ráj of Vijayanagar could not boast of a very spacious domain on Krishna Raya's accession. From the range however of the grants of former princes, particularly of Harihara, it cannot be questioned that their sway had at one time extended much further east, and it must have therefore been considerably reduced before the Kuruba dynasty was exterminated—Krishna Raya not only restored the kingdom to its former limits but extended them in every direction. He defeated the Adil Shahi princes on the north, and maintained possession of the country to the southern bank of the Krishna, on the east he captured Kondavir and Warangal, and ascended to Cuttack where he wedded the daughter of the Raja as the bond of peace. In the south his officers governed Seringapatam, and as we have seen founded a new dynasty of princes at Trichinopoly and Madura. The western coast had been held apparently through some extent by his predecessors, but he added to the Vijayanagar territory in that quarter also, and his besieging and taking Rachol on Salsette is recorded by Portuguese writers, whilst the imperfect traditions of Malabar preserve the fact of part of that province at least having been governed by the officers of Krishna Raya, although they refer the circumstance to an erroneous era. At no period probably in the history of the south of India did any of its political divisions equal in extent and power that of Vijayanagar in the reign of Krishna Raya.

The reputation of Krishna Raya is not restricted to his warlike achievements, and he is celebrated as the great patron of Telugu literature. He is said to have had a number of eminent men attached to his court, eight of whom were particularly famed, and are known as the Ashta dig-gaja, in allusion to the eight elephants that support the universe at the cardinal and intermediate points of the compass. The names of some of these will be found in the following pages as well as a notice of a number of their compositions.

The Hindu traditions represent Krishna Raya as conducting his affairs both in peace and war in person: they acknowledge, however, that he benefited by the aid and council of the Brahman minister of his father, who had preserved his life, and who continued to be his minister until his death, three years preceding that of the Raja. This person is named Timma Raja, and is evidently the same with the Heemraje of Scott who makes so great a figure in the Mohammedan annals. The account given by Ferishta of the various pageant princes successively elevated and deposed by Heemraj, originates probably in the circumstances attending the death of Víranarasinh and the accession of Krishna Raya, but the particulars are evidently confused and inaccurate: the date of numerous inscriptions testifying for instance the reign of Krishna Raya for above twenty years, although the Mohammedan account would leave it to be concluded that he came to the throne an infant, and died without reaching maturity.

The transactions that followed the death of Krishna Raya are very unsatisfactorily related by the native writers. The prince had no legitimate male children of his own, and the nearest heir Achyuta Raya who is variously termed his brother, cousin, and nephew, being absent, he placed a prince named Sadasiva on the throne, under the charge of Ráma Raja his own son-in-law. Achyuta returned and assumed the Government, and on his death Sadasiva succeeded under the care and control of Ráma as before. There is in some statements an intimation of a short-lived usurpation by a person named Salika Timma, and of the murder of the young prince who succeeded Krishna Raya in the first instance, and the Mohammedan accounts tend to shew that some such transaction took place. On the downfall of the usurper, the succession proceeded as above described. The reigns of Achyuta and Sadasiva and the cotemporary existence of Ráma, are proved by numerous grants. Those of Achyuta extend through a period of twelve years from A. D. 1530, to 1542 and Sadasiva's from 1542 to 1570, whilst those of Ráma occur from 1547 to 1562. Who Sadasiva was, does not very distinctly appear. Some accounts call him the son of Achyuta, whilst others represent him as descended from the former Rajas of Vijayanagar; at any rate it is evident that during Ráma's life he was but a pageant prince. According to the Mohammedan author, Ramraj was the son of Heemraj and son-in-law of a Raja whom he names Sivaroy, erroneously for Krishnaroy. Rama Ray, he adds, succeeded on his father's death, to his office and power, and on the death of an infant Raja, for whom he managed the affairs of the Government, he placed another infant of the same family on the musnud, and committing the charge of the prince's person to his maternal uncle named Hoji Trimal Roy, retained the political administration of the state. During his absence on a military excursion, the uncle of the Raja and several nobles conspired against the minister, and gained to their party the officer of Ramraj, one of his slaves who had been left in military charge of the capital. Finding the insurgents too strong for him Ráma submitted to an amicable compromise with them, and was allowed to reside on his own territorial possessions. After a short interval the slave being no longer necessary was murdered, and Trimal the uncle assumed the whole power. He next killed his nephew and reigned on his own behalf; conducting himself with great tyranny, the chiefs conspired to dethrone him, but with the assistance of Ibrahim Adil Shah he was enabled to maintain his authority. On the retreat of his Mohammedan allies, the Hindu nobles with Ráma at their head again rebelled, defeated the usurper, and besieged him in his palace in Vijayanagar, when finding his fortune desperate, he destroyed himself. Ráma then became Raja. Now comparing this with the Hindu accounts we should be disposed to identify Hoje Trimal with Achyuta Raya. Some of the Hindu accounts as above noticed, concur with the Mohammedan as to the murder of the young prince, and in Salika Timma we may have the slave of Ráma although the part assigned him in the two stories does not exactly coincide. Ráma, both agree, was obliged to resign the authority he held after the death of Krishna Raya. The only irreconcilable point is that of the Hindu accounts which specify the appointment in the first instance of Sadasiva. But the weight of evidence is unfavourable to their accuracy, and Sadasiva was probably made Raja by Ráma and his party in opposition to Achyuta Raya. This will account for the uncertainty that prevails as to his connection with Krishna Raya, as well for his being taken, as some statements aver, from the family of the former Rajas.

That Ráma Raja was a man of spirit and conduct is evident from the course of Mohammedan history. The princes of the Dekhin were glad to court his alliance. Ali Adil Shah and Kutteb Shah were compelled to purchase his forbearance by territorial concessions. The arrogance with which he seems to have been in consequence inflated, led him to treat their ambassadors with indignity, and insulted pride, religious bigotry and political dread combined them in arms against him. The Padshahs of Bijapore, Golconda, Dowlatabad, and Berar, united their forces in the year 1564, and marched to Talikota, on the Krishna, to overthrow the power of the Vijayanagar principality. The Hindu prince on hearing of their designs collected a powerful force, and occupied the right bank of the Krishna, which the allies were unable to cross in the face of the hostile army. By a judicious feint the Sultans drew the Hindu prince away from the ford and effected the passage—a general action ensued in which the Hindus had the advantage until the Raja was taken prisoner. The Hindu account says that the divisions of Kutteb Shah and Nizam Shah had been defeated, but the forces of Ali Adil and Ammad al Mulk covered their retreat. The Hindus conceiving the enemy annihilated gave themselves up to rejoicing and festivity, and were surprised in their encampment. Ferishta who may be considered as a cotemporary, admits that the wings of the Mohammedan army were thrown into disorder, and that some of the leaders despaired of the day, when it was retrieved by the success of the centre under Nizam Shah and the capture of Ráma Raja. The Hindu prince was taken before Nizam Shah who ordered his head to be struck off, and mounted on a lance to intimidate the victorious division of the Hindu army. The Hindu accounts concur in the capture and death of Ráma Raja but ascribe them to Ali Adil Shah. The Sultan is described as beheading the Raja with his own hand at the request of the latter, to save him from the personal degradation of confinement. The Hindu memoirs assert that Ali Adil Shah was forced into the war by the other Mohammedan princes, but Ferishta makes him the author of the confederacy. That writer mentions also the visit made formerly by Ali Adil Shah to Vijayanagar to secure the alliance of Ramraj and his adoption as a son by the Raja's mother. In the Ramaraaja Charitra the Hindu prince terms the sultan his son, and reminds him how often in infancy he had sat upon his knees. In complying with his request and striking off his head, Ali Adil Shah, is represented as performing no more than filial duty.

After the defeat of the Hindu prince the confederates marched to Vijayanagar, which they took, plundered and destroyed. Ferishta writing about twenty or thirty years afterwards, observes, that the city was still uninhabited and in ruins, whilst the country was occupied by the Zemindars, each of whom had assumed an independent power in his own district. Several of these were members either of the Royal Family of Vijayanagar or of that of Ráma Raja. Grants in the reign of Sadasiva are continued to Sal 1492, (A. D. 1570), six years after the battle of Talikota, and his descendants are traced as sovereigns of the principality of Bednur to the middle of the eighteenth century. Venkatadri one brother of Ráma maintained himself at Belkonda and Chendragiri, whilst another brother Trimal, retained possession of Penakonda. A son of Ráma Raja, with the aid of one of his uncles, recovered possession of Anagundi and Vijayanagar : on the direct line becoming extinct, Venkapati a kinsman of the Chendragiri branch succeeded ; the seventh from him, Timmapá, was dispossessed by Tipu Sultan and became a pensioner of the British Government.

It would extend this sketch of the history of the South of India beyond the limits we have proposed, to enter into the family histories of the many petty chiefs who succeeded to the fragments of the Vijayanagar principality after its subversion, and of most of whom, ample notices are to be found in the Mackenzie Collections. The family of most celebrity, and the only one now retaining any importance, that of the Hindu Rajas of Mysore, has found a historian, and the rest are scarcely of sufficient political importance to deserve one. A reason which will probably be thought satisfactory has also been assigned for not making any use of the Mohammedan and Mahratta collections in the present outline, and to this may be added the want of space necessarily attending the summary form of an introduction. The same cause precludes any advantage being taken of the materials which exist for illustrating the manners and institutions of the various tribes of the Dekhin, and which are fully delineated in the documents specified in the ensuing pages. If opportunity should hereafter occur, and the requisite authority be obtained, these subjects as well as a fuller account of the political revolutions of the Peninsula may be reduced at some future period to a shape fitted for public perusal.

SANSCRIT BOOKS.

VEDAS.

1.—Rig Veda.

Palm leaves—Nandinágarí Character.

The Rik or Rich is usually considered as the first of the four Vedas, and is so named from its consisting chiefly of hymns or laudatory prayers; (from Rich, to laud or praise.) The collection of the hymns of this Veda is called its Sanhitá, and the Sanhitá is subdivided into eight Ashtakas, or ten Mandalas, or sixty-four Adhyáyas, and contains rather more than 1,000 Súktas or Hymns, or 10,000 Richas or Stanzas. This manuscript contains the Sanhitá incomplete, or complete Ashtakas, 1st, 2nd and 5th; the first four, and 7th and 8th Adhyáyas of the fourth Ashtaka; first six Adhyáyas of the 6th Ashtaka, and the first four Adhyáyas of the eighth Ashtaka. The Nandinágarí character differs very little from the Devanágarí.

2.—The Rig Veda.

Palm leaves—Nandinágarí Character.

This contains four Sections of the third Book, or Ashtaka.

P U R A N A S.

1.—Padma Purāna.

a. Paper—Devanāgarī Character.

b. Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

The manuscript a. comprises three different portions of this work.

1. A portion of the Pátála khanda, containing the episode of the seizure of the sacrificial horse liberated by Rāma, by Viramani, a follower of Siva, and his discomfiture and death in consequence, with the interview between Siva and Rāma, and the restoration of the king to life by the combined favour of the two deities.

2. A portion of the Uttara khanda, the conversation between Dilīpa and Vasishtha, and subsequently between Siva and Párvati, upon the efficacy of ablution and religious rites in the month of Mágh. This section includes an enumeration of the Puránas, substituting the Vishnu for the Váyu, it also classes the Puránas, thus :—

The Matsya, Kúrma, Linga, Siva, Skanda, and Agni Puránas, are of the Tama Guna, the quality of darkness or ignorance.

The Vishnu, Nárediya, Bhágavat, Garúra Padma, and Varáha belong to the Sátwika quality.

The Brahmdnda, Bhavishya, Márkandeya, Vámana, and Brahmá, are of the Rajas, or quality of passion.

3. Pulastya's conference with Bhíshma relating to places of pilgrimage, &c. being part of the first section or Srishti khand.

Manuscript b. contains the greater portion of the Uttara khanda or last portion, commencing with the 29th Chapter and ending with the 50th. It is little else than a manual of different Vratas or religious rites to be observed on various days of the fortnight, or in different months, as narrated in conversations between the Pándavas and Náreda, Siva and Párvati and others.

2.—Agni Purána.

Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

The Purána, originally communicated by Agni to Vasishtha. It comprises 320 sections, and contains a number of curious articles as, in addition to the usual topics, it has portions on Niti or the duties of Kings, on medicine, grammar, prosody and Dhanurvedyá or the use of weapons. It is avowedly subsequent to the Mahábhárat, to which it refers : it is a Vaishnava Purána, although not a very decided party work, and is referred by the Vaishnavas to the class of Saiva Puránas.

3.—Vishnu Purána.

a. Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

b. Palm leaves—Grandham Character, imperfect.

One of the great Puránas of the Vaishnava order. It is related by Parásara to Maitreya, and is very full on the subject of the principal votaries of Vishnu, as Prahláda and others, it contains also a copious genealogy of Hindu kings, and the life of Krishna. It is divided into six portions. Manuscript b. contains the two last sections only.

4.—Garúra Purána.

- a. Paper—Devanágari Character.
- b. Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

The Purána, is named from Garúra, as one of the rewards of his devotion, whilst yet a Bird, to Vishnu: the substance was communicated by Vishnu to Rudra, and overheard by Brahmá, by whom it was revealed to Vyása: it is a Vaishnava Purána, but abounds with Tantrika rites and formulæ: it contains also an astronomical and medical portion: the latter of some length, but no history nor genealogy. Manuscript a. is incomplete.

5.—Brahmavaivartta Purána.

Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

This Purána is so named from its containing an account of the worldly manifestations of the Supreme spirit or Brahma, here identified with Krishna. It is narrated by Sauti, to the Rishis, extends to 18,000 stanzas, and consists of four portions. The Brahma khanda describing the creation and the nature of the deity. The Prakriti khanda treating of the various forms of the female personifications of passive matter. The Ganesa Khanda describing the birth and adventures of Ganesa, and the Krishna Janma Khanda relating the birth and acts of Krishna, and his mistress Rádhá: the manuscript is incomplete, beginning with the 1st and ending with the 40th Chapter.

6.—Linga Purána.

- a. Palm leaves—Telugu Character.
- b. Palm leaves—Grandham Character.

A Purána of the Saiva class: it is supposed to be narrated to Náreda and the Rishis at the Naimisha forest by Súta, who heard it from Vyása. It consists of 11,000 verses, in two books. The first gives an account of the origin of the Linga and various forms of Siva; the usual Pauranic description of the universe, and a few genealogical events from Priyavrata to Krishna. The destruction of Tripura and other demons by Mahádeva, or the members of his family, and instructions for the performance of different ceremonies in honour of Mahádeva. The latter subject is continued through the second book, illustrated by different legendary tales: the first book consists of 105 sections, the second of 48: in some copies the division is different, as in the present in which the second book contains 55 sections. Manuscript a. is part of the second portion of the Linga Purána, from the fourth to the fifty-fifth and last chapter. Manuscript b. contains the last section of the first portion, and the last portion entire.

7.—Márkandeya Purána.

Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

The first portion of the Márkandeya Purána, consisting of seventy-three sections. This Purána is related by four birds of marvellous origin to Jaimini, on his being referred to them by the sage Márkandeya. It commences with some account of Krishna and his usual companions, of whom his brother Baladeva is said to have slain Síta the usual narrator of the Puránas: a variety of ordinary legends, chiefly of a Vaishnava character follow, with an account of the creation of the universe, as communicated by Márkandeya to Krostuki, and a description of the different Manwantaras with legends of the events which severally occurred, or are to occur, in those periods, all of a mythological or superhuman character. The Chandi Páth, or Durgá Máhátmya, in which the victories of Durgá over different Asuras are recorded, and which is a work of great repute in almost all parts of India, is a portion of this Purána. It is introduced as the history of the Muni of the eighth period, or Sávarni the son of the sun, who in the second or Swárochisha Manwantara, was a king named Suratha, to whom the exploits of Durga were then related, in consequence of hearing which, and his propitiation of the goddess, he became a Menu in a subsequent birth. The Márkandeya Purána is said to contain 9000, Stanzas.

8.—Kúrma Purána.

- a. Paper—Devanágari Character.
- b. Palm leaves—Telugu Character.
- c. Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

This Purána although named after one of the avatárs of Vishnu, the tortoise, is considered as one of those especially belonging to the Saiva sects. It recommends the worship of Mahádeva as Rudra or Nílalohita. It contains like the rest, an enumeration of all the eighteen Puránas. The list given in this work is the following, the Brahmá, Padma, Siva, Bhágavat Bhavishya, Náradíya, Márkandeya, Agni, Brahmavaivartta, Linga, Varáha Skanda, Vámana, Kúrma, Matsya, Garúra, Váyu and Brahmánda Puránas. The Manuscript a. contains but 37 sections; the complete work is in two parts, section first containing 55, and section second 47 portions. Manuscripts b. and c. are entire.

9.—Sri Bhágavat.

Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

- a. First and Second Books.
- b. Third Book.
- c. Fourth and Fifth Books.
- d. Sixth Book.
- e. Seventh, Eighth, and Ninth Books.
- f. Tenth Book.
- g. Tenth Book.
- h. Tenth Book.
- i. Eleventh and Twelfth Books.

This Purána, is the most celebrated and one of the most modern of the number; it is not the less valuable as it is much more full than any of the rest. It also contains much that has been drawn from other sources, which though somewhat disfigured, is consequently preserved.

The first book or Skanda comprises in 19 chapters, the opening, the encounter of Súta and Saunaka, when the former repeats what he related to the Rishis, the supremacy of Vishnu and faith in him, his Avatárs, the history of Náreda, the account of Parikshit after the disappearance of the Pandus and Krishna, and of this king being cursed by a Rishi, and bitten by a venomous snake.

In the second Book Súka, to prepare Parikshit for death, relates to him the Bhágavat, the substance of which was originally communicated by Brahmá to Náreda, in four verses: the creation of the world, the 24 Avatars of Hari, the excellence of Náráyana and end of the Brahmakalpa: 10 chapters.

Book 3rd, 36 Chapters. The several creations and destructions, the submersion of the Vedas, and their recovery by the Boar incarnation, also the Kapila Avatár : the narration here proceeds in a conversation between Vidura and Maitreya.

Book 4th, 31 Chapters, contains the genealogy of the Manu Swayambhuva's progeny, the quarrel between Daksha and Mahádeva and the elevation of Dhruva, to the dignity of the Pole Star, the history of Vena and Prithu, and the story of Prachetas.

Book 5th, 26 Chapters. Of Priyavrata and his sons, of his grandson Nábhi, of Rishabha and Bharata. Description of Jambudwípa, of the other Dwipas, situation of the sun and planets, &c.

Book 6th, 19 Chapters. The histories of Ajamila, Viswarúpa, Vritrásura, of the family of the sun and origin of the Márutts.

Book 7th, 15 Chapters. History of Hiranyaka sipu and Prahláda, of Tripurásura, and duties of a Brahmachári.

Book 8th, 24 Chapters. Of the Menus subsequent to Swayambhuva, of the sacrifice of Bali and Dwarf Avatár, of the Matsya Avatár.

Book 9th, 24 Chapters. Of the Vaivaswata Manwantara, the sons of Ikshwáku and descendants of the Menu, and the genealogies of kings to the birth of Krishna.

Book 10th. In two parts. Part 1st, 49 Chapters : the adventures of Krishna until his departure from Vrindávan. Part 2nd : the adventures of Krishna and his posterity.

Book 11th, 31 Chapters. Of faith in Krishna and his worship, of his death, and the destruction of Dwáraká and the Yádava race.

Book 12th, 13 Chapters. Of the kings subsequent to Parikshit, vices of the Kali age, death of Parikshit, description of the Vedas and Puránas, meditation of Márkandeya and praises of the Bhágavat Purána.

10.—The Matsya Purána.

Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

This Purána is related by Súta to the Rishis in reply to their enquiry why Vishnu assumed the form of a fish, and it commences with the story of Vaiwasvata Menu, and the deluge, as translated by Sir William Jones from the Bhágavat. The Menu asks the Fish the story of the creation of the universe, &c. and his replies constitute the supposed original of this Purána, which contains the history of the different Manwantaras, some genealogical and legendary accounts of the kings of the Solar and Lunar Races to the time of Krishna, directions for observing different Vratas, geographical description of the universe, various wars between the Gods and Demons, and especially the destruction of Táraka, Hiranyakasipu, and Andhaka, the excellence of Kási, and a number of other Tirthas. Some chapters then follow on Polity, Punishment, Purification, and Sacrifice, and the work concludes with a short prophetic notice of the Kali age, the Mlechcha princes, who are to rule in it, and the efficacy of gifts. The work comprises 264 sections, of which this copy contains but sixty-two.

11.—Varáha Purána.

Palm leaves—Grandham Oharacter.

The Varáha Purána is communicated in the form of a dialogue between Vishnu, as the Varáha, or Boar Avatár, and the earth to whom the deity relates the creation of the universe, the origin of the Rishis and their descendants, the mode of observing a number of Vratas, or religious obligations, the division of the universe, the destruction of Mahishásura by Devi, and the efficacy of gifts. The different rites to be performed, holy places to be visited, and amongst these the supremacy of Mathurá. The work sometimes appears as divided into three books, of which the first contains 107 sections, the second 60, and the third or Mathurá Máhátmya 64.

12.—Viswakarma Purána.

a. Paper—Telugu Character.

b. Palm leaves—Karnáta Character.

A compilation of formulæ and legends relating to Viswakarma and the castes of artificers, attributed idly to Viswakarma. The first is rather a Telugu than Sanscrit work, the Sanscrit passages from the Vedas and Puránas, serving as a text for a fuller explanation in the Telugu language. The second is a different work, agreeing only in name and subject.

13.—Vrihat Nārādīya Purāna.

Paper—Devanāgarī Character.

The Vrihat Nārādīya, or great Nārādīya is so named to discriminate it from the Nāreda or Nārādīya Purana, or perhaps from the latter, which is an Upapurāna : unless however the same with the latter it cannot be properly included in either class. Although said to contain 25,000 stanzas, it is rarely if ever met with of that extent, and appears to be complete in 38 sections, containing about 3,500 stanzas. It is a Vaishnava work, supposed to be repeated by Sūta to the Rishis, having been originally communicated by Brahmā to Nāreda, and by Nāreda to Sanatkumāra. There is little in this Purāna conformable to the ordinary contents of such works, and such legends as are found are mere vehicles for panegyrics upon Vishnu, and recommendations of implicit devotion to that Divinity.

14.—Sri Bhāgavat Purāna.

Paper—Devanāgarī Character.

A Purāna of importance in the literary history of these works, as it is distinct from the popular work of the same name, supposed by some to be a later composition : it is named from Bhagavatī or Durgā, whence it is identified with the Dēvi Bhāgavat an Upapurāna, but perhaps erroneously, as it is narrated by Sūta like the rest, and is termed a Mahāpurāna : we have in this, the following enumeration of the Purānas.

The Matsya ,	Stanzas	14,000
„ Mārkaṇḍeya ,	„	9,000
„ Bhaviṣhya ,	„	14,500

The list of Upapuránas is the following :

Sanatkumára, Narasinha, Náradíya, Siva, Durvasas, Kapila, Usanas, Menu, Varuna, Kálíka, Sám̐ba, Nandi, Saura, Parásara, Aditya, Maheswara, Bhágavata and Vasisht̐ha.

15.—Bhavishyottara Purána.

Paper—Devanágari Character.

A Supplement to the prophetic Purána, supposed to be revealed by Krishna to Yudhisht̐hira. The subjects of the work are the visit of Vydsa to Yudhisht̐hira, the creation of the world, the origin of Máyá the impurities of human nature, sins and their removal by various observances. The Manuscript is complete, containing 243 pages.

16.—Kálíká Purána.

Paper.—Devanágari Character.

This Purána is communicated by Márkandeya to the Rishis, in explanation of the union of Kálí or Párvatí with Siva. It is a voluminous work, in 98 or 100 Chapters, and consists of legends relating to the different manifestations of Devi, as Yoganidra or Sati, with the legend of Daksha's sacrifice ; as Umá, or Kálí, or Girijá or Párvatí, or Bhadrakálí, Kámákhyá, or Kámeswarí, &c. The work contains nothing of ordinary Pauranic matters, as the genealogies of the Menus or kings, or the disposition of the universe, but in their stead has a number of legends peculiar to itself, as the story of Arundhatí, of the River Chandrabhágá, and of Naraka, the son of the Earth, the birth of Bhairava and Vetála, and the origin of the Brahmaputra river, with the circumstances that gave sanctity to many parts of Kámarupa or Asam. It contains, also, instructions for the performance of various acts of worship and devotion, conformably to the system of the Tantras, to which class of works it is closely allied. This copy is far from complete, extending to but one-third of the work.

Paper.—Devanágari parts.

This Purána is attributed as usual to Súta, the pupil of Vyása, who repeats to the sages in Naimisháranya, what had been originally communicated to Daksha by the Rishi, Mudgala, whence the name of the Purána. It is avowedly subsequent to the other Puránas, which the introduction states had been previously revealed to the Munis and had left them undetermined which deity or faith to prefer : they therefore propose their doubts to Súta, and to remove them he repeats this work, the object of which is to identify all the Gods with Ganapati or Ganesa in his different forms of Vakratunda, Ekadanta, Mahodara and Gajánana : the work is the text book of the Gánapatya Sect.

18.—Laghu Buddha Purána.

Paper.—Devanágari Character.

A Summary of the contents of the Lalita Vistára, a Purána containing the history of Buddha : the original was brought from Nepal by Captain Knox : the abridgment was made by a Pundit in Mr. Colebrooke's service.

19.—Bhārgava Purána.

Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

The last portion of a work described as one of the Upapuránas or minor Puránas. This portion relates the incarnations of the conch, mace, Chakra, &c. of Vishnu as persons—it is in fact a Vaishnava work, and includes the history of Rámānuja, the reformer of that branch of the Hindu religion, who flourished in the twelfth century.

20.—The Himavat Khanda of the Skanda Purána.

Paper.—Devanágari Character.

21.—The Brhamottara Section of the Skanda Purána.

- a. Paper—Devanágari Character.
- b. Palm leaves—Telugu Character, 8 Chapters.

MAHATMYAS.

The Purámas contain short notices of the principal Tirthas or places of peculiar sanctity, and occasionally give detailed accounts of those of more than usual holiness, as Benares, Gaya, Mathura, and others. In imitation of this example, and with the interested purpose of accrediting different temples, Legends have been very extensively fabricated, relating to the circumstances under which each acquired its sacred character, and illustrating the advantages of worshipping at its shrine. This has been especially the case in the South of India, where every pagoda has its Sthala or Local Purána, or Máhátmya Legendary account of its Sanctity or Greatness. These are invariably stated to be extracts or sections from different Puránas, in which however they will be sought in vain, never having formed a part of the original works. In some instances indeed they exceed in bulk the size of the work from which they are professedly extracted. Although referred very indiscriminately to different Puránas, the far larger portion are said to belong to the Skanda Purána, a preference easily accounted for, as that Purána no longer exists in an entire form. It is in fact made up of detached sections, of uncertain denomination and extent, and therefore readily admits of any additions.

Palm leaves—Nandinágarí Character.

The life of Chaitanya, the founder of the Gosains of Bengal, who worship Krishna as Jagannáth, chiefly, together with his mistress Rádhá. Chaitanya was born in A. D. 1484, and after an ascetic life spent principally in the worship of Jagannáth, at the celebrated shrine in Orissa, he disappeared, it is said miraculously, about A. D. 1527. According to his followers, he was an incarnation of Krishna, but he appears to have been a simple fanatic, instigated by Adwaitánand and Nityánand, two Brahmans of Santipur and Nadiya, to give a fresh impulse to the Vaishnava faith, and establish them, and their descendants, as the hereditary priests. Chaitanya himself leading a life of celibacy, whilst they were householders. Their posterity in Bengal still hold the character of teachers of the sect: some other families, descended from Chaitanya's early disciples, are established chiefly at Mathura and Vrindavan. The work is in Bengali, but at least half of it consists of Sanscrit texts from the Bhágavat and other Vaishnava works.

Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

A legendary account of the origin of the weaver caste in the Dekhin, as related by Súta to Saunaka. According to the legend, Devánga was an emanation from the body of Sadásiva, when that deity anxiously meditated how the newly created races of beings in the three divisions of the universe were to be clothed. The Muni being thus born, received from Vishnu the fibres of the stem of the lotus that grew from his navel, and being supplied with a loom and other materials by the Demon Máya, he fabricated dresses for all the gods, the spirits of heaven and hell, and the inhabitants of the earth. By the latter he was made king of Amodapattan : from the former he received inestimable gifts ; and two wives ; one the daughter of Sesha the great Serpent, the other the daughter of Súrya or the Sun.

Devánga had three sons by the daughter of Súrya and one by the daughter of Sesha : the latter conquered Surashtra : the former succeeded their father at Amodapur, when they were attacked by a number of combined princes, overthrown and reduced to a miserable condition, in which they were glad to maintain themselves by the art of weaving, which they had learned from their father, and thus gave rise to the caste of weavers. This reverse of fortune originated in an imprecation denounced by the nymph Rembhá on Devánga for being cold to her advances, in punishment of which she declared he should be reduced to a degraded condition. The favour of Sadásiva averted the curse from Devānga but it took effect on his posterity. The Legend is said to be an extract from the Brahmānda Purāna.

6.—Madhwácharya Vijaya.

Palm leaves—Nandinágarí Character.

The Triumphs of Madhwa, the founder of a sect of Vaishnavas in the 13th century. He was born in Tuluva in A. D. 1199, and is supposed to have been an incarnation of Sesha. The chief temples of this sect are on the Canara Coast: that established by the founder is at Udipi. This account of Madwa's success in refuting other sects is by Naráyan, Pundit, the son of Trivikrama.

7.—Mayuravermá Cheritra.

Paper—Devanágari Character.

A legendary account of Mayúravermá, and other sovereigns of the Kadamba race; who ruled on the Canara Coast. The founder of the Kadamba family, who reigned at Jayanti or Banavasi, was born of a drop of the perspiration of Siva, which fell upon a Kadamba tree. He had three eyes, and from this circumstance, and the place of his birth, was named Trinetra Kadamba. After him, the princes in regular succession were Madhukeswar, Mallináth and Chandravermá. The last had two sons, one called also Chandravermá the other Purandara. The former of these had two wives, one of whom when pregnant, he left in a temple at Vallabhipur, where she was delivered of the subject of this legend, who was named Mayúra or Sikhi (peacock) vermá, from his eating whilst an infant the head of a peacock, to which form a worshipper of Siva had transmigrated with the boon that whoever ate the head should become a king. Chandravermá having died in retirement, and Purandara being childless, Mayuravermá became king of Banavassi. He here obtained 'the sword of sharpness, the shoes of swiftness and garment of invisibility,' and the exploits he performed with the aid of these, constitutes the bulk of the tract. It is also recorded that he was the first of his race who brought Brahmans from the north to the western Coast, and established them at Banavassi. He was succeeded by his Son, another Trinetra Kadamba, by whom colonies of the Brahmans introduced by his father, were distributed in Haiva and Tuluva, and especially at the shrine of Niva at Gokerna, which he rescued from a Chandala prince.

This work places the Kadamba dynasty after the common Pauranic dynasties of the Kali age. In other tracts current in the Dekhin, the Kadamba is inserted in the midst of them, or anterior to the Maunas and Yavanas, whose residence is transferred from Kilakila in the Puránas, to Anagundi, in the local traditions. (See Buchanan's Mysore, 3, 111.) This is egregious blundering or worse, and is intended to place the origin of the Kadambas, nearly 1500 years before the Christian æra. Inscriptions of the family are found however as late as the 12th century after Christ, and it seems likely that the tradition current in some parts of the south, that Mayúravermá lived about 1000 years ago, or in the 8th or 9th century is not far from the truth.

Each has one or two verses, as of the latter, the author says ;

“The Bees (Shatpadas or Six-footed) that visited the tree of heaven, returned with the same number of feet with which they went, but all those who came on two feet to Sinha Bhūpa, shall return with six—(i. e. on elephants or horses.)

The king Sinha Bhūpa is attended by dancing girls, whose beauty is as splendid as gems, by sons of a disposition soothing as sandal, and by sovereigns of exalted characters.”

The rest is apparently much in the same puerile style.

The author was a Brahman of the Vadhula tribe, an inhabitant of the endowed village of Kākāmrānipuri, about 50 coss from Masulipatam : the date of the work is Saka 1338 or A. D. 1416.

JAIN LITERATURE.

1.—Adi Purána.

- a. Sanscrit, Hála Karnáta Character, Palm leaves.
- b. Do. incomplete; 25 Sections.
- c. Do. do; the last portion.

The first Purána, or more correctly the first part of a collective body of legends, to which the Jainas have applied the term Purána. The compilation is ascribed to Jinasena Achárya, who is said to have lived in the reign of Vikramáditya, but who was probably much later. In the Purána however, the interlocutors are Srenika the king, and Gautama the disciple of Mahávira, who relates the formation of the present world, and the birth and actions of Vrishabha, the first Tirthankara or Pontiff, and Bharata the Ohakravertti or universal Emperor, until the death or emancipation of both. According to this authority, Vrishabha was first born, as Mahabala Chakravertti, being instructed in the Jain doctrines, he was next born in the second heaven as Lalitanga deva. He was next born as Vajrajangha, son of Vajrabáhu, king of Utpala kata, a city on the Sitodá, one of the rivers of Mahámeru. Having in this existence given food to a Jain mendicant, he was born as a teacher of that faith named Arya. From thence he returned to the second heaven, as Swayamprabha deva, and was again born a prince, the son of the Raja of Sasini mahánagar, by the name of Suvedi. He again became a divinity as Achyutendra, presiding over the 16th Swerga or heaven. He was then born as Vajranábhi, son of Vajrasena, king of Pundarikini nagar; having obtained great purity, he was born as Sarvārthasiddhi Deva, in a part of the upper world above the 16th heaven, and only 12 Yojans from the site of Moksha or final liberation. His next birth was as Vrishabha, the Tirthankara, the son of Nábhi, by Meru devi; king and queen of Saketa nagar. His incarnation was announced by the fall, morning and evening for six months, of three-hundred and fifty millions of precious stones. The goddesses Sri, Kri, Dhriti, Kirtti, Budhi and Lakshmi were sent by Devendra to wait on Meru Devi, during her pregnancy, and feed her with the fruit of the Kalpa, or all bestowing tree of heaven, and at his birth, Devendra and all the inhabitants of every division of the universe came to render homage. Devendra bathed the child with the contents of the Sea of milk, and gave him the name of Vrishabha. The saint had two wives, and a hundred children; for whose instruction, he invented all the arts and sciences. Thus, he taught dramatic poetry to his son Bharata, amatory poetry to his son Báhubali, grammar to his daughter Brahmi, and arithmetic to his daughter Sundari; after this he withdrew to a life of abstract purity, which elevated him to the rank of a Jina or Tirthankara, and finally closed his existence in any Chapter. The work comprises various doctrinal sections, as well as numerous legends, wholly peculiar to the sect. It is divided into 47 Books.

2.—Uttara Purána.

Sanscrit—Hála Karnáta Character, Palm leaves.

This is a continuation of the preceding, containing the narratives of the twenty-three Tirthankaras, down to Mahāvīra, and of the Chakraverttis Vāsudevas, &c., emperors and kings, to Srenika, king of Magadha. This part of the work includes some traditions, common to Pauranic fiction, as those of Parasurāma, Rāmachandra, the Pándava, and Kaurava Princes, and Krishna : the outlines of these stories are much the same as usual, but there are important variations in the details. Krishna is styled a Trihandádhpati, or Lord of three portions of the world, and he is the disciple of the Tirthankara Nemináth. The work consists of 76 sections.

3.—Chámunda Ráya Purána.

- a. Carnata language and Character, Palm leaves.
- b. Do. do.

A collection of works, entitled Puránas, giving an account of the sixty-three celebrated personages of the Jainas, or the twenty-four Tirthankaras, twelve Chakraverttis, nine Vāsudevas, nine Suklabalas, and nine Vishnudwishas or foes of Vishnu : most of these are familiar to Hindu mythology, and are specified in the vocabulary of Hemachandra, whence they have been particularised by Mr. Colebrooke, (As. Res. IX.) This collection is attributed to Chámunda Ráya, the minister of Rachamalla, king of Madura in the Dekhin, to whom the foundation of the Jain Establishment at Belligola, is ascribed ; as detailed by Colonel Mackenzie and Dr. Buchanan, in the ninth volume of the Asiatic Researches. Chámunda Ráya, is said to have lived in the year 600 of the Kali age, by which is to be understood the period subsequent to the death of the last Tirthankara, or Verddhamána Swámi, variously computed as occurring 500 or 477 years anterior to the era of Vikramáditya, which would place this personage either 136 years before the Christian era or 77 years after it : a date altogether inadmissible although supported by an inscription. The Jain religion, appears to have grown out of the downfall of that of the Bauddhas about the eighth or ninth century. The following translations from the 14th section may be taken as specimens of the legendary literature of this sect.

“The Fourteenth or Ananta Tirthakara Purána.”

Padmaratha the Arusu of Arishtapura of Airávalu Kshétra, in the Mudana Mandira, (or Eastern Meru), in the Data Kishanda Dwipa, receiving religious instructions from Swayamprabha Jina, he became disgusted with the world, and transferring the Kingdom to his son Ghanarotha, he adopted a penitential life, read thro' the eleven Angas, and contemplated the sixteen Bhāvanas or meditations, he acquired the quality fitting him for becoming a Tirthakar : pursuing his religious penitence, he quitted his body, and was born in the Achyuta Kalpa in the Pushpottara Vimāna as Achyutendra, with a life of twenty-two Sāgaras, of the stature of three cubits, of subdued appetites, perfectly contented with his fate, with a knowledge penetrating as far as to the seventh lower world, he was enjoying the happiness of that world.

Afterwards Jayasyāma Dévi, the consort of Simhasena Mahārāja of the Kasyapa Gotra, of the lineage of Ikshwāku, the ruler of Ayodhyapuram in the Bharata Kshetra of Jambu Dwīpa, on the 1st day of the month Kartika, under the Star Revati, about break of day, saw the sixteen Dreams, and also that of the Elephant entering in at her mouth, which she mentioned to her consort, who was an Avadijnyāni, and getting the interpretations of them from him, she was happy, and Saudhermendra performing the happy ceremony of descending from Heaven on Earth, Achyutendra became impregnated in the womb of the Queen. At that time on the last Palla of ten Sāgaras of the term of Vimala Kīrttakar, when virtue had faded one-third, he was born on the 12th of the dark half of the month Jyeshtha, under the Star, Revati, in the Pushpa Yuga, and saw Dhermendra performing the happy worship of being born in the world, and as the new born infant was born with Ananta Gnyāna, or illimitable wisdom, he called him Ananta Tirthakar, and returned to his residence : his life was to continue for three millions of years, his stature 100 cubits, and his color golden : his childhood comprised a period of seven-hundred and fifty thousand years : his Reign continued for fifteen-hundred thousand, after which on a certain day seeing a Meteor fall, and considering that this life would be dissolved in the same manner, he became disgusted with the world, and Lokāntika Deva gave him religious instruction, on which he transferred his kingdom to his Son Arinjaya, getting into the conveyance called Sāgaradatta, he went to the Sayétthuka Vana, performing six fastings, in company with 1000 Princes, he adopted a penitential life on the 12th of the dark half of the month Jyeshtha, in the evening under the Star Revati, on which he acquired the fourth degree of knowledge, and on the next day went to Ayodhyapuri to beg, and Viśhoka Nripa, of the colour of gold, granted alms, on which the five wonders were exhibited, and after 12 years had expired, in dumb contemplation, he obtained the Kevalajnyāna under an Aśvattha tree in the abovementioned garden, on the last day of the dark half of the month Chaitra, on the evening under the Star Revati ; Saudherma Indra, performed the happy ceremony of becoming, a Kevalagnyāni, and giving him the 1008 virtuous names, he returned.

He had 52 Ganadharas from Jayadhāma downwards.

1000 Purvadharas.

39,000 Śikṣadharas.

4032 Avadījnyānis.

5000 Kevalis.

8000 Vicriurdis.

5000 Mana pariyagñāni.

2,00,000 Vadis.

1,08,000 Aryakaras from Survas downwards.

2,00,000 Srāvanas.

4,00,000 Srāvakas.

Devas and Devis, without number.

Quadrupeds and Birds without number.

With all these, inculcating religious morals in the world for 12 years less than 7 hundred and 50 thousand years, in Arya Kṣhetra, after which coming to Sumeru Parvat, and leaving his Samopasaranam, and in company with 500 Munis remaining in the Prathama Yuga for one month, on the first quarter of the night, of the last day of the dark half of the month Chaitra, under the Star Revati, Ananta Bhattāraka obtained Beatitude, and Saulherma Indra performed the Pari Nirvāna Kalyāna Pūjā, and dancing with happiness, he returned to his dwelling.

The Story of Suprabha the Baladeva and Purushottama the Vāsu-deva, the descendants of Śrīmad Ananta Tīrthakar.

Sushena, the king of Padmapura, in the Bharata Kṣhetra, in Jambu Dwīpa, had 500 Consorts : the State Queen was called Priyānanda Dēvi, with whom he enjoyed every felicity. One day Chandrabhūṣana, the Adhipati of Malaya Dēs, coming to this city from motives of friendship, saw the Queen, and fell deeply in love with her, and made use of every stratagem and carried her away with him. The king, (Sushena) became very much grieved at this misfortune, and said, I am really unfortunate, and have not performed any virtuous action : he then forsook the world, and after remaining some time thus, he went one day to Sreyāmsa Ganadhar, and obtained from him the state of an Ascetic, and performed the Penance of Simha-vicri'rita, and wishing as the accomplishment of his penance, that he might be re-born in his next birth, with so much beauty that he might be admired by all who saw him, and that there should be none to oppose his authority : remaining for one month in this state and with this wish, he quitted his body, and was born in the Sahasrāra Kalpam as a God (Deva) and enjoyed every felicity there for 18 Sagaras of years.

Afterwards Maha Bala, the Arasu of Anandapura in the Eastern Hemisphere of Jambu Dwīpa, becoming disgusted with the world, went to Prajāpālana Jaina, and obtained the rules of Asceticism from him, and performed the Penance of Simha-vieririta, and in the perfect state of a Sanyási quitting his earthly frame : he was born in the Sahasrára Kalpa, the pleasure and happiness of which world he enjoyed for 18 Sagaras of years.

Soma Prabha Raja, having descended from the Mahendra Kalpa, ruled over Dwaravatipatana, situated in the Bharata Kshétra in Jambu Dwípa, with a life of 42,000 years : his size was 90 yards length, his State Queen was called Jayavati, who on a certain night dreamt an auspicious dream : on the Bhadrapada Nakshatra, Maha Bala Cherra was born to her by the name of Suprabha, and to another of his Consorts named Síta, Susena Cherra, was born by the name of Purushottama, they were both surnamed, Baladeva and Vásudeva, the former was of a white color, and the latter of a blue color ; they were each of the height of fifty yards, their lives were, to last for five hundred thousand years, and they were ruling over the kingdom of their father.

In course of time Madhú Kaitabha, the king of Varánasi Patana, in the Kási Désa, sent word to them to become tributary to him, but they being unwilling to pay tribute, drove away the Ambassadors, whose Sovereign on hearing of the indignity they had suffered, assembled his army and came to give them battle : on meeting he flung his Chakra at Purushottama, which so far from hitting him, came and stood near him : Purushottama then picking up the Chakra in his turn, flung it at Madhu Kaitabha, who was slain by it : after which he became Adhipati of three Khandas, and ruling over the Kingdom for some time, Purushottama on his dissolution, leaving his body, his Soul went to Hell, but Suprabha after the death of his brother being much grieved, went to Somaprabha Kevali, and received initiation from him, and acquiring the state of a Kevali, he obtained Beautitude. Madhu Kaitabha, also after his death went to hell.

14.—Jinadatta Ráya Cheritra.

Karnáta language and Character, Palm leaves, six copies.

Legendary history of Jinadatta Ráya, who according to the testimony of inscriptions was king of Humbúja, in the Bednur country, in the beginning of the ninth century: by Brammaya kavi. Whatever might be expected from the preceding Cheritras, it might have been thought that this would have afforded something like historical interest. It is however equally puerile with the rest. Although there can be no doubt that some of the personages, who are the subjects of these Jain legends, had a real existence, the circumstances ascribed to them are entirely the fancy of a late period, and relate little else than their birth, marriage, elevation to the throne, some imaginary feat of arms, their becoming the disciples of some of the Tirthakaras, their abandoning their power for a life of sanctity and their final emancipation. Thus, Jinadatta is described as the son of the Raja Sahakára, who marrying a new wife, conceives an aversion to his son, who becomes a voluntary exile: during his wanderings he founds the city of Paumbuja or Humbuja, and marries the nymph Padmávatí. He afterwards becomes king of his native city, and protects the Jain faith for a certain period, till his wife who was a Nágakanyá, or maiden of the serpent race, returns to Pátála, on which the king adopts the life of an ascetic, and after a period of abstract devotion, ascends to Heaven.

TAMUL BOOKS.

*Pauranic and Legendary History.*1.—Rámáyana.

Palm leaves.

A Translation of the Rámáyana of Válmiki, by the poet Kamban, made according to the date given in the introductory stanzas in Saka 807, A. D. 885. According to one legendary history of the translation, the author was patronised by Kerikála Chola, but Mr. Ellis states that he finished his translation in the reign of Rájendra Chola, at the date specified in the following verse. “In the year of the Sacam 808, (A. D. 886) in the Village of Vennai Nellúr where flourished Sadeiyen (a great farmer, and the Patron of this poet) Cambanáden, presented the history of Ráma, which he had composed in the assembly of learned critics in the month of Panguni, and on the day (when the moon entered) the constellation Atta.” Mirasi Right; Appendix p. xvi. Kamban is said to have been a native of Tiruvullur, of the Vallála caste, or a division of Súdras, chiefly employed in agriculture. He began to translate the Rámáyana at the age of 12, and completed five books by twenty-five. Other works ascribed to him, are the Kamban Pádal, the Káanchivaram pilla Tamul, a comment on some of the writings of Avayar, the Ohola Kurvanga, a history of Kerikála Ohola, and a Dictionary, the Kamban Agaradhi : he died at Madura in the 60th year of his age.

2.—Rámáyana : Aranya and Kishkindhyá Kándas.

Palm leaves.

The third and fourth Books of Kamban's translation of the Rámáyana.

3.—Rámáyana Sundara Kánda.

Palm leaves.

The fifth book of Kamban's Rámáyana.

4.—Yuddha Kánda.

Palm leaves.

The sixth book of the Rámáyana, containing an account of the engagement between the forces of Ráma and Rávana, and the destruction of the latter.

5.—Uttara Kánda.

Palm leaves.

The last or supplementary section of the Rámáyana of Kamban.

6.—Rámáyana Váchya.

Palm leaves.

A prose version of the Rámáyana : attributed also to Kamban.

7.—The Mahábhárata.

- a. The Sabhá Parva, Palm leaves, 2 Copies,
- b. The Udyoga Parva, do.
- c. The Yuddha Parva, do.
- d. The Maháprasthán Parva, do.
- e. The embassy of Krishna, do. 2 Copies.
- f. The Episode of Purúrava, do.

Different portions of the great Sanscrit Poem, the Mahábhárata translated by Vallipule Alvar, one of the twelve chiefs of the Rámánuja sect of Vaishnavas, established in the Dekhin.

8.—Sambhava Khanda of the Skanda Purána.

Palm leaves.

The section of the Skanda Purána, which contains an account of the birth of Kártikeya, translated from the Sanscrit; by Kasyappa Guru, of Káncchípur or Conjeveram.

9.—Yuddha Khanda of the Skanda Purána.

Palm leaves.

Translation of the section of the Skanda Purána, giving an account of the combat between the Gods under Kártikeya, and the Demons under Táraka, and the destruction of the latter by the former; by the same author as the last.

10.—Kási Khanda of the Skanda Purána.

Palm leaves.

The section of the Skanda Purána, which gives a detailed account of the different holy shrines at Kási or Benares, and the legends which explain the origin of their sanctity. The translation is ascribed to a Prince of the Pándya race, or house of Madura, Adivira Ráma.

11.—Brahmottara Section of the Skanda Purána.

Palm leaves.

A translation of a division of the Skanda Purána, relating especially to the worship of Siva, and the efficacy of the emblems borne by his followers, by Viratunga, Rája of Tingasi.

12.—Bhágavat Purána.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

An abridged translation of the Bhágavat Purána, by Chennaya Vadha.

13.—Viswakermá Purána Sangraha.

Paper.

An abridgment of the Viswakerma, Upaprána.

14.—Periya Purána.

a. Palm leaves—b. Do.—c. Paper.

A collection of legends recording the devotion of sixty-three eminent disciples of the Saiva faith, as taught by Jnyána Samandhar, and the favour shown them by the deity at various places in the Peninsula, but especially at Ohidambara or Chelambram: the persecution of the Bauddhas is here attributed to Jnyána Samandhar. In 56 Chapters, or 4000 Verses, by Ohakkaliyar.

15.—Teruvanda Purána.

a. Palm leaves—b. Paper.

An account of an act of devotion of one of the Chola Princes, of great celebrity in the Peninsula, Teruvanda or Teruganda or Teruvarunda Chola, who commanded his son to be put to death for driving over and killing a calf accidentally in the street of Teruvalur, near the shrine of a famous temple of Siva, as Tiyaga Ráya Swámi. The boy having been accordingly slain, was restored to life by Siva, as a mark of his sense of the father's devotion.

Palm leaves.

A Legendary account of the city of Kánci or Conjeveram, the foundation of which is attributed to Kulottunga Chola, the father of Adonda Tondira. It contains some celebrated shrines of the Saiva faith, in the temples of Siva as Ekámreswara, and of Durgá as Kámákshi which were repaired, if not erected by Sankara Achárya. This account is said to be a translation by the poet Kamban from the Sanscrit work on the same subject. This work, or the Sanscrit original, is very absurdly termed by Dr. Heyne, "the best, if not, the only geographical account of ancient Hindustan."

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

Account of a sacred shrine of Siva at Terunamale or Trinomallee as Arunáchaleswara or Tejalinga, being dedicated to the emblem of that deity, as representing the element of fire. According to the legend it was on this spot that Siva appeared as a fiery linga to Brahmá and Vishnu, and desired them to seek his base, and summit; which they attempted in vain; in commemoration of which the Gods requested Siva to remain in a reduced form as a linga here, and erected the temple. The work also contains the Pauránic accounts of Daksha's sacrifice, the birth of Párvatí, her marriage to Siva, her destruction of Mahishásura, and her becoming half Siva's body or Arddhanáriswari at the Aruna mountain; also the liberation of different persons from penalties, and imprecations, by their worshipping at this shrine

The Temple was repaired by Vajránkusa king of Madura. The hill is termed Aruna or red, from the redness of the fiery Linga which originally appeared here, or from the red blossoms of the Palás tree, a forest of which trees grew over the mountain. Translated from the Sanscrit by Yellapa Vadyar.

18.—Vriddháchala Purána.

a. Palm leaves—b. do—c. do—d. do—e. do.

Legendary description of a shrine of Siva on Vriddháchala, or the ancient Hill, Verddhachalam in the Carnatic, said to have been revealed for the devotions of Brahmá. Agastya is said to have here expiated the sin of devouring Ilwala and Vátápi, translated by Yellapa Vadyar.

19.—Indrakila Parvata Máhátmya.

Palm leaves.

Legend of a double shrine of Vishnu and Siva, on a hill near Valliama nagar or Vellum in Tanjore, erected by Indra in expiation of the curse he incurred from Gautama, who resided originally on this spot, for the deception practised by the deity on the wife of the sage. The town was afterwards founded, it is said by Kála Kantha Chola, and named after his mother Valliámá. Translated by Muragappa.

20.—Sivandhi Sthala Purána.

a. Palm leaves—b. Paper do.

A Legendary account of the celebrated temple at Trichanapali, in 12 sections, as supposed to be related by Gautama to Mátanga and other sages. The rock is said to have been a splinter of Mahameru, blown by the Deity of the wind from the peak of that mountain. It was afterwards the residence of Trisira, one of Rávana's Generals, whence its name Trisira málè or Trisirapalli corrupted into Trichanopoly. Ráma in his conquest of the Dekhin took it, and he worshipped at the shrine of Siva as Trisirapal-lináth, an image set up the Rákshasa. It was next celebrated as the residence of Sarama Muni, who decorating his garden with Sivandhi plants, brought from Pátála, the place was known as Sivandhi parvata. Sarvádityachola having come from the north of the Káveri hither, founded along the Southern bank of that river, the city of Wariur. One of his successors having forcibly taken from the garden of Sarama muni, some of those flowers which he cultivated for the purpose of offering to Siva, the Muni pronounced an imprecation on him, in consequence of which Wariur was buried beneath a shower of dust. The Queen alone escaped, and in her flight was delivered of a male child: after some interval, the chiefs of the Chola kingdom proceeding to elect a king, determined by advice of the Muni to crown whomsoever the late monarch's elephant should pitch upon. Being turned loose for that purpose, the elephant discovered and brought to Trisira málè, the child of his former master, who accordingly became the Chola king, the whole being the work of the favour of the Deity worshipped on this mountain.

21.—Awaryar kovil Máhátmya.

Palm leaves.

Legendary account of a temple at Awariur koil near Chidambara, said to have been founded by Mánikya Vásaka, the minister of Arimerdana, king of Madura: the work also contains the story of Mánikya Vásaka, the marvels wrought in whose favour by Siva are narrated by Sonnerat in his account of the Hindu festivals. It may be here observed, that notwithstanding Sonnerat's work contains many inaccuracies, and is disfigured by the use of provincialisms in the terms of the Hindu Mythology and religion, it continues to be the only authority worthy to be consulted on these subjects, as observable in the south of India.

22.—Vedapuri Sthala Purána.

Palm leaves.

Account of a temple of Siva at Vedapuri called also Rudrapuri, Brahmápura or Trivatur near Chilambaram, where Siva is said to have appeared in the disguise of a Brahman, and taught the Vedas to the Rishis, or rather the Agamas and mantras or mystical portion, which it is said he translated into Tamul, and then disappeared, by entering into a Linga at this place, in consequence of which he has been since worshipped here as Vedapuriswara. The Legend comprises the usual stories of the marriage of Siva and Párvatí, and the birth of Kártikeya and Ganesa, and illustrations of the efficacy of the shrine as shewn in the boons obtained there by Brahmá, Chandra, Ráma, Náreda, and others, also an account of the defeat of the Bauddhas, by Jnyána Samandhar. Translated by Appana Sundara Mánikya Vásaka.

23.—Tribhuvana Sthala Purána.

Palm leaves

Legendary account of a shrine of Siva as Tribhuvaneswara in the vicinity of Ohidambaram, and of various sacred temples along the Valar river, attributed chiefly to Kulottunga chola and Kerikála chola.

24.—Nalé Sthala Purána.

Palm leaves.

Account of a shrine where Siva is worshipped as the Pancha Linga, or in the five types of the elements; erected it is said by Jayamkonda chola. It is also called Mayúra Kovil.

25.—Ohitrakúta Máhátmya.

Palm leaves.

Legend of the hill of Ohitrakote in Bundelcund, the temporary residence of Ráma, and the site of a number of temples to which Pilgrimage is made.

26.—Madhyárjuna Máhátmya.

Palm leaves.

Legend of a Siva Linga at Madhyárjuna, between the Kaveri and Ooleroon rivers, where Virachola it is said was released from the sin of accidentally slaying a Brahman.

27.—Perawoliyár Purána.

Palm leaves.

A translation of the Hálásya Máhátmya or Madura Purána, giving an account of that city and the sixty-four sports of Siva, see page 91. By Puranjote Mahámuni.

28.—Tirapásura Sthala Purána.

Palm leaves.

An account of Tripassore; the town and temple of Devi, there, are said to have been erected by Kerikála Ohola.

29.—Sriranga Māhātmya.

Palm leaves.

Account of the celebrated temple of Sriranga or Seringham, between the branches of the Kaveri, opposite to Trichinopoly. Its sanctity arises from its being supposed to be the spot where Vibhishana deposited the Vimāna, and image of Vishnu as Sriranga, which Vishnu gave to Brahmā, and Brahmā to Iksh-wāku, from whom they descended to Rāma, and by him were presented to Vibhishana. The erection of the present temple is ascribed to one of the Chola Princes : by Nangaya.

30.—Tiruvattura Koshamangala Purāna.

Palm leaves.

Account of a shrine of Siva at Trivatūr, as Mangaleswara, with various legends exemplifying the virtue of the ashes of coddung, Rudrāksha beads, and other Saiva insignia.

31.—Valliyammā Purāna.

Palm leaves.

Legend of a goddess named Valliyammā, the bride of Kārtikeya, worshipped in the Dekhin especially at Chilambaram. This tract is rather the history of the birth, and exploits of Kārtikeya, in which his marriage with the daughter of a hunter named Valliyammā, an incarnation of Pārvati, is one of the incidents : by Mūrthi.

32.—Palani Purāna.

Paper.

Legendary account of several sacred shrines in Dindigul, at Palani, Sivagiri and Varāhagiri, the site of temples of Siva and Kārtikeya, to the latter of whom the legendary anecdotes chiefly relate.

33.—Támraparni Māhātmya.

Paper.

Legendary account of the Támraparni river, which is said to have been brought by the sage Agastya from the north, and an account of the different holy Lingas on both banks of the river, from its origin in the Travancore mountains along its course through Tinnevely to its junction with the sea at Pennacoil.

34.—Jambukeswara Sthala Purána.

Paper.

Legendary account of the celebrated shrine on the south of the Kaveri usually termed the Jambukisma Pagoda. According to the legend it is named from Jambu or Jambuka, a Muni, who presented a Jambu or Rose apple to Siva, who after putting it into his mouth, spate it out again on the Earth. The Muni picked it up and placed it on his head, which act of veneration pleasing the God, he consented to reside on the spot where the rejected fruit alighted. Párvati having incurred Siva's displeasure, was sentenced by him to reside on Earth at this spot, where she is worshipped as Akhilándeswarí, the sovereign of the universe. The Linga is called Amriteswara and Kailaséswara, or, after the Muni by whom it was set up, Jambukeswara.

35.—Padmáchala Máhátmya.

Paper.

Legend of the shrine of Siva as Padmagiriswara, or the Lord of the mountain Padma, and of his Sakti or Goddess named Abhirámi Devi, on the western coast, near Gokerna.

36.—Srikarani Purána.

Paper.

Legendary account of the origin of the accountants of Tonda Mandal, who are said to be descended from Brahmá and Saraswati, who having incurred the displeasure of Durvásas, were born on earth, as the Brahman Atreya, and Princess Sugunamálá. In their new birth, they were again married, and had sixty-four Sons, who accompanied Chenne Chola, when he first marched from the north of India to Tonda Mandala. The Chola prince distributed the villages to sixty-four tribes of Brahmans, and appropriated one share of each endowment to the descendants of Atreya, to keep the accounts. The legend is said to be taken from the Brahmánda Purána, and translated into high Tamul by Naraktra, one of the Sanghatar of Madura, at the request of Karanikula chúra Nayana, the minister of the Pandyan king : whence its substance was composed by Guruvappam, a Brahman of the tribe of Gautama, and Sútra of Aswaláyana.

37.—Násiketu Purána.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

Legendary account of Násiketu the son of Divya Muni, his visit to Naraka or hell, and devotion to Siva.

38.—Mupuntoti Wollé.

a. Paper—b. Palm leaves.

Manuscript a. contains an account of the erection of the Fort and various Temples at Arkat, by Virasambhu Ráya, and the construction of a canal which supplied that city with water by thirty branches filled from thirty, (Mupattu,) reservoirs. The same contains also doctrinal injunctions to the Jangamas. Manuscript b. besides describing the powers of the form of Siva worshipped here, specifies the endowments granted to the temple.

39.—Tiruvadetur Kovil kathá.

Palm leaves.

Legendary account of the founding of the temples of Siva and Párvati, at Tiruvadetore, south of the Kaveri, by Muchukunda Ráya, originating in the favour of Párvati to Nandi.

40.—Warayur gráma Vernanam.

Account of the village of Warayur, and the temples there of Vihvana'th, Kadambeswara, and Tirukaliguna, and the inscriptions found there.

Local History and Biography.

1.—Chola Māhātmya.

Paper.

This and the works ensuing profess to record the history of the Princes of Chola, an important division of the Peninsula, from which the Eastern Coast appears to derive its appellation, Coromandel, Chola, or Chora-mandal. It seems to have been known to the ancients as the Regio Soræ and R. Soretanum. According to local designations, the Chola country is bounded on the east by the Sea, on the south by the Vellar River, by the Kutakeri on the west, and Yanadu or Pennar on the north. This would include the whole of the country known as the Carnatic below the Ghats, and excludes the more southern countries which are ordinarily supposed to be signified by Chola or Tanjore. It appears, however, that the limits of the kingdom varied at different periods, and in the time of Ptolemy, Arcot was the capital—at a later date Wariur near Trichinopoly, next Kumbhakona, and finally Tanjore, was the residence of the Chola Princes.

The accounts of the Chola kings are very numerous, very confused, and very contradictory. The work here adverted to professes to be translated from the Bhavishtyottara Purāna, of which however it never formed a portion, by order of one of the Mahratta Princes of Tanjore, Sarabhāji. It gives an account of 16 kings, or Kulottunga, Deva chola, Sasisekhara, Sivalinga, Vira, Kerikāla, Bhima, Rājārājendra, Viramārtanda, Kirttiverdhana, Vijaya, Kanaka, Sundara, Kalakala, Kalyāna, Bhadra. Several of these are of great celebrity, and their names occur in numerous inscriptions in Colonel Mackenzie's collection, in which however the only dates given are those of the years of their reigns. Authorities are much at variance, as to the times at which they lived, and Kulottunga the first of the above series, is placed in the beginning of the Kali age, in the beginning of the sixth century, in the beginning and in the end of the eighth, and even in the ninth. If any trust is to be placed in the above list of Princes, he may have reigned in the eighth century. Rājendra the patron of Kamban, and seventh from Kulottunga, reigning in A. D. 886, see page, 163. At the same time Mr. Ellis (Mirasi Right) observes, that Vira Chola, the fifth prince from Rājendra, reigned about A. D. 918, and yet Vira in the above list precedes Rājendra. Some accounts however make Kullottunga, the Patron of Kamban and Vira is the fifth of the dynasty, reckoning from Kulottunga who as cotemporary with the Poet, may have reigned about the end of the ninth century. It is not impossible that he was the same with that Rājendra, who patronised Kamban, for Kulottunga, means "the exalter of his race," and Rājendra, is only "Prince of Princess:" as Titles, these were no doubt applied to different individuals, and we have a Vishnu Verddhana Kulottunga Chola, as late as the end of the 11th century: hence arises much of the confusion which pervades all the accounts of the Chola kings. It is not unlikely however, that the prince more especially known as Kulottunga Chola, reigned at the end of the 9th century, or even later, for Kerikāla the sixth of the list, is made in various traditionary accounts, the persecutor of Rāmānuja, and dying in consequence, in the early part of that reformer's career, which appears to have been about the beginning of the 12th century. It must be observed, however, that some lists interpose eight, some thirteen, and some sixteen Princes, between Kulottunga and Kerikāla, and in one list, Kerikāla is placed seventeen generations before Kulottunga, making an extreme variation of thirty-three generations, which it will require more ingenuity than can be here pretended to, to reconcile. On the whole, however, the weight of testimony places that Prince, who is best known as Kulottunga Chola; about the end of the ninth, and beginning of the tenth century.

This work is more of a legendary than a historical character, and is intended to record the devotion of various Chola Princes to Siva, as shewn in the consecration of different Lingas. Kulottunga is said to have erected a Temple to Tungésvara, whence his capital was called Tungapur or Tanjore. Sasisekhara erected a causeway or bridge over the Kaveri river. Siva Linga having killed a calf by accident, was put to death by his father, but restored to life by Siva. Kerikála brought the Vrihadiswara Linga from the Nermada, and built a temple for it, by which act of piety he was cured of the leprosy. Rájárájendra subdued various countries and erected numerous temples. Víramártanda propitiated Konkanesa. Kirtti Verddhana obtained progeny by worshipping Kártikeya. Kanaka prevailed upon Eranda Muni to fill up a gulph, through which the water of the Kaveri disappeared. Sundara expiated the crime of accidentally killing a Brahman by veneration to Madhyarjuna. Kalakala was raised to the heaven of Siva, by Bhaktitushteswara, or the Lord pleased with faith, and Bhadra, obtained the like end by devotion to the same deity. The last section gives some account of the different holy places of the Siva faith in the country along the Kaveri, or immediately to the south. The work is also styled the Vrihadiswara Máhátmya.

2.—Chola Purva Pattáyam.

a. Paper—b. Palm leaves.

A history of some of the Chola kings, according to the Kalvetu, or records professedly derived from inscriptions, of Kanchi.

According to this authority, the first Chola, Chera, and Pandya Princes, or Virachola, Bala Chera and Vajránga Pándya, were born by command of Siva for the destruction of Sáliváhana, who encouraged the Bauddhas, and persecuted the Brahman. After clearing the site of Káncchi, which had become a wilderness, and restoring the ancient Temples of Ekámreswara and Kámákshi, they proceeded against Sáliváhana, who they insisted should leave his capital, Trichinapali, and return to his former metropolis, Bhoja Rayapur in Ayodhya or Oude!! As he refused, they attacked Trichinapali, took it, and put Sáliváhana and all the Bauddhas, except a few who fled beyond sea to the eastward, to the sword. As Sáliváhana was a Brahman, the Rajas to expiate the sin of slaying him, built an infinite number of temples to Siva and his bride. These transactions are placed in the Kali year 1443, or 1659 before Christ, and 1737 before Sáliváhana reigned, agreeably to the era, which dates from his reign or A. D. 78. After Virachola, it is said, twenty-five Princes reigned to Uttama Chola, the twenty-sixth, whose capital was Wariur, and who deviating from the faith of his predecessors, had his Capital submerged by a shower of dust, the same story being told of him as is narrated in the Sivandhi Purána. The wife of Uttama, then pregnant escaped, and was delivered of a son with whom she lived twelve years in obscurity. At the end of that time the nobles of the Chola kingdom agreed to leave the election of a Prince to the choice of the late Raja's elephant, who after some search discovered the son of Uttama, amongst a number of boys, raised him on his trunk, and carried him to Tiruvatur, to the Temple of Tiyaga Rája, where he was recognised as sovereign, and raised to the throne by the name of Kerikála Chola. This is said to have happened in the year of Kali, 3567 or A. D. 466. This part of the story is told also of the son of Sarváditya Chola, in the Sivandhi Purána, and of Mayúrauerma in the Mayúra Cheritra. Kerikála is said to have put his son to death for driving over a calf in the streets of Temvelur, being here identified with Teruwarunda Chola. For this he was punished with madness, to cure him of which Kámákshi assumed the form of a priestess, and directed him to build and endow 360 Siválayas or Temples of Siva as the Linga. Similar endowments were granted by the Chera and Pándya Rájas, the particularisation of the chief of which forms the remaining, and much the largest portion of this work.

3.—Choladesa Púrvika Cheritra.

Paper.

A treatise on the ancient history of the Chola kings written in answer to Major Mackenzie's enquiries, by Vedhanáyaka, a native christian in his employ. This tract is written in a spirit unfriendly to the usual pretensions to high antiquity, and with some critical acumen, as may be judged from the following, which is given in the writer's own words; "Upon enquiring from well informed natives and men of letters, I find their replies very contradictory. Some say sixty-four Chola Princes have governed the country, some say sixteen, and some extend the line to the incredible number of 84,000. The account I have lately transmitted specifies only sixteen, whose joint reigns are made to amount to 1172 years: the book alluded to, I take it, contains not above one part in four of truth, and the other three parts are at variance with each other. The most accurate statement appears to be that of forty-four Princes, who reigned 2136 years. Of these, the last, Kulottunga gave his only daughter in marriage to Varaguna, the forty-eighth Pandyan Prince, who thence succeeded to the sovereignty over Chola and Tonda, as well as Pándya. Eleven Princes of his family reigned 570 years, making altogether 2706 years." He also maintains that Kulottunga, was the last, not the first of the Cholas, and makes him contemporary with the Poet Kamban. He notices however the different system which makes him the first of sixteen Princes, whose reigns are said to extend from the year of Kali 3349 to 4508 or A. D. 248 to A. D. 1407. The last Prince was named Pattira Chola. These Princes built or repaired the temples of Sriranga, Jambukeswara, Terumalei, Tungeswar, Vrihadiswar, Someswara, Rameswara, and many others. The author admits that he is not able to give a particular account of the forty-four Cholas.

In this work, also, the author denies that Agastya invented the Tamul language, and asserts that his medical works are written in a poor and low style—very inferior to that of Kamban. The grammatical work in 80,000 Sutras, or aphorisms, ascribed to him is pretended to be lost, and the only work of the kind known is the supposed abridgment of it by Tolgappya: another Grammar is said to originate with the work of Agastya, that of Mánikya vásaka. The principal classics of the ancient Tamul were Samanal, that is, Jains, or Bauddhas, most probably the latter.

The comparatively modern date of the Ohola Princes is inferred, with much reason, by the writer from the perfect state of the buildings ascribed to them, and the freshness and frequency of the traditions relating to them, which are current in all parts of the Peninsula

4.—Cholamandala, Tondamandala, Pándyamandala Rájákal.

Palm leaves.

An account of the Princes who governed the countries of Chola, Tonda, and Pándya. According to this tract, the whole of these three countries were comprised in the Dondaka forest, the habitation of foul fiends, and pious anchorets only. After the extirpation of the former, Ráma, to expiate the sin of slaying Rávana, a Brahman, erected the temple of Rámeswara, to which, numbers coming from upper Hindustan in pilgrimage, settled in this part of India, and first cleared, and cultivated the country. Amongst these was Mathura ndyaka Pándya, a man of the agricultural tribe from the north of India, who colonized the country along the Vygi river, and founded the city of Madura: from him forty-seven Princes descended who reigned in succession for a period of 2137 years. In like manner, the country along the Oaveri was first cleared, and occupied by a colonist from Ayodhya, or Oude, named Tayaman Nálei Chola, who founded a city at Trisirapuri or Trichinapali. The forty-fourth Prince from him was Kulottunga Chola, who had a son by a dancing girl, or as he gave out by a Nágakanyá, a nymph of Pátála. In consequence of his illegitimacy, the chief people opposed his being appointed as Yuva Rájá or young King, and on this account his father gave him a tract of newly cleared ground from the Pennei river to Kalahastri, constituting the Tonda Mandala, the capital of which was Kánchi. The following account of Tonda Mandalam, and its limits is taken from Mr. Ellis's tract on Mirasi Rights, a work previously referred to, and almost the only contribution by European Scholars to the ancient history of the Dekhin, upon which any reliance can be placed.

Tondei, or with the addition of mandalam, a province, country, Tondamandalam, of which Cánjipuram (Conjeveram) was the ancient capital, takes its designation from a shrub of the same name with which it abounds.

It is called also Valánádu, or Tondei-vala-nádu,* the extensive district, whence the Shózha princes took one of their titles, Valavan or Valanáden; this name it probably received in latter times when by successive conquests its boundaries had been extended far beyond those which will be presently noticed. This country is stated to have been covered by part of the extensive wilderness called in the Rámáyanam, Dandacáranam the forest of the punisher, and to have been inhabited originally by the Curumber, a pastoral and half-savage tribe, but sufficiently advanced towards civilization to have chiefs of their own, each of whom resided in a fortified place, having a district of greater or less extent under its jurisdiction, denominated Oót'tam, from Cót'tei a fort; of these there were twenty-four, and they constitute the largest of the subdivisions of the country hereafter noticed. This race was exterminated (in lower Tondei at least, some still remain in upper Tondei) and a tribe of agriculturists, the Vélál'er, or Vel'lál'er, established in the country by A'danda or Tondamán Chacraverty, the son or brother of one of the kings of Sho'zha-man'dalam, the southern portion of which constitutes the modern province of Tanjore at a very early period; possibly before the commencement of the Christian era, as many of the names by which places are now known, and which seem to have been imposed by these colonists, are to be found in Ptolemy's tables.

The Velláler of Tonda-mandalam, were at their first settlement divided into three tribes.—The first were the Condeicatti Velláler, so named from tying the hair in a tuft on the crown of the head instead of leaving a small lock, Cndimi, behind, as worn in this part of India, or before, as worn in Malayálam. These it would seem A'danda Chacraverti found in the country, scattered over it in distant settlements where the land had been sufficiently cleared and reclaimed to admit of agricultural pursuits. The second, Shózha Velláler, accompanied the prince into Tonda-mandalam, but tradition says that few remained, the others being disgusted by the difficulty experienced in clearing the ground, and the small profits resulting from their labours. The third were the Tuluva Velláler, who had emigrated from Tuluva-nádu, situated on the western coast of India, and known by its modern misnomer of Cannada or Canara; these constituted by far the greater body of the settlers, and were induced to remain and bring the whole province into cultivation by the peculiar privileges (the Cárimányam, Méreis, &c., still enjoyed by their descendants) politically conferred upon them by A'danda Chacraverti. Each of these tribes held at present Mírasi in Tonda-mandalam; the Tuluva Velláler in a greater, the Condeicatti and Shózha, each respectively, in a less proportion, and, until the termination of the Tamil government, none but Velláler possessed, or were qualified to possess landed property in the province.

* This name is sometimes given, to Shózha-nádu itself, or rather to the whole of its territories, when it had become far more extensive than any of the other Tamil Kingdoms.

The extent and boundaries of the country thus settled, the number of the settlers and its variation in population and prosperity in after times are to be traced, not by vague tradition only, as is too commonly conceived to be the case with respect to the remains of Indian history, but in writings of different periods, as substantially authentic, probably, though intermixed with undisguised fable, as the records of most other countries.

The two following memorial verses state the boundaries of Tonda-mandalam : the first is ascribed to Auveiyār, a Tamil poetess of high renown.

To the west the Pavazha-malei ; Vengad'am to the north ;

The straight shore of the resounding ocean to the east ; and high in renown

The Pinágei to the south ; in extent twenty cádam ;

Know these to be the boundaries of the excellent 'Ton'dei Náđ'u.

The Pavazha-malei, or coral mountains, are the line of the eastern Ghâts ; Vengadam is one of the names of the sacred hill of Tirupati ; Pinágei (Pinácà) is the Sanscrit name of two rivers, which both rise in the mountains of Nandidurg ; the northern passing by Penaconda and through the district of Nellūr, the southern disemboguing near Cuddalūr, the latter is here meant. Measuring a straight line from the extremity of the Pulicat-lake, where Sñihari-Cóttei, the most northern of the Tonda-maudala villages is bounded by the Swerna-muc'hi river, to the mouth of the Pinágei, the distance, will be found to be almost exactly twenty cádam, or reckoning the cádam at eight miles, one-hundred and sixty miles. The boundaries here stated embrace only the country, below the Ghâts, forming a considerable portion of the extent called by the Mohammedans, and after them by Europeans, commonly, but very erroneously, Carnatic-payenghât.

The Shéyáru to the south ; the sacred Vengadam to the north ;

The inexhaustible ocean, O ye who resemble fawns ! to the east ;

The mountains of the bull to the west ; of Tondei nád'u

They agree that this is the extent.

Shéyáru* is a Tamil name of the river before called, Pinágei ; the mountains of the bull, Idabagiri, are the range of hills on the southern extremity of which stands the fortress of Nandidurg. The boundaries here indicated extend, therefore, much farther to the westward than those stated in the preceding verse, and the whole province may be naturally

* There are two rivers called Shéyáru ; one, taking its rise below the Ghâts, joins the Palār at Tiru-mueudel, a little to the east of Canjeveram ; the other, the Enáttu-Shéyáru, the Shéyáru, of Enádu or Esha-nád'u, the ancient name of the country to the south and west of upper Tondei, is the river here meant and is the same as the southern Pinácà or Pen'nei.

divided into upper and lower Tondei; the latter being as already stated; the former, constituting the north-eastern districts of the country now under the dominion of the Rájà of Maisùr, comprehends the Pergannahs of Co àr, Bara Balapúr and part of Penacouda and of the Subah of Sira, or Carnatic bala-ghât Bijapuri, according to the modern Mogul subdivision of the country.

Of the following extracts, the first is from a well known work; the two next are, also, ascribed, to Auveiyàr; and the two last belong to the great body of traditional stanzas current in the Tamil countries. The list of Cót'tams and Nád'us have been obtained from persons attached to the Matam of the Nyána-prácàsa Pandáram of Cánjipuram, to which establishment fees are payable throughout the province of Tondamandalam.* I must here observe that the Tamil St'hala Puráнас, after passing the fables of mythological periods, with which they usually commence, and gaining the bounds of rational chronology, contain much of what may be considered as the real history of the country, though still obscured occasionally by allegory and distorted by extravagance.

FROM THE TIRUCAZHICUNDA-PURA'NAM.

To the northward of the river Pennei where the bees sip the honey of the fresh flowers;

To the southward of Cálatti (Cálastri) which resounds with the roaring of startled lions;

To the westward of the cool shores of the ocean; and to the eastward of the coral mountains;

I have thus generally described the extent of the prosperous country of Tondíram.

Tondíren, the chief among the leaders of the demon bands of the three-eyed deity, having governed it,

This country became Ton'dira-nád'u; when it was defended by Dan'daca-vénder,

It became accordingly Dan'daca-nád'u; and when Shózher of the family of the sun,

Who was Ton'deimàn adorned by garlands of flowers, extended his protection to it, it became Tón'dei-nád'u.

STANZAS BY AUVEIY'AR.

Malei-nád'u (the hilly country)† abounds in elephants; the renowned Shózha-val'anád'u‡ abounds in rice; the southern country,§ of which Búzhi-yen is sovereign, abounds in pearls; and the well-watered fields of the excellent country of Tondei abound in learned men.

* These lists it has not been thought necessary to insert. H. H. W.

† Malayalam and the district now called Coyembettùr (Coimbatore).

‡ Tanjore and the districts immediately to the north of the Col'id'am (Coleroon).

§ Madurei and its dependencies.

The whole earth may be compared to an expanse of wet-land :

The several countries of the earth, marked by their boundaries on the four sides, have cultivated fields within it ;

Ton'dei-val'a-nád'u is lofty sugar-cane in one of these fields ;

The chief Towns of this country are the crude juice of this sugar-cane ;

Cachchipuram (Canjiveram) and its vicinity are like a cake of unrefined sugar obtained by boiling this juice ;

And a large concretion of refined sugar in the midst of this cake.

Represents the interior of Cachchi, where the bull-borne Deity resides.

A STANZA.

It (Tond'ei-nád'u), contains twenty-four Cót'tam, seventy-nine Nád'u, and one thousand nine-hundred Nat'tam (townships) beautified by the leaves of the palm : the families (gótrams) of ancient descent are twelve thousand, but it is impossible to declare the numbers of the Vel'lál'er in the country.

According to our authority, Tonda, as well as Chola came into the possession of the Pándya princes, by the marriage of Kulotunga's legitimate daughter with Varaguna Pándya, and remained subject to them 570 years.

The work contains also some account of the people of Marawa, who it is said were originally a Colony of Fishermen from Ceylon, settled at Rámeswara, and on the opposite coast, by Ráma to guard the temple. They were made slaves by the new Colonists, and long continued to be subject to the Pándya Princes : at length becoming numerous, they rose against their masters, and established themselves under their own Princes, the Setupatis, or Lords of the straits, the Chandra or Sender bandi, apparently of Marco Polo. For eleven generations the Setupatis were Lords paramount, even over Madura, and the Pándya Princes were reduced to the condition of feudatories, until the whole of the kingdom fell under the Marawa power for three reigns, when they were driven to the south of the Caveri again by the Kurumba Prince of Alakapuri, and finally Madura and Tanjore, were taken from them by the officers of the Vijayanagar Kings. The former continued under the Nayaks of Madura, and the latter was occupied by the Mahrattas, until both came under subjection to European power.

a. Paper.—b. Palm leaves.

A professedly poetical account of the subjugation of Kalinga, by Kulottunga Chola, but the work consists chiefly of the praises of Ganesa and Devi, and a description of poetical or rhetorical ornaments. Some panegyrical notice of Kerikála, Vira, and Kullottunga Chola, occurs, but nothing that can be regarded as history. The latter is made to recover Kalinga from a Moham-medan Prince.

6.—Paralamuvan torhal.

Paper.

A Poetical account of the actions of Vikrama Chola, Kulottunga Chola, and Rájendra Chola, especially of their founding, and endowing Saiva temples, by Uttaga Kuten.

7.—Pándya Rájákal.

a. Paper—b. Palm leaves.

A history of the Pándyan Kings, or Sovereigns of Madura, in thirteen Books : chiefly of a legendary, and sectarial character. It begins with Kulottunga, in the year of Kali one-thousand, and records anecdotes of the following Princes, Anantaguna, Kálabhúshana, Rájendra Pándya, Rájeswara, Gambhira, Vansapradípa, Purukutajit, Pándya Vamsapdtáká, Sundareswara, Pádasekhara, Varaguna, Rájendra, Suguna, Ohitraratha, Chitrabhúshana, Chitradhwaaja, Chitravermá, Chitrasena, Ohitravíkrama, Udanta, Rájá Churámani, Rájá Sárdúla, Kulottunga, Yodhana pravira, Rájá Kunjera, Rájá Bhayankara Ugrasena, Mahásena, Satrunjaya, Bhimeratha, Bhimaperákrama, Pratápa Mártanda, Vikrama Kunjaka, Yuddha Kotáhala, Atulavikrama, Atula Kirti, Kirttibhúshana, Vamsasekhara and Vamsachurámani, or thirty-nine of the seventy-four Princes, which tradition usually ascribes to the Pándya Dynasty. With the exception of the first three, of Varaguna, and the two last, the notice of these Princes is restricted to the simple enumeration of their names, and the stories found in the accounts of the others, are most commonly miraculous legends, illustrating the power of the tutelary deities of the Pandyan Kingdom, Párvati and Siva, combined as Minákshi Sundarésvara. The last five chapters are devoted to marvellous anecdotes of the College of Madura founded by Vamsa Sekhara, for the cultivation of Tamul: the first professors of which forty-eight in number, it is said, were incarnations of the forty-eight letters, of the Sanscrit alphabet and Sundarésvara himself was the 49th. The latter presented the College with a diamond bench or desk, which would give place to no heterodox or inferior productions. The professors becoming arrogant, Siva appeared as Terupurántaka Kaviser, or according to some accounts, Teruvaluvar, the celebrated moral poet, and produced a work which being laid on the desk with the Books of the forty-eight professors thrust every one of them off, and occupied the whole in solitary dignity. The chief teachers of the Madura College were Narakira, Bána, and Kapila, to whose joint labours this work is ascribed.

8.—Tondamána Kathá.

Palm leaves.

A short account of the first settlement of Tonda, by Adonda Chakraverti, the illegitimate son of Kulottunga Chola.

9.—Tondamandala Satakam.

Palm leaves.

An account of the country of Tonda in a hundred stanzas by Padikási.

10.—Kongadasa Rájákal.

Palm leaves.

An account of the Princes of the country known as Konga or Ohera, one of the three principal divisions, with Ohola and Pandya, of the eastern half of the southern portion of the Peninsula. It corresponds nearly with the modern districts of Salem and Coimbatore, with addition of parts of Tinnevelly and Travancore. The boundaries according to the Tamul authorities are the Palini river on the north, Tercasi in Tinnevelly on the east, Malabar on the west, and the Sea on the south.

According to this work, the series of Konga or Ohera Princes, amounted to twenty-six, from Viraráya Chakraverti to Rája Malladeva, in the time of whose descendants the kingdom was subdued by the Ohola Rája, in the year of Sáliváhan 816 or A.D. 894. The Princes here enumerated are Vira Rája, Govinda Rája, Krishna Rája, Kalivallabha, Govinda the 2nd. Chaturbhujá, Kumáradeva, Trivikrama Deva, Kongani Vermá, Mádhava Vermá, Hari Vermá, Vishnugopa, Krishna Vermá Dindikara, Durvaniti, Pushkara, Trivikrama, Bhúvikrama, Kongani Mahádhirája, Govinda 3rd, Sivaga, Prithivi Kongani Mahádhirája, Rája, Malla Deva, Ganda Deva, Satyav ákya Deva, Gunottama Deva. From the Tanjore Sovereigns, Ohera passed under the dominion of the Belál Rájas of Maisur, and finally under that of the Princes of Vijayanagar, of whom some account is also given in this work.

11.—Kernáta Rájákal.

a. Palm leaves—b. do—c. do—d. do.

An account of the Sovereigns of the Carnatic. After a short notice of Yudhishtira, and his brethren and of some Hindu Princes of the Lunar family, the Manuscript gives an account of the Mogul Sovereigns of Hindustan, and the family of Nizam ali, MSS. b. is an abridgment.

12.—Keraladesa Kathá.

Palm leaves.

A short account of Parasuráma's granting the country of Kerala or Malabar to the Brahmans, and of some of the actions of Oheruman Perumál, who is said to have established the divisions of the country still subsisting, and to have become a convert to Mohammedanism.

13.—Tuluwadesa Kathá.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

A short account of Tuluva from the time of Alengir, including an account of the descendants of Sivaji.

14.—Dillirája Kathá.

Palm leaves.

A short genealogical account of the descendants of Arjuna, and a few ancient Hindu Princes and some account of the reign of Krishna Rája of Vijayanagar.

15.—Janameyaya Vansávali.

Palm leaves

A short account of the family of Janameyaya the great-grandson of Arjuna.

16.—Vádur Sthala Purána.

a. Palm leaves—b. do—c. do—d. Paper.

Account of the life of Mánikya Vásaka, Prime minister of Arimerddana or of Vamsa Sekhara, King of Madura, and celebrated for his devotedness to Siva. Having been sent on a mission to buy horses, he encountered Siva as a Pandaram, or Saiva teacher, by the way, and in consequence of his lessons, distributed the money he was intrusted with to his mendicant followers, and an adjacent temple of that divinity. The Rájá hearing of what was taking place, sent to command his return to Madura, with which, by the advice of the seeming Pandaram, he complied; informing the king he had bought the horses, which would arrive at a lucky hour: at first the king believed him, but upon further information, doubting his veracity, subjected him to severe tortures, until Siva changing a number of jackalls into horses, and himself assuming the appearance of the dealer, arrived at Madura, and delivered them to the king. Being conducted to the stables, the jackalls at night resumed their proper shapes, killed the real horses, and broke loose and ravaged the country. Mánikya Vásaka was in consequence again imprisoned, and tortured, when Siva caused the Vygi to overflow its banks, and deluge the country, until his worshipper was released—other marvels are narrated of Mánikya Vásaka, who finally left the Rájá's service with honour, and adopted a religious life, in which character he composed the Terruvargam, a set of verses in four books in praise of Siva, and other similar works, also a grammar of the Tamul language—After visiting the principal temples of Siva in the Dekhin, he settled at Chilambaram, where he was visited by a deputation of Bauddha priests from Ceylon, whom he disputed with and overcame. He also cured the daughter of the Raja of Ceylon of dumbness, on which she repeated the twenty verses in praise of Siva, which are annexed to the Teruvá-chakam. The Bauddhas were converted by these marvels.

Mánikya Vāsaka was finally absorbed into the Linga at Ohidambaram, in the presence of all the people.

The work is by Sivajnyána, a Pandaram or Siva Ascetic.

17.—Agastya Varalár.

a. Paper—b. Palm leaves.

An account of the Muni Agastya taken partly from the 1st section of the Kási Khanda of the Skanda Purána, and partly from local legends. Agastya is said to have come from the north of India, and settled finally in the south, where he was the author of the first elements of Tamul Grammar. His grammatical writings no longer exist in consequence of an imprecation upon him, by his disciple Tolgappya, but a number of medical writings bear his name. Manuscript b. is also known as the Purána Maharshi Kathá.

18.—Nanghattár Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

Account of the foundation of the Tamul College at Madura for forty-nine professors by the Pándya Rája Vamsa Sekhara, and the triumph over the professors by Teruválluver, the author of Koral.

19.—Gnyána Samandhar Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

Account of a Saiva Priest, who is said to have confuted the Bauddhas or Jainas in the days of Guna Pándya, and to have restored the ascendancy of the Saiva faith in the Chola and Pándya Kingdoms.

20.—Sirutonda Yachhagdna.

Palm leaves.

Account of Sirutonda, originally a Jaina, but a convert to the faith of Siva, in which capacity he received a visit from Siva, disguised as a Jangam. By Gnyána Prakasika.

21.—Balayála Rája Yachhagána.

Account of the faith of the Balayála Rája of Sindhukota in Siva. The God having come to his house as a Saiva mendicant, and being hospitably entertained by him, desired him to procure him the company of a female, who had been chaste for a certain period, and the Prince being unable to procure such a woman in the city, presented his own wife to his guest. Siva satisfied with this mark of his piety, appeared in his real figure, and conferred a recompense on the prince.

22.—Kumbhakona Virabhadra Tamburan Bharani.

Palm leaves.

Account of a priest of the Vira Saiva sect who was settled at Kumbhakona, and is here described as an incarnation of Virabhadra the angry emanation of Siva, employed by him to disturb the sacrifice of Daksha, which legend is also narrated in the usual manner, and forms the bulk of the work. By Katta lutan.

23.—Virabhadra Tamburan matha Vernanam.

Palm leaves.

Some account of the Saiva establishment of Pandarams at Kumbhakona, and its founder Virabhadra, as well as of some of his successors as principals.

24.—Madhurá Viráppan Ammán.

a. Palm leaves—b. do—c. do.

An account of Viráppa one of the subordinate chiefs of the Madura Kingdom under the Náyaks, Viráppa, is said to have been the son of Tulasi Mahá Rája, but the astrologers announcing that he would cause the ruin of his family, his father ordered him to be exposed in the forests. He was there found by a man of the Ohandála or Pariar caste, and brought up by him to the period of adolescence, when with his father, he was employed in the service of one of the Poligars of Madura, Bomma or Bommaya Náyak. Here he engaged the affection of the Poligar's daughter, and raised an insurrection against her father, in which Bommaya Náyak was killed, and Viráppa married the daughter. Viráppa then took service with Chokanáth Náyak of Trichinapally, by whom he was sent with an army to clear Madura of banditti. After his return, whilst visiting a harlot by night, he is taken up for a thief, and has his hands and legs cut off. He then adopts a religious life, on which his wife burns herself, whilst he, after repairing to various holy shrines dedicated to Siva, is absorbed in a stone Pillar, by favour of Minákshi amman and Sundareswara, and is worshipped at Madura in that form. By Nangaya.

25.—Bommanáyaka Kathá.

Palm leaves.

A short account of the family of Bomma or Bommapa Náyak, one of the Telingana chiefs who accompanied Nágama or Viswanátha Náyak from Vijayanagar to Madura, and were by him sent over different districts as Poligars. These jurisdictions were not unfrequently changed, and their allegiance transferred to the chiefs of Tanjore or Marawa, until under the British Government, the family was admitted according to this authority, to a part property in the Villages of Karasahetu and Warapur. By the Wakil or attorney of the family.

26.—Rámáppayyen.

Paper.

Account of the defeat of Vanneya, son of Adi Náráyan Rájá of Rámnád, by Rámáppya, the General of Tirumala Náyak, of Madura, about the middle of the 17th century. The object of this war was to restore Tumbi, the nephew of Adináráyan, whom his uncle had deposed: according to other authorities, Vanneya successfully resisted on his father's part, the attack of the Madura General, and it was only after his death, that Tumbi was made Setupati or Prince of Marava and Ramnád. By Tennamanar Kavi.

27.—Chengi Rajakal.

Palm leaves.

Account of Jayasinh, Raja of Chengi or Gingee, his defeat by the Nawab of Arcot, and his death.

28.—Narasinh Ráya Vamsávali.

Genealogical list of the Princes of Vijayanagar, and an enumeration of the districts subject to them, in the time of Narasinh Ráya, the 14th of that dynasty.

29.—Bháshyakára Oheritra.

Palm leaves.

Some account of the Vaishnava reformer Rámánuja, termed Bhāshyakāra from his explanation of the Vedas; his visits to different holy places, and their recovery from the Saivas, for the worship of different forms of Vishnu especially at Tripeti, and his founding the temple of Terunārāyana at Terunārāyanapur, are the chief subjects of this tract.

30.—Guru Namasivāya Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

Legend of some Saiva priest, who adopted the name of Nama Sivāya, glory to Siva, who was first established at Tirunamale, and thence removed to Chidāmbara, where he erected part of the present temple.

31.—Brangē Valangē Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

An enumeration of the tribes who constitute the left hand and right hand castes.

32.—Valangē Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

Collection of legends relating to the Pariar caste especially, but comprehending some of the Velāler of the right hand sect, composed by Vedañāyak by order of Colonel McKenzie. The work is preceded by a history of Viswakarmā, the supposed progenitor of the five principal castes of the left hand, or the Artisans. The Valangē Cheritra consists of 24 sections.

1. Account of Sambūka, Paravidya, and Tiaga, sons of Mallia Peruman the Pariar or outcaste attendant of the demon Ravana.

2. Account of Mariyamma, the goddess of the small pox.

3. Account of Adhi, a Pariar woman, the mother of Mariyamma, by a Brahman husband, and of six other children, or three females and three males; the first are named Uruvi, Aveyar, Valliyamma; the three last, Teruvālluar, Silamman, and Kapila, several of whom of either sex, are the most distinguished of the Tamul writers.

Her lover in a former life, being born as a wood-cutter, prevails upon Narakira, one of the first professors of the Madura College, to contend with the Princes, and having conquered her bestow her on him ; which he accomplishes, when the wood-cutter marries the Princess and reigns over Alaka. By Seyallar.

23.—Alakeswara Kathá.

a. Palm leaves—b. do

Story of the Rajah of Alakapur, and his four ministers, who being falsely accused of violating the sanctity of the inner apartments, vindicate their innocence, and disarm the king's wrath by narrating a number of stories. The following incidents are illustrative of the oriental origin of part of Zadig.

“ In the reign of Alakendra Raja king of Alaka Puri, it happened that four persons of respectability were travelling on the high road, when they met with a merchant who had lost one of his camels. Entering into conversation with him, one of the travellers enquired if the camel was not lame in one of its legs ; another asked if it was not blind of the right eye : the third asked if the tail was not unusually short : and the fourth demanded if it was not subject to the cholic. They were answered in the affirmative by the merchant, who was satisfied they must have seen the animal, and eagerly demanded where they had met it. They replied they had seen traces of the camel, but not the camel itself, which being inconsistent with the minute acquaintance they seemed to possess, the merchant accused them of being thieves, and having stolen his beast, and immediately applied to the Raja for redress. The Raja on hearing the merchant's story was equally impressed with the belief, that the travellers must know what had become of the camel, and sending for them, he threatened them with his extreme displeasure, if they did not confess the truth. How could they know, he demanded, the camel was lame or blind, that the tail was long or short, or that it was subject to any malady unless they had it in their possession. On which they severally explained the reasons that had induced them to express their belief of these particulars.

The first observed, I noticed in the foot-marks of the animal that one was deficient, and I concluded accordingly that he was lame in one of his legs. The second said, I noticed the leaves of the trees on the left side of the road had been snapped or torn off, whilst those on the right side were untouched, whence I concluded the animal was blind in his right eye. The third remarked, I saw a number of drops of blood on the road, which I conjectured had flowed from the bites of gnats and flies, and thence supposed the camel's tail was shorter than usual, in consequence of which he could not brush the insects away. The fourth said, I observed that whilst the fore feet of the camel were planted firmly in the ground, the hind ones appeared to have scarcely touched it, whence I guessed they were contracted by pain in the belly of the animal. The king when he heard their explanations was much struck by the sagacity of the parties, and giving the merchant a sum of money to console him for the loss of the camel, he made these four persons his principal ministers."

By Ponnambalam.

53.—Agastya Jnyána.

Palm leaves.

A collection of a hundred verses attributed to the Muni Agastya upon the means of obtaining divine wisdom. In some of the verses, he impugns the authority of the Rámáyana and Mahábhárat, and in others is made to give a curious account of himself ; as appears from the following translations of the passages by a Tamul Brahman in Col. McKenzie's employ.

"In verses 10 to 15, Agastya asserts that the Rámáyana and Mahábhárat are not true records but were invented by Vyása, to enable the votaries of Siva to gain a subsistence."

In the 74th and following verses we have a modification of the Pauranic story of his birth. Agastya is made to say

"Hearken, I declare that I obtained the eminent name of Agastya, because I was formerly a Sudra, my preceptor was a Brahman who resided to the South of Mahámeru.

Before receiving his instructions, I purified my animal frame of all imperfections by abstract devotion : I forsook the world, and lived in caves and rocks, when my holy preceptor appeared and said, Come, I admit you as my disciple. I assented and followed him. He lighted a sacrificial fire, and placed in it a jar, into which he commanded me to leap. I did so, and was consumed, and was born again, and issued from the jar, which was then changed into the form of a woman.

Verily that jar was a form of Maheswara, and the Brahman, of Mahadeva, who were my parents. They brought me up, and trained me in all learning, and finally Siva conferred upon me immortality."

Accounts of his subsequent actions occur in the 32d to the 39th verse, in which he says, that by command of Siva he repaired to the Dekhin to illuminate the darkness of the people, and that he invented eighteen languages, including the Shen Tamul—the old or poetical Tamul. "After this" he continues, "I was ordered by Siva to compose various Sastras—and accordingly I wrote 100,000 stanzas on Rasáyana (Alchemy) 200,000 on Medicine and 100,000 on divine wisdom. The first I abridged in 1,200 stanzas, the last in 100, and those on Medicine I distributed in different works."

He specifies a number of persons as his disciples, the chief of whom are his Son Satyamuni, and his pupil Sundara.

Agastya is said to have taken up his residence on Podiamalé, at the source of the Támraparní river, who is described mythologically as his daughter by adoption, given to him by Siva.

The following list of works ascribed to Agastya is given, but they are generally supposed to have perished with a few exceptions.

65.—Kumáreswara Sataka.

Palm leaves.

A tract on the duties of the different castes, and orders of Hindu Society—by Rupandar.

66.—Tiruvalluwer Koral.

Palm leaves.

A Series of stanzas, of a moral character, on various conditions of human life. This work is of great celebrity in the south of India; as one of the earliest, and best compositions in the high or poetical Tamul. The real history of the author, the divine Valluwer, seems to be little known, and legend has been substituted for Biography. According to the tradition he was one of the seven children of the Brahman Perali by Adhi a Pariar female, and like the rest was exposed as soon as born. He was found and brought up by the Pariares of Mailapur. When arrived at man's estate, he visited Madura in the reign of Vamsasekhara, and overcame the professors of the Tamul College in disputation, in consequence of which he remained attached to the establishment, notwithstanding his inferior birth. The Koral was translated by the late Mr. Ellis, who added to the translation a valuable commentary, illustrating the customs and laws, the literature, and religion of the south of India, as well as a grammatical analysis of the text, which likewise accompanied the translation of the work. In this state, 304 pages were printed at Madras, and the following specimens of it may not be here out of place :—

CHAPTER IV.

On the Power of Virtue.

I.

What more doth profit man than virtue doth,
By which felicity is given, and whence Eternal bliss ensues ?*

II.

No greater gain than virtue can'st thou know,
Than virtue to forget no greater loss.

* The passages of the original work, and the citations in the Comment, are all printed in Mr. Ellis's publication in the original Tamul.

III.

That which in spotless purity preserves
The mind in real virtue ; all besides
Is evanescent sound.

IV.

Refer not virtue to another day ;
Receive her now and at thy dying hour
She'll prove thy never-dying friend.

V.

Pleasure from virtue springs ; from all but this
No real pleasure e'er ensues, nor praise.

VI.

Know that is virtue which each ought to do ;
What each should shun is vice.

COMMENT ON THE LAST VERSE.

"That is virtue which each ought to do." This simple definition is both more intelligible and more correct than definitions usually are. It is not exceeded in either respect by the definition of the same thing in the following verse, which is said to belong to the Bhárátam, though I have not been able to find it therein, and quote it, therefore, from the Nítisáram, the essence of morality, a compilation from various works. Though distinct in their literal purport, both are essentially the same, and must be admitted by all sects to be axioms in morality.

I will declare in half a Stanza that which has been the theme of millions.

TO DO GOOD TO OTHERS BELONGS TO VIRTUE, TO DO EVIL TO OTHERS, TO VICE.

It is necessary, however, to explain with accuracy the intention of the author, that his expressions should be more minutely examined. The precise meaning of this couplet turns on the sense of the word Páladu which signifies both that which is natural and that which is apportioned, being derived from the root pálá nature, also, a share or allotment ; the first sentence, therefore, may be literally rendered, either virtue is that which it is natural for each to do, or that which is allotted for each to do. Considered with respect to the destined effects of former deeds, these two meanings are equivalent, for that which is thus allotted to a being by destiny constitutes its natural disposition ; considered, however, with respect to the two particulars, which, according to the author, are included under the general idea of virtue, the former signification applies to the preference given spontaneously by the mind to natural right, and the consequent exercise of benevolence and charity, and, under the latter, to the preference given from reflection to positive right, and the consequent obedience to the precepts of the law ; both significations are expressed by the English auxiliary ought. This distinction is observed and respected by the commentator, as he has not ventured to change the term in his paraphrase, only substituting the abstract noun for the conjugated form.

The doctrine of the author, as here explained, and, as generally inculcated in the chapter, respecting the origination of moral bias, and the inclination towards the good and the evil arising from the fatal influence described under the term mostly rendered destiny, coincides exactly with none of the various systems maintained by European writers, though there are many points in which all resemble it. On the one hand it differs, widely, from the opinions of those who conceive man to be born as a mere animal without natural propensities, and, indifferent alike to good or evil, to be directed towards them solely by education, or association and habit ; for, though authority and precept are allowed their due share in influencing the will in the choice of either, all power and, consequently, all determination is attributed to nature or destiny, these terms being used indifferently to describe the same thing. As it allows nothing to chance, so neither does it ascribe anything wholly to circumstance. On the other hand, also, it differs considerably from the notions we usually attach to the terms fate and predestination ; for, though the election of the will, and the feelings of nature, are all under the direction of an inscrutable destiny, as this takes its origin and character from the uncontrolled acts of the individual it governs, it is not incompatible with the active exertion of free will, in all things not within its immediate scope and tendency. The term fate, therefore, as used in Europe, and vidhi as used in India, though both signifying an over-ruling and inevitable necessity, conveys to the mind of the Indian, an idea so distinct in the concrete from that which the European conceives of it, that their original identity is nearly lost. The notion conveyed by the word predestination, or the determination of the eternal salvation or perdition of souls by divine decree, so familiar to the mind of an European, is not readily comprehended by an Indian, and I have found it difficult, therefore, to render it intelligible to many who had long been accustomed to abstract reasoning, and to whom the abstrusest points of their own philosophy presented no difficulties ; there is in fact no term in Tamil or Sanscrit by which it can be correctly translated, though of course its meaning may be expressed by a periphrasis or compound.

Though in the preceding verse the motives of moral action are in their effect designedly confounded, so that its actuating cause appears to be individual gratification, the doctrine I have attempted to explain, is in reality, also, very different from that of some eminent writers, who make self-interest the sole motive of moral conduct ; for, as already explained, it implies the existence of two separate causes, namely, the intuitive perception and preference of that which is beneficial, and obedience to authority from rational conviction. These though speculatively, perhaps, they may be referred to a common origin, are really distinct in their operation ; for man, as he actually exists, is equally the creature of nature and habit, which in him are so confounded that it is impossible, morally and physically, to distinguish the effects of one from those of the other. Menu, therefore, is practically right in subdividing the second of these causes, as he does in the following verse, the 12th of his Second Chapter (Dwitiye'd-hayah), at the commencement of which he distinctly assigns the love of self, or hope of benefit, as the primary motive of all virtuous and religious action.

The Scripture, the revealed codes, approved custom, and that which is gratifying to his own self ;

These four modes are declared by the learned to constitute the regular body of the law.

Still more adverse to this doctrine are the notions conveyed by the expression moral sense and moral sentiments, words with which certain writers have amused themselves and their readers. To maintain the existence of a sense or sensible faculty, for which there is no correspondent sensitive organ, would disconcert the gravity of an Indian philosopher. "Is not the knowledge of external objects" he would probably ask, "suggested to the mind by the impulse of those objects on the senses, and, though the operation of the senses is secret, are not the organs of each apparent ? where then lies the physical organ of morality ? If it be difficult, nay perhaps impossible, to explain how the minute atoms exhaling from the essential oils of a flower, by operating on the olfactory nerves, which constitute the organ of smell, excite in the mind the idea of perfume, wilt thou undertake to show how the abstract being morality, by operating on the organ thou hast imagined, and called the moral sense, can excite the idea of virtue." Were this notion indeed admitted as correct, how could the variety of moral institutions exist which prevail among mankind, all tending towards the same object, and in fact effecting by various means the object towards which they tend ? If, as fancied by these visionaries, there could exist a moral sense or instinct, like other senses and instincts, its operation must be invariable ; all mankind would form the same undeviating notion of right and wrong, as they do of black and white, and moral action would universally be governed by rules as immutable as those that guide the bee in every region of the earth in the construction of its comb or the swallow in the building of its nest. But it is not so ; for though, as all mankind have the same general wants and are actuated, therefore, by the same general motives in the exercise of choice, they must in many cases necessarily prefer the same objects, yet it does not follow that in all cases they should prefer the same, and still less that they should endeavour to obtain them by the same means, or observe the same rules in the enjoyment of them. Thus though female purity, according to the notion entertained of it by the European, may to him appear an object of undoubted preference, and the preservation of it, secured by the maxims of morality and the precepts of religion, may be productive to him of gratification and happiness, it by no means follows that the miseries resulting from immorality must be the portion of the community in which a notion of it entirely dissimilar is adopted; as in the province of Malayalam, where among the superior caste of Sudras, all women, with certain restrictions as to tribes, are common to all men, and where this state of things is equally productive of public order and private happiness, as the stricter institutions of Europe.

In all arguments relative to the powers and operation of mind, whether considered abstractedly, or in connection with its material means, the endeavour to trace them to any unmixed and wholly simple principle, is unsafe in speculation, if not unfounded in nature, and, consequently, unsound in philosophy. This delusive spirit of generalization, which has given "local habitation and a name" to so many insubstantial theories has influenced the reasoning of men on morality in the east as well as the west; all Indian sects agree in referring the election and practice of virtue in part to positive precept, but some, assign the origin of both to precept only, and admit no morality but what is expressly ordained, not however by human authority, as the sceptical writers of Europe maintain, but by the revealed law of God. Mixed motives, in cases even where they are apparently the most simple, it is probable, always govern the decisions of the will, and the alchymy of the mind, therefore, which endeavours to reduce all its phenomena to an empirical simplicity, is as unnatural a chimera as the alchymy of matter, the elements of the former being no more homogeneous than those of the latter.

The following verses have been selected for the further elucidation of the subject of this Chapter; for the future, similar illustrations will be added without formal notice, unless more particular explanation should be necessary than can be given in a note.

PAZHA-MOZHI.

Those men who have long neglected virtuous acts let them practise them even for a short space by means of the wealth they possess; for know, O thou, whose breasts are firm and waist taper! that the virtue of benevolence acts when relations act not.

When born in a human form, difficult of attainment, practise virtue to the utmost of thy power: for inevitable pain, uniting with fearful disease, old age and death, approacheth to destroy thee.

If when virtue is practised it be rightly considered, and the nature of it fully comprehended, it will assist in the attainment of eternal felicity; wealth if preserved will increase, but by the practise of virtuous acts the opposite (sin) will be destroyed.

With the wealth thou enjoyest, and without offending others, perform the acts of benevolence on which thou hast resolved, completely; it is as advantageous to neglect to reap that which thou hast planted, as to sustain the loss which will result from breaking off in the midst and leaving them imperfect.

As a mother compels a froward child that refuseth the breast to receive the milk, so do thou by severity, regardful of eternity only, excite the sacred flame in the minds of those devoid of virtue.

Can they, who reflect on the transitory existence of their parents, account the wealth of this world real wealth? be charitable as becometh thy condition, for none can block up the way of a rolling mountain (i.e. cannot stay the inevitable approach of death.)

Those who without reflection have neglected the righteous deeds, which, before dying, they ought to have performed, and, be thinking themselves of their future road, only when warned by sickness, then endeavour to perform them, will be as much at a loss as if seeking in vain for a stone when they see a dog; (about to attack them.)

As it confers renown in this world, and in the other, felicity, to those who constantly practise the virtue of benevolence, the two roads branching from the same point, and each leading to happiness.

PRABHULINGA LILA.

The sages say, that, as milk, which from its excellence ought to be preserved in a golden vase, is lost by pouring it into a furrow of the earth, so the advantages of the human form are lost to him, who, after wandering from body to body, hath with difficulty acquired it, if he do not aspire to be relieved from the affliction of various births and attain, by its means, to unchargeable eternity by the practice of every kind of virtue however arduous.

The keeper of the refreshing flower-garden said—"There is none more subject to delusion than he, who, being endowed with a body, perishable as lightning, by which an imperishable body, may be obtained and he may attain to everlasting felicity, fearing to mortify that body, neglecteth the practice of righteous acts from love of it and, indulging in luxury, liveth in vain.

CHINTAMENI.

Even when you proceed to a village where none but your own connections reside, you are careful, as if you were at enmity with them, not to set your foot without the door, unless you are provided with provisions for the journey; when death bears you away, and you are alone in a dreadful road, you will have made no provision for the journey, ye who are solicitous only for the well-being of the body.

As when the stalk of a water lily is broken the fibrous threads within it are yet unbroken, thus, though thy old body be destroyed, thy sins will follow thee and, surrounding thy indestructible soul, will plunge it into the lowest and most dreadful hell and burn it in flames of unquenchable fire with torment unutterable,

If men of virtuous minds are charitable to all beings, their former acts shall inseparably accompany the soul like the shadow of a bird flying in the air, without even one being forgotten, and shall liberally afford whatever they desire, like the Cow (Oámadhénu), which yieldeth all that is required.

I have both neglected to pay due honors to the sages who have studied the ancient scriptures, and to guests whom I ought to have received hospitably; not reflecting, that, besides the effects of my righteous and unrighteous deeds, nothing will follow me and that nothing else is really mine; for will either the house I inhabit, or the wives I have wedded, or the children I have begotten, or the body I animate accompany me? When dead I shall plunge into a dreadful hell and in after-births be afflicted by poverty and distress.

Without great care and fatigue of body, wealth cannot be acquired; without the wealth aforesaid those good acts, whence merit proceedeth, cannot be performed; and, unless such acts are performed, righteousness cannot exist; if righteousness exist not, happiness cannot be obtained; consequently without the assiduous practice of virtue there can be no happiness: with all thy power therefore follow righteousness.

BARADAM.

From righteousness proceedeth victory, and unrighteousness destroyeth the strength of the body; those, who have overleaped the bounds of science, have unanimously declared this to be their effect, and their words we perceive are exemplified in thee, O Prince; (Derma-rájen) for returning from exile thou reignest, O thou who hast no equal! over crowned Kings.

STANZAS BY SIDAMBALA PANDARAM.

As there is nothing more profitable than virtue, the practice of it must not be neglected; for from the neglect of it proceedeth in this world infamy, misfortune and death, and inevitable misery will follow hereafter.

If one neither permitteth his mind to be defiled by the wicked deeds which originate from the propensity to evil, by which all souls existent in the earth surrounded by the dark ocean are afflicted, nor by outrageous anger, destructive of respect, nor by any other stain, the sages have decided that this is real virtue; to those who regard any virtue more contracted than this, ostentation only will be attributed, for in it there is no purity.

To those, who deeming this body as instable as a bubble in the water, do not defer to a future time the practice of virtue, but perform it with delight while yet firm in health, virtue shall assist them in the hour of death and accompany them when they depart.

Though born in the greatest tribe they are mean if they are not exemplary in the practice of virtue, and they are equal to the greatest, of whatever tribe they are, who by the practice of virtue divest themselves of their natural meanness; these by their deeds will rise to renown and heaven, those sink to infamy and hell.

By beneficence only the Gods attained to all good, by the contrary wealth and pleasure perish; of the two species, domestic virtue produceth wealth and pleasure; and religious virtue, final beatitude, far exceeding both:—is there any thing that exceedeth this?

A STANZA.

Devotion performed without knowledge is not devotion; a virtuous act void of reason and reflection is not virtue; therefore, devotion performed without the clearness of knowledge is like washing in unclean water, and virtue not guided by well measured reason is a jewel with a flaw; thus say, the wise of old, whose devotion consisted in silent contemplation, and they have established it as an important rule to be known by all.

A STANZA.

The lustre of the eye, as instantaneously as a flash of lightning, darts its sparkling beauty and is gone: the most requisite qualification think not to be beauty; shining qualities are not requisite, good qualities are.

The proud vainly think within themselves that strict and equal virtue is theirs alone and is found no where else;

But say not that virtue rests only with yourselves, nor believe that it is the peculiar attribute of any, for she walks with an equal pace among us all:

It is the coparcenary possession of all within the bounds of the earth, that pearl of the clearest and most beautiful water, and the exactest shape, that high-priced pearl is virtue.

COUPLETS.

From knowledge proceedeth goodness, from goodness knowledge; thus kind produceth kind.

As the diamond polisheth the diamond, so do the unblemished virtuous promote goodness in others.

If evil be done that good may ensue, that good is not stable; good is maintained by goodness.

If thou have the fortitude to stop in the path of vice and to forsake it; know this to be the greatest virtue of thy nature.

Although men, addicted to the ways of this world, follow various institutions, inward virtue only is the virtue that exalteth to the stars.

Beschi observes of the author of the Koral; "the poet so well known under the name of Tiruválluven was of the low tribe of Paraya but of his real name we are ignorant; for although he had no less than seven commentators not one of them has mentioned it. *Válluva*n is the appellation by which soothsayers and learned men of the Paraya tribe are distinguished, and Tiru here signifies divine, in the sense in which we say the divine Plato." Babington's translation of Beschi's Grammar of the Shen Tamil.

67.—Varunáditya.

Paper.

A work on ethics for the use of the Pariar caste, attributed to the same author as the preceding.

a. Palm leaves—b. do—c. do—d. do—e. do.

A work in illustration of the Koral, or moral precepts of Tiruvalluvar—by Ranganáth or Rangeswara.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

A series of moral injunctions in verse by the celebrated female poet and philosopher Avyár, an account of whom, with a translation of this and other tracts of a similar kind, by the same author, is published in the 7th Volume of the Asiatic Researches, by the Revd. Dr. John: according to him Avyár lived about the 9th century of the Christian era. Her writings are composed in the high or poetical Tamul.

70.—Kunneivenden.

Palm leaves.

Moral precepts in verse by Avyár, this also is translated in the Asiatic Researches: see the preceding.

71.—Nanwali.

Palm leaves.

Moral precepts in verse by Avyár: see the two preceding.

72.—Nalaripada Ure.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

A work in forty sections upon the moral obligations of man in society: attributed to holy teachers amongst the Jainas.

Philology.

1.—Tolghappiyam.

Palm leaves.

A Grammar of the Tamil Language by Tolghappya who is said to have been an incarnation of Vishnu, and the pupil of Agastya, whose large Grammar, consisting of 80,000 rules, he abridged, reducing the number to 8,000. According to some traditions, this Grammar is an amplification of a similar work, ascribed to Vira Pándya Raja of Madura. It is written in an abstruse and difficult style. The following short account of it is from the “Babington’s translation of Beschi’s Grammar of the Shen or High Tamil.” One ancient work written by a person called Tolcappiyanàr (ancient author) is still to be met with; but from its conciseness it is so obscure and unintelligible, that a devotee named Pavananti was induced to write on the same subject.

2.—Nannul.

a. Palm leaves.—b. do.

A portion of an intended work on Tamil Grammar by an ascetic Pavanandi. Beschi observes, his work is denominated Nannul, a term that corresponds exactly to the French Belles Letters, and the Latin Literæ humaniores. The work was to consist of five parts, treating of letters, words, composition, versification and embellishment, but the two first were the only parts completed.

3.—Tonnul Vilakhanam.

Palm leaves.

A Grammar of the high Tamul Dialect by Vira Mahamuni or Father Beschi. The following account of this celebrated Missionary is taken from Mr. Babington’s Gooroo Paramarttan.

“The few following particulars, of one whose fame is so well established in the South of India, may not be unacceptable to those whose views are directed to that country. They are taken from a Tamul MS. in my possession.

Viramāmooni or the great Champion Devotee, as Beschi is surnamed by the Tamuls, was a native of Italy, and one of the religious order of Jesuits. Having been appointed by the Pope to the East India Mission, he arrived, in 1700, at the city of Goa, on the Western coast. He thence proceeded to Avoor, in the district of Trichinopoly, where he studied the Tamul language in both its dialects, as well as the Sanskrit and Teloogoo ; and with a view to public employment, which it was ever the Jesuit policy to seek in order to promote their religious views, he made himself master of the Hindostanee and Persian. It is probable that he held political offices in the earlier part of his life, for we can hardly suppose him to have risen at once to the appointment of Divan, which he held under the celebrated Chunda Saheb, during his rule as Nabob of Trichinopoly, especially as Chunda Saheb did not assume the government of that place until the death of the Raja, which happened in the year 1736.

From the moment of his arrival in India, he, in conformity with Hindoo custom, abandoned the use of animal food, and employed Brahmans to prepare his meals. He adopted the habit of a religious devotee, and on his visitations to his flock assumed all the pomp and pageantry with which Hindoo Goornos usually travel. He founded a church at Konāngooppam Ariyanoor, in the district of Baroor, and my MS. notices particularly a picture of the Madonna and the child Jesus, which he caused to be painted at Manilla and set up in that church. It was in honour of this Madonna, of her husband Joseph and the Lord Jesus, that he composed the Sacred Poem called Tēmbāvani : which, vying in length with the Iliad itself, is by far the most celebrated and most voluminous of his works. It contains 3615 tetrasticks, each of which is furnished with a prose interpretation ; and, to judge from the only Padalam or Canto which I have had an opportunity of reading, where the murder of the innocents is described, its merits are not overrated. Viramāmoonni also founded a church at Tirookāvaloor, a name which he gave to the town of Vadoogapet, in the district of Ariyaloor, and on the Madonna there he composed three Poems : Tirookāvaloor Kalambagam, Anneiyajoongal Andādi, and Adeikala Mālei—The following are the most important of the remaining works of this author ; which, with exceptions that will be noticed, are extant only in MS.

Kitēri Ammāl Ammānei, a poem. Vēdiyarookkam, a work in prose ; where as the name implies, the duties of one who has devoted his life to religion are laid down. Vēda Vilakkam, also in prose ; which, from the title (the light of; the gospel), I presume to contain some doctrinal exposition of the Roman Catholic Faith. A Dictionary, Tamul and French, another Tamul and Portuguese ; a third Tamul and Latin Sadoor Agharādi, or the four Dictionaries ; a Tamul work relating to the higher dialect. Of philological works he has furnished Tonnool Vilakkam ; a tamul Grammar of the higher dialect, written in Latin. Of this I made a Translation in 1814 ; which, having become the property of the Madras Government, is now, as I learn, under course of publication at their College Press. The Clavis Humaniorum Tamulici Idiomatis ; a second Grammatical Treatise in Latin, relating to the higher dialect. A Latin Grammar of the common dialect ; which has been published at the College Press at Madras ; and of which a faulty and vulgar translation has long been before the public.

Such were the literary labours of Beschi, and he was distinguished as much for his piety and benevolence as for his learning. To the conversion of idolators his principal efforts were of course directed, and they are said to have been uncommonly successful. Perfect master of Hindoo science, opinions and prejudices, he was eminently qualified to expose the fallacies of their doctrine, and the absurdities of their religious practices ; and, accordingly, he is much extolled for the triumphs which he obtained, in those controversial disputations which are so frequent among the learned in India, and for the almost miraculous skill which he displayed, in solving various enigmatical questions which his adversaries propounded for his embarrassment.

It remains a subject of regret, that talents so rare, should have been devoted to the promotion of a religion scarcely less replete with error, than that which it supplanted : but we may draw this practical conclusion from Beschi's success, that a thorough acquaintance with Hindoo learning and a ready compliance, in matters of indifference with Hindoo customs, are powerful human means, to which the Jesuits owed much of their success, and which should not, as is too much the case, be despised by those who undertake the task of conversion in a better cause. Viramāmoonni continued to hold the office of Divan, in Trichinopoly, until the year 1740 : when that city being besieged by the Mahratta army, under Morary Rao, and Chunda Sahib being taken prisoner, he contrived to effect his escape, and fled to the city of Gāyal Patanam, then belonging to the Dutch. He there remained, in the service of the church, until 1742, when he was carried off by an illness, the particulars of which are not stated. His name is still remembered in Gāyal Patanam, and Masses continue to be offered up for the salvation of his soul in that city and its neighbourhood.

a. Palm leaves.—b. do—c. do—d. do—e. do.

A Vocabulary of the Tamil language arranged according to the significations of the words, or Deities, Men, Animals, Trees, Countries, &c. by Mandala Purusha, a Jain Puudit.

5.—Agastya Vyākaraṇa.

Paper.

A short grammar of the Tamul language attributed to the sage Agastya, but the genuine work is supposed not to be in existence.

“ The first person who wrote a grammatical treatise on this dialect (high Tamil,) and who is therefore considered as its founder, is supposed to have been a devotee named Agathian (Agastya) respecting whom many absurd stories are related. From the circumstance of his dwelling in a mountain called Podia malei, in the South of the Peninsula, the Tamil language has obtained the name of Shen Mozhi, just as the Grandhonic is termed Vad Mozhi from the supposition that it came from the Northward. A few of the rules laid down by Agatteyan have been preserved by different authors but his works are no longer in existence." Beschi's Grammar of Shen Tamil, p. ix.

6.—Dandi Alankára.

Palm leaves.

A work on Rhetorical and Poetical composition, a translation apparently of the Kávyádersa of Dandi.

7.—Devákaram.

a. Palm leaves.—b. do—c. Paper.

A Vocabulary of the Tamul language in twelve sections, arranged according to their signification.

8.—Chidambara Agharadi.

Palm leaves.

A Tamil Dictionary arranged alphabetically.

9.

A Dictionary of Tamul and French, paper, one volume, quarto.

This is the work of the Jesuit Missionary Beschi and bears date 1774.

Astronomy and Astrology.

1.—Subrahmanya Karawal.

Paper.

An extensive work in four Books, upon the heavenly bodies, their regents, friends and enemies, their favourable and unfavourable aspects, and their influence upon human life, of presaging events from them, of lucky and unlucky seasons, casting nativities and calculating the proper periods for the performance of various essential rites and ceremonies, &c. By Asala Muni Guru desikan.

2.—Sarvārtha Okintāmani.

Paper.

A work on the same subjects as the preceding: ascribed to Sankara Achārya.

3.—Ulla Mariyan Jyotish.

a. Palm leaves.—b. do.

A work on lucky and unlucky hours, casting nativities and the influence of the Stars by Ulla Mariyan, an astrologer of great authority with particular castes in the South of India.

4.—Mārana Ghantaka.

Palm leaves.

Calculations of the duration of life, according to the aspects of the lunar asterisms. By the same author as the last.

5.—Yoga Phalam.

Palm leaves.

The influence of the yoga or astrological periods so termed. By the same as the preceding.

6.—Jatakeralangham.

Palm leaves.

The art of casting nativities and computing lucky and unlucky seasons, and of the signs which indicate the acquirement of kindred of various degrees of affinity. By Vallavan.

7.—Swaranul.

Palm leaves.

Foretelling events by the variation of the breathing or articulation of different sounds. By Sada Sivan.

8.—Másaphalam.

Palm leaves.

A work on the moon's course through the asterisms forming the lunar mansions, and the influence of particular positions and aspects on human affairs, by Sada Sivan.

9.—Grahasphuta.

Palm leaves.

A short work, by the same as the preceding, on the positions and astrological influence of the nine planets.

10.—Ashtakaverga Sangraha.

Palm leaves.

The application of the eight rules of Arithmetic to astrological computations, and the casting of nativities, by the same author as the three last.

11.—Bhugola Pramána.

Palm leaves. Paper.

A description of the universe, conformably to the Puranic accounts.

12.—Bhuvana Kosha.

Palm leaves.

A description of the universe, and account of the creation from the Puránas.

13.—Desanirnaya.

Palm leaves

A short statement of the 56 kingdoms into which the Bharata versha is divided, with a genealogical list of the Ohola kings.

14.—Nayatta Kalam Perumayan Vivada.

Paper.

An account of the fifty-two Sundays of the Christian year.

Medicine.

1.—Agastya Vaidyam.

Palm leaves.

A work in 1,500 verses on the preparation of medicines chiefly, attributed with many others on similar subjects, to the Rishi, Agastya.

2.—Agastya Purāna Sūtra.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

A work on mystical and alchemical medicine, or the cure of diseases by religious rites or visiting holy shrines, the means of prolonging life, and the art of discovering hidden treasures. MSS. b. comprises also the Pújavidhi, a tract on the worship of Siva and other deities, and the Dikshavidhi or a tract on the Diksha or ceremony of initiation in the Saiva and Sákta faith. By Agastya.

3.—Bhasmamore.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

A work of considerable extent, on alchemical or metallic medicines, containing rules for their calcination and reduction to powder, the preparation of various oxides, and extraction of Sulphuric acid. By Agastya.

4.—Bálachikitsá.

Palm leaves.

A work on the diseases of infants, difficult parturition, puerperal fever, &c. By Agastya.

5.—Agastya Vaidya munnur.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

A tract of 300 stanzas on the calcination, and reduction of various vegetable and mineral articles to powder, for use in medicine, also on the extraction of essential oils, &c., By Agastya.

6.—Agastya Vaidya Nuthiyambid.

Palm leaves.

A treatise in 150 stanzas on the purification of various poisonous substances and their employment in medicine. By Agastya.

7.—Agastya Vaidya napatettu.

Palm leaves.

A short tract in forty-eight verses on the cure of Gonorrhœa.

8.—Vaidya Sutra nuru.

Palm leaves.

A hundred verses on different diseases and modes of treatment. By Agastya.

9.—Muppu.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

Account of preparing medicines of the alkaline ashes of vegetables, &c. By Agastya.

10.—Terumalar Vaidyam.

Palm leaves.

A work on the medical treatment of various diseases, and directions for preparing different medicines. By Terumalar.

1.—Silpa Sastra.

a. Palm leaves—b. do—c. do.

A work on the construction of houses and temples, and the carving of images of the gods, with directions for the choice of materials and the site to be selected; astrological directions also for the determination of lucky seasons for engaging in the work: ascribed to Viswakarma, the architect of the Gods.

2.—Navya Sastra.

Palm leaves.

A work professedly on navigation, but in fact an astrological account of the destinies of Ships, and those who sail in them, according to certain marks and planetary aspects. The substance of it is thus described at starting; "Sitting opposite to the sun, a figure of a Ship is to be delineated, with three masts, of three yards each, and three decks, amongst these the twenty-eight asterisms are to be distributed, nine amongst the rigging, six in the interior of the hull, one at the bottom, and twelve on the outside. In calculating them the person is to begin with the star in the main top mast yard, and then count those on the right side, and according to the distance between it and the asterisms, in which the sun happens to be, will be foretold future events, the good or evil fortunes of the vessel and its commander. TELUGU.

Pauranic and Legendary Literature.

MAHABHARAT.

1.—Adi Parva.

a. Palm leaves—b. do—c. do—d. do., imperfect.

A translation of the first or introductory section of the Mahá-bhárat, giving an account of the origin and contents of the poem, and of the birth and early actions of the Pandava Princes: translated from the Sanscrit, by Nannah or Nannayapa Bhatt into Telugu verse. This writer, according to a passage in the introduction of the translation, quoted by Mr. Campbell in the preface of his Telugu Grammar, lived in the reign of Vishnuverddhana, of the Chalukya dynasty, King of Rájamahendri or Rajmundry. In three of the above copies, however, the verses which precede the extract given by Mr. Campbell, mention the name of the Prince to be Rajanarendra, the Son of Vimaláditya, and Vishnuverddhana is therefore only an epithet or a title. Mr. Campbell also observes, that if the assertion of Colonel Wilkes, on the authority of the Mackenzie Manuscripts, that the Chalukya dynasty preceded the Kadamba, which reigned at Banawassi in the second century, be admitted, the work of Nannia Bhatt may boast of great antiquity, but there is nothing in the Mackenzie collection that supports Colonel Wilkes's assertion. Chalukya Kings are found in various inscriptions dated as late as the 11th and 12th centuries, and several of them bear also the title of Vishnuverddhana: numerous inscriptions occur in the Rajamundry district of these Princes, and especially of one named Vira or Vijaya Rajendra, who is designated as Kulottunga Chola, and Saptama Vishnuverddhana, or the seventh Vishnuverddhana, whose grants bear date from Saka 1032, to 1044, or from A. D. 1110 to 1122. We have, however, information still more precise as to the individual who was the patron of Nanniah, and three different inscriptions in the Temple of Srikúrma Swámi in Jaganath, record donations made by Rajanarendra son of Vimaláditya raja of Rajamundry. These inscriptions are dated Saka 1195, or A. D. 1273. Nannia Bhatt, therefore, flourished at the close of the 13th century, shortly anterior to which period it appears the Telugu language was first cultivated: the oldest works extant, according to Mr. Campbell, dating about the end of the 12th century, and being separated by the interval that witnessed the fall of the ancient Government of Teligana, and the establishment of that of Vijayanagara, or about a century and a half, form the era of nearly all the Telugu works, now current in the country.

Nannaya Bhatt, was a Brahman of the Mudgala tribe, and sect of Apastamba, and well skilled in Sanscrit literature. He seems to have been the first writer of eminence, who bestowed pains upon his native tongue. He wrote a grammar of it in Sanscrit, in the usual style of Sútras, or concise and obscure aphorisms. His translation of the Mahábhárat extended according to some accounts, to little more than the two first books, but from the expressions of his continuator Tikkana Somayáji, it should seem he translated three books. The third book or Vana Parva is not in this collection. According to the legend, his work was suspended by the undesigned imprecation of Bhima Kaviswar, a son of Siva by the widow of a Brahman, who had received as a boon from his father that whatever he uttered should come to pass.

On enquiring what Nannaya was engaged in, he was told he was in the Aranya or Forests section, to which he replied, alluding to the extent of the whole task, the translator would never get out of the wood, and accordingly a part of the Vana or Forest Parva was the limit of Nannaya's labours.

2.—Sabhá Parva.

Palm leaves.

The second book of the Mahábhárat, containing an account of the palace constructed for Yudhishtira by Maya—The institution of the Rajasúya or sacrifice of kings—The subjugation of different parts of the world by the four junior Pándava Princes—The loss of all his possessions by Yudhishtira at play to Duryodhana, and consequent departure of the Princes into exile.

3.—Viráta Parva.

Palm leaves.

The fourth book of the Mahábhárat, giving an account of the events that occurred to the Pandavas whilst residing as household servants with Viráta Raja, and their rescuing his cattle when carried off by the Kuru Princes.

The Vana Parva or third section was translated, it is usually said, in part, by Nannia and completed by a Brahman named Irupragada. In the introductory lines of this work, the three first books are attributed to Nanniah. The third Parva is not in the collection.

The translator of this is Tikkana Somayáji, a Brahman of Nellore, of the tribe of Gautama, and sect of Apastamba, the son, or according to some accounts, the grandson, of Bháskara Mantri, who accompanied Mamma Kesava when appointed by Pratápa Rudra to the Government of Nellore. The same Prince, it is said, anxious to have the work of Nannaya completed, circulated two stanzas for the learned men of his country to translate, and gave the preference to Tikkana's version. He was accordingly directed to continue the work, and retired to Nellore, where the Patron of his family, Siddharaja, built a dwelling for him near the Temple of Ranganáth Swámi, by whose aid, and that of Vyása himself, he finished his task in three years: he then presented the work to Pratápa Rudra who made him handsome presents, and returned to Nellore where Siddharaja gave him a village. In this he resided till his death, the date of which he is said to have recorded himself in the following verse. Ambara ravi sasi sakābdambulu jana kāla yukti, aswija masam ambaramaniprabhānibham bagu Tikka yajyu Bramham pondenu ; “ Tikka as resplendant as the sun, was united with Brahma in the month of Aswin in the Saka year 1210 or A. D. 1288. This would make him cotemporary with Nannaya Bhatt. Pratāpa Rudra however was either the last king or last but one of Warankal which was taken in 1323 by the Mohammedans. He himself was taken and carried prisoner to Delhi early in the 14th century. His grants also in the Guntur district bear the date of Saka 1241 or A. D. 1319, and Tikkana Somayāji, if cotemporary with him, flourished about thirty or forty years after Nanna, a period when the continuation of the work, left unfinished by that translator, would be likely to be an undertaking of much interest. Tikkana Somayāji had two cousins employed in the service of Siddharaja, one of whom also named Tikkana or Tikkana Mantri was the Raja’s minister. The writer says in the introduction to this work he was induced to undertake it by the recommendation of his father, who appeared to him in a vision.

4.—Udyoga Parva.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

14.—Vishnu Purána.

Paper.

A translation of the Vishnu Purána by Vimalakonts Sarga—dedicated to Baswaradya Prince of Ravur in the Northern Circars between Guntur, and Kondavir.

15.—Panduranga Máhátmya.

a. Palm leaves—b. do. incomplete.

Legendary account of a shrine of Vishnu as Pánduranga, the pale complexioned deity, who sanctified by his presence in this form, the place where Pundarika a Muni, performed his devotions. The place is now known as Panderpur a town on the left bank of the Bima or Bhimarathi river, and celebrated in recent times as the scene of the murder of the Guikwa's Agent by the Ex-Peshwa. The deity now worshipped is a piece of stone supposed to have fallen from heaven, and thence denominated Vittal Swámi or Vittoba : it is considered as an emblem of Vishnu.

The proofs of the efficacy of this shrine are in the usual absurd strain. Thus, a snake is said to have obtained final salvation from inhaling the odour of the flowers which had fallen at the feet of the image of Vishnu, which it had approached in chase of a mouse. The narrative is told by Súta to the Rishis and is said to be taken from the Skanda Purána. The local or Sthala Máhátmya being translated by Tanala Ramalinga son of Krishna Ramaiya. It is dedicated to the minister of a petty Raja named Padarayama, and dated in the reign of Krishna Raya.

16.—Bhima Khanda.

Paper.

Legendary account of the shrine of Bhimeswara one of the twelve principal Lingas, described in the Puránas and one of the three supposed to have contributed to the etymology of Trilinga, Telinga or Telingana, the boundaries of which were marked by three Lingas, one at Srisaila on the Krishna, one at Káleswara on the Godaveri, and the third at Dracharam in the Rajamundry district, where the temple is still an object of veneration. The legend is said to be a translation from a similar section of the Skanda Purána. It is the work of Srináth son of Marya and grandson of Kamalanábha. It is dedicated to Bendapudi Mantri or minister of Anavámá Reddi, and Virábhadrá Reddi, two of the Reddi or Reddiwar dynasty of Princes who upon the subversion of Warankal by the Mohammedans, rose from the rank of landholders and farmers, to be the Rajas of Kondavir which station they held for about a century from the end of the 14th to the end of the 15th century. A temple of Siva as Amareswara on the banks of the Krishna was built by one of this race, Alla vámana Reddi in A. D. 1361, as appears from an inscription found there. According to most traditions the dynasty was subverted by Langula Gajapati, sovereign of Orissa, but this is impossible, as he reigned a century earlier or about A. D. 1236. A verse in the Amukta Málá calls Krishna Raya of Vijayanagar the conqueror of Virabhadra and captor of Kondavir which is no doubt correct.

17.—Varáha Purána.

Palm leaves.

A translation of the entire Varáha Purána. By Sinhaya son of Ghantanagaya, dedicated to Nrisinha Raya king of Vijayanagar.

18.—Venkateswara Máhátmya.

Palm leaves.

Legendary account of the celebrated shrine of Vishnu at the Tripeti hills, 80 miles N. W. from Madras. According to the legend this was originally part of, or mythologically the son of, Meru, named Venkatáchala or the Venkata mountain. Sesha the great serpent and Váyu the god of wind, disputing pre-eminence, tried their strength upon this mountain, when Váyu blew it to the Dekhin along with Sesha who had coiled himself round it to keep it firm. After the recovery of the Vedas by Vishnu as Varáha, he found Sesha engaged in devotion on the mountain, and at his request consented to reside there, bringing the mount of pleasure, or Kriráchala and different sacred reservoirs from his own heaven or Vaikuntha—hence different holy spots at this place are termed Sesháchala, Kriráchala, Varáha-tirtha, Swami Pushkarini, &c. Afterwards, at the request of the gods, who complained of the fatigue of seeking him in all parts of the universe, Mahavishnu consented to remain here with Lakshmi, or as Sri-nivás the abode of Sri or Sri Swámi the Lord of Sri. Amongst the first pilgrims, was Dasaratha who obtained sons, Ráma and his brothers by worshipping here, and Kártikeya who expiated the sin of killing Táraka. The first temples were built by Tondaman Chakravertti in the beginning of the Kali age, and the annual ceremonies were then instituted. Vishnu having sent his Sword and Discus to assist his brother-in-law Vasu, whose sister, an incarnation of Lakshmi, the daughter of Ankusa Raja, he had fallen in love with and married, he became confounded with Siva, until the time of Rámánuja when the temple at Tripeti was once more made a Vaishnava shrine by that reformer. In order to effect this he is said to have agreed with the Saivas to leave in the temple, a Conch and Discus, and a Trident and small Drum—the temple was closed for a night and on being re-opened it was found that the image had assumed the two former, or the insignia of Vishnu. The Vaishnavas appropriation of this temple is therefore modern, and the different shrines are of no great antiquity. The great temple was built by a Yádava prince, about A. D. 1048, and the later Chola princes, and the sovereigns of Vijayanagar are recorded as the chief benefactors of this place, constructing an infinite number of temples, pavilions, shrines, Choultries, and reservoirs on the hills in the vicinity, which are objects of great veneration, and a very numerous pilgrimage. Vishnu is worshipped here under five forms—Sri Venkatáchala Pati which is the principal; Malayapá or Utsavabari the image produced at the annual ceremonies. Srinivas a figure recumbent. Kolavu bari an image in the Naga pavilion who is supposed to preside over daily occurrences and Venkata Toravar an image that is brought forth once a year on the Kausiki dwadasi. Besides the daily ceremonials there are numerous occasional observances held during the year but the resort of pilgrims is most numerous, at the period of the Durga Puja or about October—a tax is levied on the pilgrims which yields above a lack of Rupees a year. Access to the principal Pagoda has never been permitted to Europeans. The legend is by Venkatárya, son of Krishna Raja, a Brahman of the Bharadwaja tribe.

19.—Jagannáth Máhátmya.

Paper.

Legendary account of the celebrated shrine of Jagannáth in Orissa and its foundation by Indradyumna, by desire of the deity Nilamádhava who appeared to him in a dream, and directed him to construct the three images of Jagannáth, Balabhadra, and Subhadrá out of the trunk of a Ber tree floated to the sea side—Viswakarma having been employed to make the images, undertook the task, on condition of not being interrupted. The king's impatience inducing him to break in upon the artist's labours, Viswakarma abandoned his work, and left the images unfinished. This gave the king great uneasiness, but he was consoled by a voice from heaven, to tell him the intention of the deity had been fulfilled, and that the images thus incomplete were to be consecrated, which was accordingly effected. The work also contains a description of the various holy places in the vicinity, the different ceremonials observed, and the merits of performing pilgrimage to the shrines. By Venkatárya.

20.—Kalahastiswara Māhātmya.

Palm leaves.

A collection of legendary tales of persons attached to Siva, and especially to his form as Kālahastiswara, and their being in consequence united with him ; as related by Iswara in the disguise of a Jangama to one of the Yādava princes. By Dhurjati son of Puranmukha.

21.—Padmasaras Māhātmya.

Palm leaves.

Account of the Lotus reservoir on the bank of the Suvernāmukhi river which rises in the Chandragiri mountains, and passes by those of Tripeti, where it flows N. E. to the sea at Armegon, Vishnu having lost Lakshmi found her in the centre of a Lotus in this place—the text is Sanscrit : the comment is Telugu.

22.—Totādri Māhātmya.

Palm leaves.

Legendary account of a shrine of Vishnu, at Totādri or Tannur in the ceded districts ; two Yojanas from the eastern sea, containing an account of the visits of Siva, Bhrigu, Vālmiki and others to the temple, and Vishnu's appearing to them as Trivikrama, Nrisinha, Rāma, &c., by Sringaráchari inhabitant of Ballapalla.

23.—Mūla Stambha.

Palm leaves.

An account of the origin and constitution of the universe, supposed to be related by Mārkaṇḍeya to Parāsara : the work is in part composed of Pauranic legends but is especially taken from the Viṣwakarma Purāna, and attributes the origin of the world and of the different gods, Brahma, Vishnu, Siva, and the rest to Viṣwakarmā : the author is not named.

24.—Terukalakendra Purvottaram.

Palm leaves.

Legendary account of the shrine of Terukalanāth or Siva as worshipped at Terukala kodi, a village about 30 miles N. E. of Madura. It is also called Siva Dharma puri, Siva having there instructed Agastya and Paulastya in his worship.

25.—Rajavetti Virabhadra dandakávali.

Palm leaves.

A mixed legendary and historical account of the temple of Virabhadra Swami, at Mandavya kshetra, from its foundation by Trisanku, a Prince of the solar race, to its re-establishment by the Company's Government.

26.—Srikákola Máhátmya.

Paper.

Legendary account of a temple of Vishnu at Srikakolam or Chikakole on the Krishna river, said to be translated from the local Purána, a section of the Brahmanda Purána. The place was originally consecrated by the devotions of Brahma, at whose request Vishnu consented to be always present: the town was afterwards built by Sumati, Emperor of India. The reservoir was dug by him and filled with the aid of the Discus of Vishnu, whence it was named the Chakra Tirtha. At a subsequent period, it is described as the scene of a dispute between the Brahmans and Jains, which was decided by the Raja's putting a snake privately into a covered pot, and desiring them to say what it contained. The Jains replied, a snake, the Brahmans, a Chatra, an umbrella, to which the snake put in by the Raja, was found, on opening the pot, to be transformed: the place was thence called Ahichhatra, from Chatra as before and Ahi a snake—Sudakshina, the sovereign of this place, invited the Brahmans of Kasi to reside there, who upon a famine occurring at that city, repaired to Ahichhatra: at a later period Vishnu as Srivallabha appeared in a dream to the adopted son of Ananga Bhima king of Orissa in the end of the 12th century, and told him to find his image under the root of a certain plant, and erect a temple to him at Kakola Kshetra, which he did accordingly, and to him therefore the origin of the present temple may be referred. The form of Vishnu now worshipped at Srikakole, is the Andhra Madhusúdana, a celebrated king of ancient Telingana or Andhra Ráya, the king being identified with the deity Madhusúdana.

Palm leaves.

An account of the principal divisions, mountains, rivers, &c., of Jambu Dwipa, from the Purānas.

31.—Alware Katha.

Paper.

An account of the twelve Alwárs, the personified weapons, ornaments and companions of Vishnu, most of whom were born as teachers of the Vaishnava religion according to the system of Rámānuja long anterior to that reformer; but comprehending him and one of his successors—the dates are in general evidently fabulous, but some of the individuals may have had a real existence.

1. Poya Alwár an incarnation of Vishnu's shell, was born from a lotus in the reservoir of a temple at Kánchi towards the close of the Dwápar age. He lived three thousand years, and propitiated Vishnu by his devotion, and a cento of verses in his praise, whence he was honoured by a visit from him, and was united with him at Terukavalur.

2. Pudhata Alwár was the personified mace, born at the same period as the preceding, in Tondamandala, he composed a hundred verses in Tamil derived from the Vedas.

3. Peyá Alwár was also born an incarnation of Nandaka at the same period, at Mailapur on the sea shore, and was the author likewise of á hundred Tamil verses in honour of Vishnu.

4. Terumai Peyá Alwár was the personified Discus, who was incarnate in the Kali year 3600 at Tiramushi in Tondamandal, and composed verses in praise of Vishnu and the shrines at which that deity was worshipped.

5. Nám Alwár born at Terukarur on the Támra parni river, was an incarnation of Viswaksena in the first year of the era of Yudhishtir. He was the author of several hymns in honour of Vishnu.

6. Kulusekhara Alwár an impersonation of the Kaustubh gem was born in Kerala or Malabar in the Kali age—he wrote both Sanscrit and Tamil poems in honour of Vishnu.

7. Periya Alwár was an incarnation of Garura, born in the Pandya country some time in the Kali age—he wrote a short tract on the actions of Krishna.

8. Terupana Alwár was an incarnation of the Srivatsa jewel—and was born near Sriranga in the year of Sáliváhana 122, he wrote verses in praise of Tirumalé.

9. Terumangar Alwár was the personified Sarnga or bow of Vishnu, born near the mouth of the Caveri in the year of Sáliváhana 217. He was a great thief, but not the less a saint, as he appropriated the booty to the service of the deity, and especially to the construction of the seven walls of the temple at Srirangam.

10. Tondama Alwár was the incarnation of Vishnu's garland and was born in the Sáliváhana year 108, near the Caveri: he led a life of celibacy devoting himself especially to cultivating flowers and preparing garlands for the deity Sriranga Nayak.

11. Ambaramánar Alwár, who was an incarnation of Vishnu's slippers, was born at Sri perumatur in the year of Sáliváhana 931, or A. D. 1009, and attached himself especially to the service of Varada raja at Kónchi—he received the stamp of his faith from the hands of Periya Nambi a worshipper of Vishnu at Srirangam. Periya Nambi accompanied the Alwár to Madhura, instructed him in the essential dogmas of the Vaishnava faith, conferred upon him the title of Rámánuja, and directed him to disseminate the lessons he had learned. His other names are Lilavibhuto, Lakshmana muni, Wodiyar, Ambaramanár, Sethagopa, Subháshyakára, Yatíndra, Kulatilaka and Yatisarvabhauma.

The twelfth and last Alwár was Kurath Alwár, the cousin of the preceding. Images of these Saints are generally kept in the Vaishnava temples in the Dekhin.

32.—Yamunáchari Ocheritra.

Paper.

Legendary account of a reputed teacher of the Vaishnava religion, and his confutation of Kolahala, the poet and Pundit of the Chola Raja in consequence of which the Saiva faith gave way to that of Vishnu.

33.—Naráyana Jiyara Katha.

Palm leaves.

Account of the miracles wrought by Naráyanjiyara a devout worshipper of Sriranga, his overcoming the Bauddhas and Mlechchas and having an interview with the deity Ranganáth; with some account of Venkata Rághava Achárya, a Vaishnava teacher the son of Tirumaláchári, the son of Govinda Dhira, the son of Naráyana Jiyara.

34.—Básaveswara Ocheritra.

Paper ; incomplete.

Legendary account of Básaveswara or Básava or Báswapá, an incarnation of the bull of Siva, Nandi, who descended to earth to restore the religion of Siva, and who as a real character appears to have been the founder or promoter of the Lingavant religion in the Dekhin in the eleventh century, and minister of Bijala or Vijala Raya king of Kalyán. The work contains chiefly marvellous stories of Básava and some of his disciples, and their contests with the Jains, of whom the Raja was the protector, in consequence of which the Jangamas compassed his death. The principal works on the history of Básava occur in the Hála Karnáta language.

35.—Prabhulinga lila.

Paper.

Legendary account of a Jangama Saint, Allama Prabhu, who is reputed to have been the preceptor of Básaveswara and his nephew Ohenna Basava, the founders or renovators of the Vira-saiva religion.

a. Paper, imperfect—b. do. do.

A large collection of marvellous stories relating to different Arádhyas or Saints and Teachers of the Lingavānt sect, interspersed with a description of the efficacy of the Symbols of Siva, and a variety of Pauranic and other legends, illustrative of the Supremacy of the deity as a Linga. The collection when entire is said to comprise 2000 tales, in five sections, but both these copies are mere fragments. The stories are taken it is asserted from the Básava Purāna, and translated by Somanāth Arádhyā of Palkuri, son of Vira Pocheswara, by the order of his Guru Mallikārjuna Panditárádhyā, the work is dedicated to Surana Amátya. The following is one of the stories :—

Surasānī the widow of a man of the hunter tribe, who was a devout worshipper of Siva, made after her husband's decease the Jangam priests the chief objects of her devotion, entertaining them in her house, to the great scandal of her neighbours. The Brahmans of the Agraharam complained to the Raja, that the widow was accustomed to eat intoxicating drugs, smear her body with ashes, wash the feet of the Jangamas, and treat them, the Brahmans, with contumely and abuse. The Raja being much incensed proceeded with the Brahmans to the house of Surasānī, but sought for her and her usual guests in vain, not a soul was to be found. After his departure, a Chandāla fowler of black complexion, robust make, and dwarfish stature, having a flat nose and curly hair, smeared with holy ashes, carrying a rosary of Rudráksha beads, and wearing a Linga round his neck, passed by the residences of the Brahmans, making a great noise, and pretending to sell fruit, abusing the Brahmans, and reverencing the Jangamas. On arriving at the door of Surasānī she welcomed him to her abode, washed his feet, gave him food and an apartment to repose in. As the neighbours now thought they had caught her in the fact, having watched the man into the house, they beset the dwelling, and brought stakes and ropes to secure him.—Surasānī, hearing the clamour said, "What would you : the disciples of Siva come to the houses of his followers ; in the dwelling of the worshipper of Maheswara, Maheswara abides : where the Lingam is revered, there is the Lingam—why do you reproach the worshippers of the destroyer of the sacrifice : why do you insult and not follow the example. I tell you, he that is in my house, you cannot discover : the Lord of the world is in my house, you cannot see him : the Supreme God is in my apartments—how should sinners such as you behold Him. How can you gaze upon the three-eyed god.” So saying, she opened the door. The Brahmans rushed in, and sought in every place for the Jangama but could not find him, and they were much astonished and ashamed, being satisfied that the supposed Chandála must have been Siva himself.

Krishna Ráya Cheritra.

a. Palm leaves. b. Paper.

A poetical account of the reign of Krishna Ráya, the second, or according to some accounts, the illegitimate son of Narasinha or Narasa Deva Ráya, and 17th prince of the Narapatí kings of Vijayanagar, which state, it is generally asserted, was founded in the commencement of the 14th century by Harihara and Bukka Ráya, and speedily attained a degree of solidity and power which enabled it to extend its sway over the provinces south of the Tombuddra, as far as to Cape Comorin, and to make head for about two centuries against the Mohammedan principalities of the Dekhin until they combined to effect its downfall. This took place in 1564 at the battle of Tellicotta when Ráma Raja was defeated and slain in an engagement with the united armies of Vijayapur, Ahmedabad, Golconda and Beder. The princes of Vijayanagar thence ceased to exercise a paramount authority over the states of the Dikhin, although individuals of the family continued to hold portions of the empire at Pennakonda, Chandragiri and Vellur to a recent period.

The power and reputation of the princes of Vijayanagar, and the comparatively modern periods at which they flourished, have rendered their history familiar in the Dekhin, and numerous accounts of them are contained in the papers of this collection. From these, several notices were derived by Col. Wilkes, and published in the introductory chapters of his History of Mysore, and Col. Mackenzie himself published an account of the princes of Vijayanagar in the Asiatic Annual Register for 1804. In general, however, the original records are little more than Chronological lists, one of which has been published in the introduction to Mr. Campbell's Telugu Grammar, avowedly from this source. These lists vary, not very widely perhaps for Indian history, but still more considerably, both as to persons and dates than might have been expected, from the facilities afforded to accuracy in both respects. The usual enumeration of princes from Bukka to the third Sriranga is 27 princes, but a list at Permatur gives 31. The date most commonly assigned for the foundation of Vijayanagar is A. D. 1336 and that of the prince last named A. D. 1646 but the Permatur list makes the first date A. D. 1215 and places Sriranga ten years later—we have also the dates 1313, and 1314, assigned for the commencement of the dynasty,—and these are the most usual, although there is reason to think that even 1336 is rather too early.

Considerable variety also prevails in the local accounts with respect to the origin of this dynasty. As noticed by Col. Wilkes, one account describes the founders Bukka and Harihara as Officers of the Raja of Warankal, who founded an independent principality after the subversion of that state by the arms of Ala ad din—another tradition makes them Hindu Officers in the service of the Mohammedan prince, who gave them the site of Anagundi or Vijayanagar in Jagir. The more usual tradition ascribes the construction of the city to Vidyaranya or Madhava, the famous commentator on the Vedas, and a man of great learning, who, it is said was enabled to build the city by the treasure with which Bhuvaneswari, a form of Durga whom he had propitiated by his devotions, enriched him. He reigned, it is asserted, twenty-five years and then gave the city to Bukka, the son of a Cowherd, who had fed him with milk when he led the life of an ascetic. It is very unnecessary, however, to pay regard to any of these traditions for Madhava leaves no doubt of his own character, and that of Bukka, in various passages of his works. He calls himself, and is termed by his brother, also a writer of eminence, the minister of Sangama, the son of Kampa a powerful prince whose rule extended to the Southern, Eastern and Western Seas. Bukka and Harihara are named by Mádhava as the sons of Sangama, and an inscription published in the Asiatic Researches, (vol. ix.) verifies the relation. It is clear therefore that Bukka and Harihara were descended from a line of Princes, insignificant very probably as to their territorial possessions, notwithstanding Mádhava's hyperbolical description of their power, and to a certain extent perhaps dependant on the paramount Rajas of Warankal or Telingana, the annihilation of whose supremacy elevated these petty chiefs into the founders of an imperial dynasty. The Mohammedan historians of the South of India, speak of the Princes of Bijnagar or Vijayanagar as possessed of power long anterior to the Mohammedan invasions of Southern India, and Ferishta asserts that the Government of the country had been exercised by the ancestors of Krishna Raj of Bijnagar for seven centuries. For all historical purposes, however, the origin of this state as a substantial principality, may be admitted to have occurred at the period specified, although by no means in the manner described in the tradition.

The following is the Chronological Statement, most generally received

From an examination of the inscriptions in the Mackenzie Collection several exceptions are suggested to this chronological arrangement—Grants of but fifteen princes are found, and one of those is not in the above list—of these, two are cotemporary with others, reducing the list to thirteen, amongst whom 256 years are divided, leaving only about 46 unaccounted for, which we cannot suppose to be divisible among 14 kings. It is very probable, therefore, that several of the names in the above list are gratuitous interpositions, and it is also clear, as in the case of Virúpáksha, that some of them are misplaced. The names and dates of the inscriptions are the following :—

1 Bukka Raya	A. D.	1370 to 1375
2 Harihara	„	1385 to 1429
3 Deva Raya	„	1426 to 1458
4 Mállikárjuna	„	1451 to 1465
5 Virúpáksha	„	1473 to 1479
6 Narasinha	„	1487 to 1508
7 Krishna	„	1508 to 1530
8 Achyuta	„	1530 to 1542
9 Sadasiva	„	1542 to 1570
10 Trimala	„	1568 to 1571
11 Sriranga	„	1574 to 1584
12 Venkatapátí	„	1587 to 1608
13 Viraráma	„	1622 to 1626

We have between the first and second princes a blank of ten years; between the fourth and fifth, eight years; between the fifth and sixth, eight years; between the tenth and eleventh, three years, and the same between the eleventh and twelfth, and between the two last an interval of fourteen, which need not be wondered at, as the reduced state of the family must have made their grants less regular and frequent. It is also to be observed that in some instances we have contemporaneous dates, or the grants of one prince beginning before those of his predecessor terminate. This may be owing to inaccuracy in the record, or to the practice of Hindu princes associating the heir presumptive in the government, so that two princes reign at the same time. Another source of confusion arises from the assumption of regal powers by the Minister, whilst leaving to the rightful sovereign the title of Raja, and some independent authority in unimportant matters, in which case, grants by the real and by the titular monarch will run parallel; thus amongst the inscriptions a number occur in the name of Imadi Praurha Deva Ráya dating from 1450 to 1466—being nearly the same extent as the grants of Mallikárjuna from 1451 to 1465 and these names therefore apply either to one person, to two contemporary princes, or to a reigning Minister and pageant prince. The latter we know to be the case in another instance, or Ráma Raya whose grants are very numerous, and date from 1547 to 1562. Those of Sadasiva are also very numerous, and extend from 1542 to 1570, but this prince we learn from both Hindu and Mohammedan authorities was a cypher and Ráma Raja, the Minister, exercised the functions of king.

According to some of the traditions, the first princes of the family were from Telingana, but others bring them from Tuluva, which seems most probable, as they were possessed at an early period of their intercourse with the Mohammedans, of sea ports on the Western Coast. In the latter part of the 15th century, the line was changed, and Narasa, Narasinha or Vira Narasinha, whom the Hindu records regard as of Telinga extraction, is described by Ferishta as a powerful chief of Telingana who had possessed himself of the greater part of the territory of Vijaya- nagar. His illegitimate son, Krishna Ráya appears to have been the most distinguished of the whole series of Vijayanagar princes, and although his name is not mentioned by Ferishta, it is admitted that in 1520 or in his reign, the Mussulmans sustained a severe defeat from the armies of Vijayanagar, and that subsequently a good understanding prevailed between that Court and the Bijapur monarchy for a considerable period. According to the authority which has given rise to these observations, Krishna Ráya was the son of Narasa or Narasinha by Nigamba a friend or attendant of the queen, and was actually an incarnation of Krishna the deity. His step-mother Tippamba jealous of his superiority as a boy over her son Viranarasinha, prevailed on her husband to order Krishna Deva to be put to death. The officer to whom this duty was entrusted being reluctant to fulfil it, applied to the Prime Minister, who undertook to secrete the prince till he could be produced with safety, and the king was told that his commands had been obeyed. In his last illness, the king was much afflicted for the death of his son on which the Minister produced the prince, and Krishna Deva was declared his heir and successor. The Minister delayed proclaiming him till he had secured the concurrence of the Palligars, which was obtained it is said through supernatural aid, an absurd tale being introduced for this purpose. Viranarasinha, it is added, died of vexation on his brother's being acknowledged Raja. The contests of Krishna Ráya with the Mohammedan prince of Bijapur have been already adverted to, and he is here said to have waged successful war against the Mohammedan sovereign of Golconda.

According to this work, Krishna Ráya reduced Maisur, and the country along the Caveri to his authority—defeated the Mohammedan Armies of Bijapur and Golconda—captured the Forts of Udayagiri, Kondavir, and Kondapilli, and invaded Orissa, the Gajapati Prince of which country was compelled to do him homage. He married the daughter of the Raja of Orissa, and return to Vijayanagar, with which the narrative concludes. The work is by Dhurjati son of Arugandi Kasipati and was composed by order of the ruler of Arvidi in the Ceded Districts.

Krishna Ráya was a great patron of literature both Sanscrit and Telugu, and the principal works in the latter date from his reign. Of the learned men of his court, eight are distinguished as the eight Dig-gajas or Elephants who uphold the world of letters. The names of the whole have not been ascertained, but the following five were of the number, Apyáya Dikshit, Allasáni Peddana, Venkata páta, Bhattu murtti, Pingala Suranárya. The first is a Sanscrit writer, the last are eminent as Telugu authors.

2.—Ráma Raja Cheritra.

a. Palm leaves.—b. Paper.

An account of the genealogy of Ráma Raja the son-in-law of Krishna Ráya, and Minister of Sadásiva, the last prince of Vijayanagar, with a description of the hostilities carried on by him and his sons Siranga Ráya, and Venkatapati Ráya against the Mohammedan princes of the Dekhin. Composed by Vengaya son of Surappa by command of Ráma Raja. This work of course does not contain the particulars of Ráma Raja's fatal conflict with the Mohammedan princes, originating immediately in the insult offered to the envoy of Ibrahim Adil Shah. This is not specified by Ferishta, but the Hindu records state that on going to an audience of the Raja, the envoy passed on his way some swine intended to be given to menials of the court. As he expressed his abhorrence of these unclean animals to the Raja, the latter treated his aversion with ridicule, and asked him how he could hold them as unclean, when he fed upon fowls, who picked up grains from the ordure of swine, and took an opportunity of shewing him the fact. The insult roused Ibrahim Adil Shah to arms, and he was readily joined by the other Mohammedan princes who were eager to revenge indignities offered to Mosques and the faithful, by the Hindus, when acting as allies with one or other of them in their wars amongst themselves. Ráma Raja met them with great spirit, and a sanguinary action took place at Talikota on the banks of the Krishna. The contest was long doubtful, but the Raja was accidentally made prisoner, and instantly beheaded. His army then dispersed and immense slaughter took place in the pursuit. The confederates advanced to Vijayanagar, which was taken, and plundered, and the country laid utterly waste. The power of the state fell never to rise again. Different members of the family settled in Pennakonda, Ohandragiri, Vellore and some returned to Anagondi on the N. E. quarter of Vijayanagar: the latter branch after being expelled by Tippu became dependant on the English Government as petty Landholders. On the downfall of Vijayanagar the Governors to Gingee, Trichanapalli, Mysore and other places to the south became at the same time independent, and continued so with various changes of fortune till they were comprised within the pale of British dominion or control.

This work is also entitled the Narapati vijayam or Ráma Vijayam and is nothing more than a detailed and encomiastic genealogy. The descent of the Raja is traced to Brahmá through the lunar race to Nanda one of the seven kings of the Andhra dominions—the ninth from him it is said was Chaulukya Bhúpála in whose race many kings governed the earth, to Vijala king of Kalyan. The genealogy is then uninterrupted although not always very distinct: the direct line appears to be as follows:—

Vijala

Vira kumára

Táta Pinna

Somadeva—who took Rachúr

Rághava

Pinneswara

Bukka

Ráma Rája—who took Kondanole and made it his capital:
he had two sons of whom the younger,

Sriranga—succeeded: he had 5 sons and was succeeded by the fourth,

Terumala—he had four sons, and was succeeded by the third,

Ráma

Terumala

Sriranga—appointed to a high office by Venkatapati Rája, and married to the daughter of Narasinha Deva, by whom he had Rámadeva Ráya,—who by the aid of his brother Venkata-pati, and two chiefs of the same family, Venkatádri and Terumala, subdued Guti, Pennakonda, and other places, and defeated the king of Golconda : he had five sons, of whom the line continued in,

Sriranga,

Chenna Venkatapati

Venkatapati

Timma or Terumala in the service of Krishna Ráya.

Venkatapati

Ráma Ráya—also called Kodanda Ráma who married the daughter of Krishna Ráya—and had by different wives, Peddavenkata, Venkatapati, and Ráma or Kodanda Ráma.

3.—Krishna Ráya Agraháram Charuvu Purvottara.

Account of a tank in a religious endowment in the Chandragiri circar and district of Nellore, attributed to Krishna Ráya. The grant was continued by Ráya Mahasinh Silada.

4.—Pratapa Cheritra.

Paper.

An account of Pratápa Rudra the last of the Kakateya kings of Telingana of any power. According to this account the family descended from Arjuna : thus,

Parikshit

Janamejaya

Satánika

Kshemaka

Somendra

Somanripa

Uttunga Bhujá who first removed to the Dekhin, and was succeeded by Nanda, who founded Nandagiri.

His grandson Somadeva was defeated and killed by the Ballá-hadu of Cuttack, the Bálhara probably of the Arab Geographers.—His wife being pregnant, fled and found refuge in the house of a Brahman named Mádhavasermá at Anumakonda or Hanumadgiri. The boy was named Mádhava vermá, who, when he grew up, raised a formidable army, chiefly through the favour of Padmákshi a form of Durgá, and with it reduced Anumakonda and the country between the Godáveri and Krishna to subjection. He is considered, and perhaps with reason, as the founder of the family—his reign, and those of his descendants are thus enumerated.

Mádhava vermá reigned	160 years.
Padmasena	74
Vennamá	73
Yeruka	73
Kurunki	76
Pendikonda	25
Bhuvanika malla	78
Tribhuvanika malla	76
Kákatipralaya	75
Rúdra mádhava	73
Mahádeva	25
Ganapatideva	75
Rudrádevi	29
Annamadeva	12
Pratápa Rúdra	76

making altogether 1000 years.

Of these princes Kakatipralaya is said to have removed the capital from Anumakonda to Warankal in Sal. 990, or A. D. 1068. Inscriptions however in the time of Ganapatideva occur dated A. D. 1231, whilst Warankal was taken and plundered in 1323, in the time of a son of Pratápa Rudra who held a short sovereignty over the remains of the city, after its first capture by the Mohammedans. If we reckon from the last, as the best authenticated period, we may place the commencement of the dynasty with Mádhava vermá something less than three centuries earlier, or in the end of the 11th or beginning of the 12th century of the Christian era. Although Warankal ceased to be the capital of a state of any note after its spoliation by the Mohammedans, it continued to be the residence of princes of some power, between whom and the Mohammedan princes, and the Rajas of Vijayanagar, frequent intercourse was maintained both of peace and war. Its final downfall appears to have been owing to the extension of the power of the Gajapati princes of Orissa, as much as to the ascendancy of the Mohammedan arms. By Virana son of Mallapa Raja, a Brahman of the Atreya family who resided at Charuvapalli in the Pulikonda district—the work comprises the legendary history of Anumakonda or Hanumadgiri.

5.—Jangama Kálajnyána.

a. Paper.—b. Palm leaves.

An account of the princes of various countries in the south of India, subsequently to the reign of Vijala Ráya at Kalyána, especially of the Velála kings, and of the Vijayanagar dynasty to the defeat and death of Ráma Ráya, given in a prophetic strain by Sarvajna, a Jangama priest and his son Virúpana. The prophecy extends to a future period when Vijayábhinandana or Viravasanta and Chenna Bāsavanna are to meet at Sri Saila—the latter is to become the Minister of the former, who is to reign over the whole earth, and the joint efforts of the two will render the Jangama the universal faith. Sarvajna is said to have been the son of a Brahman by a woman of the Potter tribe, and to have taught the Jangama doctrines from the age of ten until he was re-united with Siva.

6.—Kátama Rája Cheritra.

a. Palm leaves.—b. Paper.

A long account, in which fact and fiction are curiously blended, of a petty war between two chiefs who rose to independence after the downfall of the state of Warankal, in the 14th century, Manava Siddha or Siddhi Raja the prince of Nellore was one of the parties, and the other was Kátama Raja, the ruler of Yeragada, assisted by Padma Nayak of Palnad. The dispute originated in the herds of Katama trespassing on the pastures of Siddha Raja; a force under Tikkana Mantri, the cousin of Tikkana Sámayoji the poet, was sent to drive them out, but was repelled by the herdsmen supported by troops. Tikkana being received with great coldness by his parents and his wife on his return home, vowed to redeem his credit or perish—he was accordingly killed in the next encounter. The people of Kátama being hard pressed in a subsequent engagement, invoked the aid of the cows, who accordingly attacked and put the enemy to the route. Siddhi raja was then obliged to come in person to the field of battle, where in a personal conflict with Kátama he was killed, and Kátama died of his wounds. This seems to have terminated a contest of a very sanguinary description, and each party withdrew to their own boundaries. The death of Siddhi-raja led to the subversion of the short-lived principality of Nellore, and the territory was soon afterwards included in the possessions of the Redlawar family of Condavir.

7.—Pálnád Vira Cheritra.

Paper.

Account of a seven years war, from 1080 to 1087, carried on by Brahma Naidu and twelve other landholders and graziers, against two towns, Gujerla and Macherla, in the Pálnád country, and which originated in a dispute at a cock-fight.

8.—Nava Chola Cheritra.

Paper.

An account of nine of the most distinguished of the Chola princes, or Kerikala, Vikrama, Uttunga, Adivara, Varadherma, Satyendra, Manujendra, Víra and Uttama, confined however to fabulous narratives of the faith of these princes in the Vira Saiva or Jangama religion as related by Panditárádhyá, a Jangam professor, to Bhairavendra, Raja of Sosalipur in Mysur, a great patron of the sect. The work is interspersed with marvellous tales of the actions of different priests or saints of the sect, and is translated from the Karnáta. By Silamanupa Setti a descendant of Sankara Dás one of the disciples of Chen Baseswer—one of the founders of the Jangama form of Saiva worship in the Eleventh century.

9.—Nandala Krishnama Vamsávali.

Genealogical account of Nandala Krishnama of Nandal—the son of Nrisinharaja, the son of Nárayan, the son of Nrisinha, who first settled at Nandal—the son of Srinjaraya, the son of Arviti Bukka Raya, a prince of the lunar race. This genealogy is extracted from the introduction to the Kalá, purnodaya dedicated by the author Pingala Surana to Krishnama Raya.

10.—Valugutivaru Vansávali.

a. Paper.—b. do.

Genealogical account of the Valuguti family of Rajas or Zemindars in possession of Venkatagiri. The founder of the family is said to have been Ohari Reddi who discovered a hidden treasure, of which he became duly possessed by offering, with his own consent, his servant to Bhairava or Vetála, whence he was termed Pátálmári Vetála Rao. His son Prasádita Naidu was chiefly instrumental in raising Pratápa Rudra to the throne of Warangal. After the overthrow of that prince, the members of this family extended their authority over a number of districts along the Krishna River. Two of them, brothers, Anupota Naidu and Madan Naidu are said to have defeated and taken a hundred and one Rajas, fifty-one of whom they ground in oil mills, and fifty they offered in sacrifice to Káli and other Saiva deities. Another great conqueror was Lingam Naidu who slew Anuváma Redai, and had his figure and those of other Rajas sculptured on his spitting pot. A second Anupota subdued Kodavir and Rajamahendri and established himself there and at Chinapatam. The family seem to have been then subjected to the Vijayanagar dynasty, and several members of it, as Padakondapa Naidu and his brother Gene Naidu—with the two sons of the latter Nayanappa, and Timma distinguished themselves against the Mohammedans in the reigns of Krishna Deva, Achyuta Raya, and Rama Raja. Yacham Naidu who reigned about 1600 is also said to have been a great conqueror, defeating Makaraja and Devalpupa Naidu—capturing Chenji or Gingi and Palemkota and extending his arms to the south as far as Madura. His grandson however appears as the feudatory of the Kuttab Shahi king of Golconda, holding venkatagiri by his permission as Nankar or alimentary estate. Benjar Yachem his Great-grandson was put to death by Zulfikar Khan the General of Aurangzeb about A. D. 1696 but the zemindari was granted after an interval to his son. The direct line terminated with the 37th descent in 1776 but was continued by adoption. The following appears to be the series of succession, omitting the collateral branches. The statement is not always very distinct.

11.—Kasikhanda molo vuna Reddivar Vansávali.

Paper.

The introductory chapter of a Telugu version of the Kasi Khand, giving an account of the family of the author's patron Virabhadra son of Allada Bhupa son of Dadaya Reddi, son of Perumalla Reddi. By Srináth. The same genealogy is given in the Bhimakhanda, by the same author, deduced ultimately from Proleya Vámana the founder of the Reddiwar family of Kondavir.

12.—Mátala Teruvengala Ráya Cheritra.

a. Paper—b. do.

Genealogical account of Teruvengala, a prince of the Matalavar family and ruler of Siddhávát near Karapa and whose descent is brought down from Vaiwaswata Menu through Ráma, and an unnamed Chola Bhupa, to Matali Timma Bhupa the founder of the family, from whom the hero of the work is the tenth in direct succession; by Nadimanti Venkatapati.

13.—Tanjáwar Raja Cheritra.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

An account of some of the first Náyaks of Madura. Soon after the establishment of the Vijayanagar Dynasty, their authority was extended over nearly the whole of the countries to the south, leaving them in general under the management of their princes as feudatories paying tribute. In the reign of Krishna Ráya two of these, the princes of Chola and Pandya, or Tanjore and Madura being at war, Nágama Náyak, a Telugu officer of the Ráya was sent to the support of the Pandyan prince. After subduing the Chola Raja, Nágama imprisoned his Ally, and assumed the sovereignty, in consequence of which a Force was sent against him under his son Viswanáth Náyak who defeated his father, and sent him prisoner to Vijayanagar. The father was forgiven in consideration of the loyalty of the son, and the latter, on the death of the Madura prince which happened shortly afterwards, was made Governor of Madura. He took advantage of the hostilities between the Rajas of Vijayanagar, and their Mohamedan neighbours, to convert his government into an independency and was succeeded in it by his descendants. The dynasty extended to 14 princes, commencing about 1530, and continuing till the middle of the last century, when Chandasaheb got possession of Trichinapali. The following appears to be the most accurate enumeration of these princes, some of whom have left remarkable traces of their reigns at Madura and Trichinapali, and others were well known to the Christian Missionaries.

| 14 Vijaya Kumára ; under the regency of his adoptive mother Minákshi , in whose time the Mohammedan prince seized the fort—the Princes poisoned herself—the adoptive son and his father survived these disturbances, and became dependants on the Paligar of Rámnád , or the Nawabs of the Carnatic, until the whole came under British authority. | |

14.—Trichinapali Rája Oheritra.

Palm leaves.

An account of the actions of Raghunáth, a Paligar of the Tinneveli country who conquered different districts from the Setupati or Márawa prince, and from the Mohammedan governor of Trichinapali.

According to this tract he was descended from the deity Indra, who had by a mortal nymph several sons—Terumala Raya of the Ahita tribe descended from one of these became a prince of great power, and is regarded as the first of the dynasty the line of which is the following:—

11 Tonaka Nlipatí
12 Tirumala Bhúpa

13 Padmápita
14 Raghunáth

The last was an officer in the service of Vijaya Rághava Raja of Tanjore, and subdued various districts to the South, which he appears to have erected into an independent principality. His son was Tirumala Raya, his son was Sri Vijaya Raghunath who it is said conquered Chanda Khan, and took up his residence in the Tondaman country.

15.—Sinhala dwipa Rája Kathá.

Palm leaves.

Account of a war between Krishnapa Náyak of Madura, and Tumbi Náyak, here called king of Ceylon, but who appears to have been only a petty Polygar of Tinnevelli or Rámnád who was defeated and deposed by the second of the Madura Náyaks, Periya Krishnapá.

16.—Kakaralapudi Gopála Páyaka Rao Vamsávali.

Paper.

Genealogical account of Gopála Páyaka Rao, Zemindar of Anakapilli near Vizagapatam. It is properly an introduction to the tale of the marriage of Rukmávatí: dedicated to Rámabhadra the son of Gopála Rao. By Somanath.

17.—Kaliyuga Rája Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

A short account of some of the most distinguished princes of the Kali age, as Parikshit, Satánika, &c.

18.—Básaveswara Kálagnyán.

Palm leaves.

An account of the state of the Dekhin in the reign of Akber, and of a person named Sesháppa being inspired by Malikarjuna to give fresh activity to the Virasaiva or Jangama sect—By Viráya, a Jangama priest.

19.—Sankara Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

An account of the Saiva reformer Sankarácharya, who was an incarnation of Siva, and instructed in theology by Govinda

Guru at Chidambaram—his wanderings over India, and confutation of various sects are narrated in the usual strain, and he is stated to have caused the Jains to be put to death at Yudhapuri. He established the Math at Sringipur or Sringeri and the temple of Kámákshi and Sri chakra at Kánci and was finally liberated from existence at Kánci. By Venkataya, known by the title of Andhra Kálidás or the Kálidás of Telingana, an inhabitant of Vellore.

20.—Surapura Rája Vamsávali.

Paper.

Genealogical account of the Zemindars of Surapura or Zorapur in the Hydrabad country; an estate cleared for cultivation by Timma Reddi under the authority of Aurengzeb's officers in the seventeenth century.

21.—Rangarao Cheritra.

Paper.

Account of the attack of the Fort of Ranga Rao Zemindar of Bobili, by Mon. Bussy and the troops of Vijaya Ráma Raja, the death of Ranga Rao, and his family and adherents—the appointment of Vijaya Ráma, and his assassination by the maternal Uncle of Ranga Rao. This is the story told by Orme, vol. 2, part 1, p. 254.

22.—Makaráj Bomaráj Vamsávali.

a. Paper—b. do.

Genealogy and historical account of the Makarajwar princes who ruled at Karvetinagara, or the Zemindars of Narayanvaram or Naranvar not far to the south of the Tripeti hills. The family is deduced from a Chola king termed Dhamanjaya Chola through Tondaman Chakravartti, in whose race Naráyan Raj was born, who founded the city of Naráyan varam or Kalyána Patan from its being on the Kalyán, or what is now termed the Naranvaram river. The line then proceeds through 87 descents to Maka Raj, whose nephew it is asserted was an Ally or feudatory of Krishna Ráya of Vijaynagar. The descent is continued through fifteen other names, to Káveri Ray, Raja of Kárveti nagaram in the Zilla of Chitore, with whom the work concludes, and by whose desire it was completed by different poets of his court. It is more a panegyrical than historical account of the family, and is copiously intermingled with praises of the deity Venkatáchala Swámi.

23.—Kanyaká Cheritra.

Paper.

Traditionary account of the voluntary exile or death of the Vaisyas of Penakonda in consequence of Vishnuverddhana Raja's demanding the daughter of Kusuma setti in marriage, and on the merchant's refusal, attempting to carry her off by force. In consequence, one hundred families it is said migrated to the west, eighty to the east, two hundred to Goa, and one hundred and thirty to the north, whilst Kusumetti, his daughter, and one hundred and two families burnt themselves. Vishnu verddhana in consequence of the imprecation pronounced by the Virgin died—his head bursting in two. His son Rájaráya Narendra appeased the surviving Vaisyas, and induced them to remain at Penakonda, making Virúpáksha, the son of Kusumasetti, chief over eighteen towns.—By Guruvaya.

Poetry, Plays, Tales, &c.

1.—Airávata Oheritra.

Paper, incomplete.

Gándhári intending to offer worship to the Image of Indra's Elephant omits to invite Kunti the mother of the Pándavas, who complains to her sons. Arjuna compels Indra to send his Elephant in person to receive his mother's homage, to which ceremony Gándhári is invited. The story is told in verse.

2.—Ambarisha Oheritra.

Palm leaves.

Story of Ambarisha king of Ayodhya the worshipper of Krishna, in whose behalf the Discus of Vishnu threatened to destroy the Muni Durvásas, until arrested by the mediation of the king. The story is told in several of the Vaishnava Puránas, especially in the Bhágavat from which it is rendered into Telugu, by Rangasayi son of Náráyana and grandson of Sankara Mantri.

8.—Amukta Málá.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

Narrative of the sixth Alwar or holy teacher of the Vaishnava faith, Pariyálwar, named also Vishnujit, who instructed the king of Madura and his court in the Vaishnava faith—Vishnujit afterwards finding a damsel in a Tulasi bush, named her Sudikuduta, adopted her as his daughter, and married her to the deity Sriranga. The work also includes an account of Yamunáchárya to whom the Pandya Raja had given his sister and half his kingdom—and who after a while relinquished the latter for a life of asceticism. The work is by Alla sáni Peddana one of the principal writers of the court of Krishna Ráya, and is written in that prince's name. It is dedicated to Venkata ramana the deity of Terupeti and was composed in consequence of a vision imparted by Andhra Madhusúdana, the deity worshipped at Chicacole, to Krishna Ráya, when he invaded Orissa in Sal. 1438 or A. D. 1516.

4.—Amuktamálá Vyákhyána.

Palm leaves.

A commentary on the preceding by the same author.

5.—Aniruddha Cheritra.

Paper.

Loves and marriage of Aniruddha the grandson of Krishna, and Usha the daughter of Bánásura—with the humiliation of the latter by Krishna. By Abhayámátya.

6.—Baláyala Raja Cheritra.

a. Palm leaves.—b. do.—c. do.—a Paper.

Story of Baláyala or Balayána also written Belalla and Bellana, Raja of Sindhukatak—who had resolved to give the Jangama priests whatever they should beg of him. Siva to try his faith appears, and requests of him a chaste female companion, and the king being unable to meet with such a person elsewhere, gave him his own wife Chullamá Devi. The queen finding the seeming Jangama rather backward, proceeded to embrace him, when she found a young child with three eyes in her arms. On beholding the child, the king worships him, on which Siva appears in his own person with his bride Párvati and bestows on him a benediction. By Chitáru Gangadhar. See also page 212.

7.—Bhadrarája Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

Narrative of the adventures of a prince named Bhadra, the son of Chandramani, a king of the lunar race and an Apsaras, and of his son Saphalya who was an incarnation of Hari at the request of Indra in order to destroy Kapatásura and other giants in the south of Indra. Various stories of a legendary character are comprised in this work, which appear to be the invention of the author Venkatáchárya, and not borrowed from the Puránas, although of a similar description with such as occur in those works of the Vaishnava persuasion.

8.—Bhadra parinaya.

Paper.

The loves and marriage of Krishna with Bhadrá the daughter of the Raja of Kikeya. By Peddana Kavi, composed under the patronage of Somabhupála the son of Tarumala Raja of Gawdal, a town in the Hyderabad country.

9.—Bhānu Kalyāna.

Paper.

A poetical description of the marriage of Surya with Sántá the daughter of the demon Maya. By Chandrasekhara Iswara.

10.—Bhogini Dandaka.

Palm leaves.

Poetical account of the love of Sarvajna Singama or Sinha bhupa a prince of the Velmavar tribe and a damsel named Bhogini. By Bommana patu Rája translator of the Bhágavat.

11.—Bhoja Cheritra.

Palm leaves, imperfect.

A collection of tales related by Sarpata Siddha to Bhoja. They chiefly describe the adventures of Sringára Sekhara prince of Kalinga and his three friends, the sons of a minister, a banker, and a tari gatherer, by whom the prince is restored to life after being poisoned by an old priestess. The beginning is wanting.

12.—Chandrāngada Oheritra.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

A narrative of the loves of Chandrāngada son of Indrasena king of Nishadha, and Chitrarekhā daughter of Chitrasena, with her election of him at the public choice of a husband. There is little incident in the poem, which is filled with florid descriptions of the seasons of the year and the sensations of lovers. By Venkatapati one of the eight poets of the court of Krishna Rāya and distinguished by the title of Krishna Rāya bhūshana the ornament of Krishna Rāya.

Palm leaves, incomplete.

Story of Ohandrabhānu son of Krishna by his wife Satyabhāmā, and his love for Chandrarekhā : the story is taken from the Bhāgavat and rendered into Telugu, by Mallana Mantri.

14.—Chandrikā parinaya.

Palm leaves.

Story of the loves and marriage of Chandra king of Visālā and Chandrikā princess of Panchāla. By Mādhava Raja son of Rachorla Raja—with a commentary.

15.—Chandrikā Parinaya.

Palm leaves.

An introductory chapter to a work intended to describe the marriage of Bhima to the daughter of the king of Kasī, containing at some length the genealogy of the author's patron Jupalli Venkatādri, Raja or Zemindar of Partyal. The founders of this family are said to have been officers in the service of Kāla bhairava of Wariur, and to have received their principality from Kerikāla Chola. Chenna vibhu was the first—the following are named as his descendants—Kondala Rāya, Nrisinha, Ayappa Nayak, Timmavibhu, Chennapa, Rāghava, Achabhupa, Nrisinha, Gajapati, Mānya, Ayappa, Ramachandra, Ayana, Krishna Dhari.

nipati. Timmappa and Retnappa his sons succeeded severally : the latter had three sons two of whom Timma, and Ayappa severally succeeded : the direct succession then continued again thus ; Lingabhupati, Ramana and Lingana. The last had four sons of whom the youngest Venkatádri was the patron of the poet Bhattara Bala Saraswatikáni Mahopádhya.

16.—Cháruchandrodaya.

Palm leaves.

Narrative of the adventures of Cháruchandra, the son of Krishna, by Rukmini ; his conquest of Indra's heaven and falling in love with and marrying Kumudvati the daughter of Padmákara Raja. By Chennama Mantri of Nandyal minister to Penima Timmia Raja.

17.—Dasaratha Nandana Oheritra.

Palm leaves.

A Telugu version of the first part of the Rámáyana from Ráma's birth to his marriage with Sitá : the great merit of this work is its excluding all labial letters whence it is termed the Niroshtra Rámáyana. By Basavappa of Peddupati.

18.—Dasávtára Oheritra.

Paper.

An account of the ten Incarnations of Vishnu. By Konernáth.

19.—Devaki nandana Sataka.

Palm leaves.

A composition of 100 Stanzas on the exploits of Krishna. By Kavirája sekbara Schoolmaster at Gantur.

20.—Devamalla Cheritra.

Palm leaves, imperfect.

Account of Devamalla who was created by Brahma for the destruction of the Asura Vajradanta at the request of Indra—after the defeat of the demon, the gods gave him a city and a bride, as the reward of his prowess. He had ten sons by his wife, whom he sent to different countries, to teach boxing and wrestling, &c.—from them the boxers and wrestlers profess to trace their descent. By Venkatanárya, composed by desire of Koppala Malla, a descendant of Nimba the son of Devamalla, who was established in the Dekhin.

21.—Dhermángada Cheritra.

a. Palm leaves—b. paper.

Story of Dhermángada king of Kanakapuri in Kashmir. His wife is delivered of a snake which is kept secret, and a report is given out that she has borne a son. The king of Siuráshtra sends to propose his daughter as a wife for the Prince, to which Dhermángada, unwilling to confess the truth accedes. The damsel is sent to Kashmir, and when arrived at maturity, enquires for her husband. The snake is given to her, which, although much grieved, she takes charge of, and carries to holy shrines, as Jagannáth, Sriranga and Brahma Kunda at Dhermapur. At the latter she is directed by a voice from heaven to immerse the snake in the reservoir, which she does, and it assumes the form of a man: she returns to Kashmir with her husband. Her father-in-law on learning what has happened names her Satyavati and his son Ohitrángada, and resigns to them the government. The story is related by Gautama to Ahalyá as the record of a virtuous wife. By Nrisinha Kavi.

22.—Hamsavinsati.

Palm leaves.

A collection of tales on the same plan as the tales of a parrot, or twenty stories told by a Hamsa or goose, to prevent the wife of Vishnudás from carrying on a criminal intrigue during his absence. By Agala Raja Nárayana son of Suráppá.

23.—Harischandra Nalopákhyána.

a. Palm leaves.—b. paper—c. paper.

A poem written in a double sense: as interpreted in one manner it narrates the story of Harischandra and in the other, the adventures of Nala. By Bhattu Murti who was first one of Krishna Ráya's eight poets, and subsequently patronised by Ráma Raja, whence he was entitled Ráma Rája bhúshana.

24.—Harischandra Kathá.

Palm leaves.

The story of Harischandra king of Ayodhya, the trials to which he was subjected, and the sufferings to which he was reduced, and his final restoration to prosperity. In prose. Author's name not given.

25.—Harischandra Kathá.

Palm leaves.

A poetical narrative of the trials and sufferings of Harischandra. By Gaurava Mantri grandson of Lakshmana kavi.

26.—Indumati Parinaya.

Paper.

Loves and marriage of Aja the son of Raghu and Indumati the Princess of Bhojapura. By Kámanure Krishnávadháni.

27.—Kailása nátha Sitaka.

Palm leaves.

A hundred stanzas in praise of different forms of Siva. By Venkata ramya of Nellore.

28.—Kaládharopákhyána.

Palm leaves.

Story of Kaládharma a form of Kámadeva and son of Vishnu, for whom Viswakarma builds a city in the ocean, whence he travels to different countries, and marries various princesses, until he recollects the examples of Ráma and Yudhisthira, abandons the world, and devotes himself to meditation on Vishnu. By Mudeyar Venkata pati.

29.—Kámboja Raja Cheritra.

a. Palm leaves—b. paper.

A collection of Pauranic legends supposed to be narrated by Dattatreya at the Vridha Ganga to the king of Kamboja, who had visited the spot to be cured of the Leprosy. The author, or rather translator, is not named.

30.—Kapota vákya.

Palm leaves.

Story said to be told by Ráma to Sugriva of the resignation and charity of a Pigeon that gave itself up to a fowl who had taken its mate, and of some monkies that yielded their own flesh to feed a hungry hunter. By Sayappá: the stories are from the Mahábhárat.

31.—Kavi kerna Rasáyana.

Palm leaves.

A Telugu version of the Rámáyana, in the same order. By Venkata Ramaniya.

32.—Kayúra báhu Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

Story of the marriage of Keyúra báhu king of Kalinga with Mrigánkavati daughter of the king of Láta or Lar. In order to induce the prince to seek her hand, his minister Bháguráyana repeats a number of apologues and tales which constitute the composition. By Machana Amátya who professes to have written it by order of the person celebrated in the poem and who was a prince of Rajamahendri. His genealogy is thus given—Keyura-báhu son of Gundana, son of Bhimana, son of Ketana, son of Kommána, son of Gonka Reddi, son of Govinda Bhuvibhu of the agricultural caste, Raja of Dharanikota—Ketana, the third in ascent, is said to have been the minister of Chayakara the son of Rájendra Chola.

33.—Kirátárjuniya.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

A Telugu translation of the Sanscrit poem of the same name describing the adventures of Arjuna with Siva disguised as a mountaineer. By Sattana of Náyanavaram near Madras.

34.—Lakshmi vilás.

Palm leaves.

The story of the birth of the goddess Lakshmi from the churning of the ocean, her marriage with Hari and residence with him in Sweta Dwípa. By Rayasa Venkata pati inhabitant of Venkatagiri.

35.—Mádhavábhyudaya.

Palm leaves.

A poetical account of the Avatárs of Vishnu and particularly of the actions of Krishna's infancy and youth to his marriage with Rukmini. By Ayudura kechaya son of Guruvaya, composed by desire of Naga Raja son of Paparaju son of Haryappa, son of Sankara Yogi, Raja of Nivetti in the Nellore country.

36.—Mairavana Cheritra.

Paper.

The story of the release by Hanuman of Rama and Lakshmana when they had been carried off and confined by Mairavana—After the interruption of the sacrifice of Indrajit, Ravana applied to Mairavana for aid, who promised to seize the princes—Rama's friends hearing of this desired Hanuman to be vigilant, who accordingly twisted his tail round the whole army—Mairavana unable to penetrate, assumed the form of Vibhishana and desiring Hanuman to keep a good look out, was admitted by him into the intrenchments, where he cast all the host into a slumber, and made off with Lakshmana and Rama, carried them to his castle, and ordered them to be sacrificed to his patroness Kali—Hanuman then went to Marmapura to recover the princes, where he learnt the particulars of their imprisonment from the Warder, who happened to be his own son, and who undertook to convey him past six of the seven walls which surrounded the citadel but could not carry him farther—on arriving there Hanuman met Dordandi the sister of Mairavana coming to fetch the water to be used at the sacrifice, and who being dissatisfied with her brother's treatment, and compassionating the princes, consented to admit Hanuman into the palace, in the form of a musquito in the water pot—Hanuman then asked Kali for her victims, and winding his tail round the image, frightened her into acquiescence in their liberation—her attendant spirits brought the iron cage in which they were confined and Hanuman who had previously killed all the guards carried the princes out of the fortress. He then set to work to demolish the fortification which brought Mairavana against him. He overthrew but could not kill the giant, and on marvelling at the cause, is informed by Dordandi, the five vital airs of the demon are on a mountain 60,000 cos remote, in the form of five black bees—Hanuman immediately travels thither, and catches and kills the bees, on which Mairavana perishes. He then placed Dordandi on the throne of Marmapur, with his son Matsyavallabha as young Raja. This story was told by Ráma to Agastya and repeated by Náreda to Yudhishtira. The original Sanscrit is said to be a part of the Jaimini Bhárata—the story is popular in the Dekhin—see pages 97 and 218—rendered into Telugu, by Tirupati son of Ammaya Amátya.

37.—Mándhátá Cheritra.

53.—Sananda Ocheritra.

Palm leaves.

Account of Sananda a holy personage of the Virasaiva sect the son of Purnavetti Muni, who having visited Yama and beheld the tortures to which the souls of sinners were subjected, was moved with compassion to redeem the whole race by teaching them the Panchákshara, the five-letter Mantra or formula, Sivaya Nama, glory to Siva, in consequence of which they were all transported to Siva's heaven. Yama complained of losing all his subjects to Siva, who told him he should never be liable to such a misfortune again. By Linga kavi of Kalahastri.

54.—Sárangdhara Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

Story in verse of Sárangdhara son of Rájamahendra king of Rajamahendri whose step-mother Chitrángi falls in love with him. He rejects her advances, on which she accuses him to the king of attempting to violate her, and the king orders him to have his feet cut off, and to be exposed in the forest to wild beasts. There, a voice from heaven, proclaims that the Prince in his former life was Jayanta, minister of Dhavalá Chandra, who being envious of Sumanta one of his colleagues, contrived to hide the slippers of Sumanta under the bed of the Queen.

The king finding them and ascertaining whose they were, commanded Sumanta to be exposed to wild beasts after having his legs and hands cut off in retribution of which Jayanta, now Sarangdhara, suffers the like mutilation. He acknowledges the justice of the sentence, and his wounds are healed by a Yogi. A voice from heaven apprises the king of the innocence of his son, and he takes Sarangdhara back and puts Chitrangi to death. Sarangdhara adopts a religious life. The same story occurs in Tamul, see page 218. By Chamakuri Venkatapati son of Chamakuri Lakshmana Kavi.

55.—Sarangdhara Oheritra.

Palm leaves.

The same story as the last, written in prose, by Gaurana Kavi.

56.—Sasanka Vijaya.

Palm leaves.

The rape of Tara the wife of Vrishaspati by Chandra and the war that ensued amongst the gods in consequence, Vrihaspati recovered his bride, but her son Buddha begotten by Chandra was given to him. The story is told in different Puranas. By Venkapati son of Krishnaya.

57.—Sringara Rdghava.

Palm leaves.

A poem in praise of Rama by Venkatadri son of Charukumari Peddia. The first portion is appropriated to an account of the family of Narayana, the patron of the poet, descended from Kotipalli Gopapradhani, a Niyogi Brahman of Rojala in the Hyderabad district.

58.—Surabhandeswara.

a. Palm leaves—b. do—c. paper.

A celebrated Saiva tale in the Dekhin, of an intrigue between a Saiva brahman of great sanctity and the wife of a Tari gatherer or vendor of spirituous liquor. Being unseasonably interrupted by the husband at their first interview, the woman concealed her gallant in a large jar partly filled with arrack, in which the Brahman was stifled. In consideration of his piety, and the holiness of the place where the event happened, which was Kasi or Benara, Siva changed the body into a Linga, and the jar into the cup or Yoni, and consented to be worshipped in this form as Surabhāndeswara the Iswara or Linga of the wine vessel. By Ghantāya Prabhu, son of Yellana Amātya.

59.—Swarochisha Menu Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

A poetical account of the birth of Swarochisha the second Menu. Pravarākhyā a Brahman having obtained permission to behold Kailāsa was seen by Varuthini one of the Apsarasas. She fell in love with him, but he being a pious person rejected her advances, and returned home: a Gandharva enamoured of Varuthini, observing what had occurred, assumed the shape of the Brahman, and in his person held intercourse with the nymph: the result of which was the birth of Swarochisha Menu. The story is taken from the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāna being rendered into Telugu, by Allasani Peddana one of Krishna Rāya's eight poets: he is known by the name of Andhra Kavi Pitāmahā, grand sire of Andhra or Telugu bards.

60.—Shorasa Kumāra Cheritra.

Paper.

The stories of sixteen princes, or of Kamalākara the son of Janamejaya, and his fifteen companions, who on setting out together in quest of adventures are separated from each other. They rejoin the prince after some interval, and each relates what has befallen him. The plan of the work is borrowed from the Das Kumāra of Dandi, but the persons differ, and the adventures are of a more marvellous complexion; thus Kamalākara releases one of his friends from his transformation into a tree. He is himself changed to a Parrot. Chitrasena obtains the power of travelling through the air, &c. Several of the stories are taken from other collections, as the Vrihat kathā and Vetāla Panchavinsali. By Annaya.

61.—Vāni vilāsa.

Palm leaves.

A poetical miscellany which may be regarded as a popular Purāna. It comprises accounts of the creation and destruction of the world, the genealogy of the Patriarchs, the extent of the earth, the holiness of different sacred streams, the duties of the different castes, the merit of observing various festivals and worshipping particular objects. It treats of Grammar, Prosody, Astronomy, Medicine, Music, Arms, of Philosophy, the Drama, Elephants and Horses, and of articles of dress and ornament, and is in fact a summary of the religious and social system of the Hindus. By Terumalla Rangasayi son of Kandarya.

62.—Vasu Raja Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

Story of Vasu king of Pratishthána whilst hunting in a forest beholding and falling in love with Girikanyá, the daughter of the Koláhala mountain and marrying her. By Bhattu Murtti, said to have been one of the poets of the court of Krishna Ráya and Ráma Raja, composed by desire of Terumala Ráya Raja of Pennaconda after the downfall of Vijayanagar, one of the five grandsons of Ráma Raja: the genealogy contained in the introductory lines of the poem is of some value as shewing the reputed descent of that usurping minister. A descendant of Yudhishtira was Pinna Tatta—his son was Somadeva—his son Raghunáth—his son Purána Makaju—his son Bukka Raja—his son Ráma Raja—he had three sons Timma, Kondama and Sriranga of whom the last succeeded to the sovereignty of the dismembered kingdom: he had five sons Konavibhu, Timma, Rámaprabhu—Terumalla and Venkatapati both: the last two appear to have enjoyed authority.

63.—Vetála Panchavinsati.

Paper.

A collection of twenty-five tales told by a Vetála or Demon to Vikramaditya, translated from the Sanscrit.

64.—Vidyávatí Manjari.

Palm leaves.

Poetical description of a dancing girl and her loves with Mudurama Raja Paligar of Mugarala palam. By Seshachala Paligar of the Tadigola family.

65.—Vijaya Vilāsa.

Palm leaves.

The adventures and exploits of Arjuna on his separation from his brethren, as described at the end of the first section of the Mahābhārat, with some modification. On his coming southwards he marries Chitrāngadā daughter of Pāndya Raja at Manipur, by whom he has Babhruvāhana after which he goes to Prabhāsa kshetra in pilgrimage, and thence returns to Dwārakā in disguise, whence with Krishna's connivance, he carries off and marries Subhadra the sister of that divinity, Abhimanyu is born of this marriage. By Chamakura Lakshmayah. The book is dedicated to Raghunāth Raja, son of Achyuta Rāya a prince of Tanjore in the beginning of last century.

66.—Vikramārka Cheritra.

a. Palm leaves.—b. do.—c. paper.

An account of the celebrated prince Vikramārka or Vikramāditya and his brothers; according to this legend Vikramārka on his travels propitiates Kālī under a fig tree near Ujayin, and she confers upon him a life and reign of 1000 years. Prasena king of Ujayin, dying without heirs, Vikramārka is elected monarch: after reigning many years he visits Indra, and upon his return observes evil omens, the cause of which is explained by Bhartrihari to be the birth of his brother's destroyer. The king sends his familiar to search for this person, and the Vetāla discovers him in Sālivāhana just born of a virgin six months old, at Pratishthāna—Vikramārka sets out to kill him but is encountered and slain by Sālivāhana. Vikramārka is succeeded by his son to whom Bhoja succeeds.

The work contains also the story of Bhartrihari who detects the infidelity of his wife by the receipt of a fruit which he had given her, and which she presented to her gallant, the gallant to a female slave—the slave to a common woman, and the last again to the king. Bhartrihari in consequence retired to an ascetic life. By Kondaya Kavi son of Chittiya Timmia and grandson of Mallikarjuna inhabitant of the Ceded districts. Mss. c. is by Yekaya.

Although denominated the Vikrama Cheritra, these works are nothing more than the collection of tales narrated to Bhoja by the animated statues which supported a throne formerly belonging to Vikramāditya, and subsequently found by Bhoja. On his attempting to ascend it, the statues, which were so many Apasaras or nymphs of heaven, consigned for a given period to do penance in this form, denied his pretensions, as being infinitely inferior to their former master, in disinterestedness, courage and liberality. Each image tells an anecdote of Vikramāditya in support of the assertion, and the work is thence known as the Sinhāsana Dvātrīṃśati, or Thirty-two (tales) of the throne, such being the number of its supporters.

The original collection is unquestionably Sanscrit, but versions exist in every cultivated dialect. Such as occur in this collection agree tolerably well with each other in the purport of the stories, although admitting occasional additions and embellishments. Such is the case with the Telugu and Marhatta versions, and to these may be added the Bengali as printed in Calcutta. The Hindi translation, published likewise in Calcutta, differs in every respect from the original, the authenticity of which is nevertheless corroborated by the agreement of the other three, the Telugu, Bengali and Marhatta, with each other, and with the Sanscrit text. The Telugu differs chiefly from all the rest in the introductory portion. The original simply states that Bhartrihari was king of Ujain and that Vikramāditya his younger brother succeeded him, on his abandoning the world, in consequence of detecting his wife's infidelity by the well known circumstance of the fruit, which, given by him to the Queen, was presented by her to her paramour; and after a time came back again to the king. According to the Telugu version however Vikramāditya, was one of the four sons of Chandragupta a Brahman of Ujain—the others were Vararuchi, Bhatti and Bhartrihari—Vararuchi the elder was the son of a Brahman woman, and adopted a religious life—Bhartrihari the son of a Sudra woman obtained the throne of Ujain but resigned it for the reason above stated, when Vikramāditya succeeded—Bhatti was his minister. The Marhatta and Bengali follow the original Sanscrit. The Hindi makes Vikrama one of the six sons of Gandharb Sen Raja of Ambavati; the others are Brahmanit, Sankha, Bhartrihari, Chandra and Dhanwantari. Sankha becoming the minister of the Raja of Dhár the father of Bhoja, killed him, and was killed by his own brother, Vikrama, who thus became king of Dhár.

A remarkable part of the story of Vikramáditya is his being killed by Sáliváhana of Pratishthána. In the introduction to the Sanscrit work and the Bengali translation, this fact is merely announced. In the 23rd story however, in both, Sáliváhana is said to be the son of a Brahman widow by a Nága kumára a serpent prince, whose aid gives animation to clay figures of men, elephants and horses for his son's service in the engagement, from which however Vikrama by the aid of Vásuki retires unharmed. The same story is told in the same manner and place in the Telugu version, but the introduction improves upon it, by stating that Vikramáditya solicited a boon from Mahadeo that he should never be slain, unless by the son of an infant virgin, intending thereby an impossibility. Such however was Sáliváhana, being begotten by a Nága kumára on a female child one year old. Sáliváhana, with the aid of his father and the animated toys defeats and kills Vikramaditya. The Marhatta so far amends this story that it makes the virgin mother of Sáliváhana seven years of age. Not a word of these incidents is found in the Hindi work, nor any mention of Sáliváhana at all. Those peculiarities of the story, therefore, which shew the strongest traces of the appropriation of early Christian legends, are of local and probably recent origin, and after all present no very striking analogy.

67.—Vipranáráyana Cheritra.

Palm leaves.

Story of Vipranáráyana a Brahman, one of the Alvars; the same apparently as Terumanya; and of Devadevi a dancing girl in the temple of Sriranga. The god in consideration of his votary's merits assumes his shape, and presents to Devadevi a golden Ewer from his shrine as the reward of her favours. Vipranáráyana is accused of having stolen the vessel, and is on the point of being punished for the theft, when Sriranga appears and reveals his innocence. By Varadiya disciple of Kandala Dodáchári of Sriranga.

6.—Durgá Mähátmya.

Paper.

The Chandi páth, or section descriptive of the victories of Durgá, from the Márkandeya Purána.

7.—Básava Purána.

Paper.

An account of the origin of the Lingayet, Jangama or Vira Saiva sect, characterised by wearing the emblem of Siva round their necks, or on their foreheads. According to the followers of this faith, which prevails very extensively in the Dekhin, Báswa, Básava, Báswana, or Básawapa or Básavappa, different modes of writing his name, only restored this religion, and did not invent it. This person, it is said, was the son of Mádiga Ráya a Brahman, and Madevi, written also Madala arasu and Mahámbá, inhabitants of Hinguleswar Parvati Agraháram on the west of Sri Saila, and both, devout worshippers of Siva. In recompense of their piety, Nandi the bull of Siva was born on earth, as their son, becoming incarnate by command of Siva, on his learning from Náreda the decline of the Saiva faith, and prevalence of other less orthodox systems of religion. The child was denominated after the Básava or Básava the bull of the deity. On his arriving at the age of investiture he refused to assume the thread ordinarily worn by Brahmans, or to acknowledge any Guru except Iswara or Siva. He then departed to the town of Kalyán, the capital of Bijala or Vijala Ráya and obtained in marriage Gangámbá the daughter of the Dandanáyak, or minister of police. From thence he repaired to Sangameswara, where he received from Sangameswara Swámi, initiation into the tenets of the Vira Saiva faith. He was invited back from this place to succeed his father-in-law upon his decease, in the office he had held.

After his return to Kalyán, his sister, who was one of his first disciples, was delivered of a son Chenna Básava, who is not unfrequently confounded with his uncle, and regarded perhaps more correctly, as the founder of the sect.

After recording these events, the work enumerates various marvellous actions, performed by Básava and several of his disciples, such as converting grains of corn to pearls—discovering hidden treasures—feeding multitudes, healing the sick, and restoring the dead to life. The following are some of the anecdotes narrated in the work.

Básava having made himself remarkable for the profuse bounties he bestowed upon the Jangamas, helping himself from the Royal Treasury for that purpose, the other ministers reported his conduct to Bijala who called upon him to account for the money in his charge. Básava smiled, and giving the keys of the treasury to the king, requested him to examine it, which being done, the amount was found wholly undiminished. Bijala thereupon caused it to be proclaimed that whoever calumniated Básava should have his tongue cut out.

A Jangama who cohabited with a dancing girl, sent a slave for his allowance of rice to the house of Básava, where the messenger saw the wife of the latter, and on his return reported to the dancing girl the magnificence of her attire. The mistress of the Jangama was filled with a longing for a similar dress, and the Jangama having no other means of gratifying her, repaired to Básava to beg of him his wife's garment. Básava immediately stripped Gangámbá his wife, and other dresses springing from her body, he gave them all to the Jangama.

A person of the name of Kanapa who regularly worshipped the image of Ekámreswara imagining the eyes of the deity were affected, plucked out his own, and placed them in the sockets of the figure. Siva pleased with his devotion restored his worshipper his eyes.

A devout Saiva named Mahadevala Macháya who engaged to wash for all the Jangamas, having killed a child, the Raja ordered Básava to have him secured and punished; but Básava declined undertaking the duty, as it would be unavailing to offer any harm to the worshippers of Siva. Bijala persisting, sent his servants to seize and tie him to the legs of an elephant, but Macháya caught the elephant by the trunk, and dashed him and his attendants to pieces. He then proceeded to attack the Raja, who being alarmed, applied to Básava and by his advice humbled himself before the offended Jangama. Básava also deprecated his wrath, and Macháya being appeased, forgave the king, and restored the elephant and the guard to life.

A poor Jangam having solicited alms of Kinnaráya one of Básava's chief disciples, the latter touched the stones about them with his staff, and converting them into gold, told the Jangam to help himself.

Story of Siriála.

Siriála Jangama who resided at Kanchi, distributed food daily to one thousand Jangamas. Siva in order to try his faith, went to his house, disguised as an Ascetic : as soon as Siriála saw him he fell at his feet and invited him to take some repast. Siva replied to him "that he must have human flesh, from some one of Siriála's family" to which the latter agreed, and carried him into his house. Having communicated the wish of the Jangam to his wife Ganguli, they determined to sacrifice their son. In the mean time Siva proceeded to the son of Siriála named Chilláta who was at school, and told him, that he would be killed by his parents for the food of a goblin, and therefore he had better run away, but the lad replied to him "You are an Ascetic, why do you seek to alarm me, my life is not dear to me, and I shall lose the benefits of this and the next world by disobeying the commands of my parents. Do not you know, that, it is better that my flesh should be digested in the belly of a devotee, than that I should be separated from Siva by worldly cares. Do not dissuade me in this manner, but return to your abode." The Ascetic accordingly returned. The mother of the lad then brought him home, and bathed and adorned him, and prepared to kill him, and told him that through their virtues, the Ascetic had asked them to offer their child, and that they had agreed to it. The lad replied that he was fortunate, and should thus obtain salvation. His mother counselled him then not to be afraid, but to repeat the prayer Nama siváya, and the parents then cut off his head, and dressed his flesh as nine sorts of curry, reserving only the head. On presenting the dishes to the Ascetic, he flew into a passion, because the head was not given, and being afraid of his curses, they produced it, when the Ascetic desired them to dress that also. This being effected, he commanded them to partake of the meal along with him. Siriála hesitated to eat of his child, but the wife enforced his compliance, and they sat down on either hand of the Jangam. The pretended devotee then commanded them to send for their son to dinner, and being afraid to avow that they had killed him, they stated he would presently come from school. The Ascetic refused to eat without him, and desired them to call the boy, with which they were forced to comply—on doing so, the boy to their great astonishment came out from an adjoining room with three golden cars. Then Siva appeared in his own shape, and carried the parents and son and the ancestors of Siriála to Kailas.

Madivala Macháya's Restoring Bāsava, and Kinnaráya to life.

Kinnaráya died, and his soul united with the Lingam, worn round his neck. This circumstance being reported to Bāsava, he immediately went to the deceased, and lamented as follows: How can I live without you, you are my heart, my soul, most excellent among the Jangams, how can I stay behind you, we all came to the earth together, and it is not proper for you to depart before me: who will protect me now, you are gone. So on his account he died, himself, and was united with the spirit of the Lingam. The Jangamas who were with Bāsava, then went to Madivala Machaya and informed him of the death of Kinnaráya, on which he repaired to the spot, and thus addressed the corpse of Bāsava—you are the creator of the souls of the Jangamas, their preserver and destroyer: you have associated with them, and aided them; rise, rise; you have offered up your body to keep your promise, and as a mark of friendship and affection, but is it proper to keep your faith to Kinnaráya, and break it to the Jangams. They will die on your account. How can they exist after you are dead—you should have restored his life, not died yourself. Siva will be ill pleased by such an act. Siva has taken the life of Kinnaráya into his essence, but why should you have unnecessarily perished. Why do you ignorantly reign your life, when Siva has been pleased to take him away ; as you have promised Kinnaráya that you would accompany him, you have done so, but now you must fulfil your pledge to the Jangamas ; you are their life and must revive for them.

To Kinnaráya, he observed—It is well for you to relinquish your life, before you have accomplished the objects enjoined by Siva, and at the same time take away the existence of Básava : it is decorous for you to have departed without the knowledge of the Siva—Ganas : your souls cannot unite with each other, but ought to be absorbed into Siva : you must therefore bring back Básava, and be content to exist here as long as he tarries upon earth—on the conclusion of these harangues Kinnaráya rose to life, as if awaking from sleep, and Básava was immediately restored to life. They both fell at the feet of Machaya and the other Jangamas, and the Siva Ganas were extremely pleased, and astonished at the power of Machaya, and they praised him, and said, he is verily an incarnation of Víra Bhadra. So they returned to their respective dwellings.

The work is also in many places addressed to the Jainas, in the shape of a dialogue between some of the Jangama Saints and the members of that faith, in which the former narrate to the latter instances of the superiority of the Saiva religion, and the falsehood of the Jain faith, which appears to have been that of Bijala Ráya and the great part of the population of Kalayána. In order to convert them Ekánta Ramáya one of Básava's disciples, cut off his own head in their presence, and then marched five days in solemn procession through and round the city, and on the fifth day replaced his head upon his shoulders. The Jain Pagodas were thereupon it is said destroyed by the Jangamas. It does not appear however that the king was made a convert, or that he approved of the principles and conduct of his minister. He seems on the contrary to have incurred his death by attempting to repress the extension of the Virasaiva belief. Different authorities, although they disagree as to the manner in which Bijala was destroyed concur in stating the fact : the following account of the transaction is from the present work.

“ In the city of Kalayána were two devout worshippers of Siva named Allaya and Madhuvaya. They fixed their faith firmly on the divinity they adored, and assiduously revered their spiritual preceptor, attending upon Básava whithersoever he went. The king Bijala well knew their merits, but closed his eyes to their superiority, and listening to the calumnious accusations of their enemies commanded the eyes of Allaya and Madhuvaya to be plucked out. The disciples of Básava, as well as himself, were highly indignant at the cruel treatment of these holy men, and leaving to Jagaddeva the task of putting Bijala to death, and denouncing imprecations upon the city, they departed from Kalayána—Básava fixed his residence at Sangameswara.

Machaya, Bommidevaya, Kinnara, Kannatha, Bommadeva, Kakaya, Masanaya, Kolakila Bommadeva, Kesirajaya, Mathirajaya and others, announced to the people, that the fortunes of Bijala had passed away, as indicated by portentous signs; and accordingly the crows crowed in the night, jackalls howled by day; the sun was eclipsed, storms of wind and rain came on, the earth shook, and darkness overspread the heavens. The inhabitants of Kalayána were filled with terror.

When Jagaddeva repaired home, his mother met him, and told him that when any injury had been done to a disciple of the Saiva faith, his fellow should avenge him or die. When Daksha treated Siva with contumely, Párvati threw herself into the flames, and so under the wrong offered to the Saints he should not sit down contented, and so saying she gave him his food at the door of his mansion. Thither also came Mallaya and Bommaya two others of the Saints, and they partook of Jagaddeva's meal. Then smearing their bodies with holy ashes, they took up the spear and sword and shield, and marched together against Bijala. On their way a bull appeared, whom they knew to be a form of Básava, come to their aid, and the Bull went first, even to the court of the king, goring any one that came in their way, and opening a clear path for them. Thus they reached the court, and put Bijala to death in the midst of all his courtiers, and then they danced, and proclaimed the cause why they had put the king to death. Jagaddeva on his way back, recalling the words of his mother, stabbed himself. Then arose dissension in the city, and the people fought amongst themselves, and horses with horses, and elephants with elephants until, agreeably to the curse denounced upon it by Básava and his disciples, Kalayána was utterly destroyed.

Básava continued to reside at Sangameswara conversing with his disciples and communing with the divine Essence, and he expostulated with Siva, saying "By thy command have I and thy attendant train come upon earth, and thou hast promised to recall us to thy presence when our task was accomplished." Then Siva with Párvati came forth from the Sangameswara Lingam, and were visible to Básava who fell on the ground before them. They raised him, and led him to the sanctuary, and all three disappeared, in the presence of the disciples, and they praised their master, and flowers fell from the sky and then the disciples spread themselves abroad, and made known the absorption of Básava into the emblem of Siva.

This account of Básava is by Bhima Kavi : a similar compilation, if not the same, is sometimes attributed to Somana Arádhya a Jangama teacher.

8.—Básava Purána.

Paper.

A similar work as the preceding and by the same author but in a more elaborately poetical style.

9.—Chenna Básava Purána.

Paper, incomplete.

An account of Chenna Básava, an incarnation of the Pranava or mysterious syllable Om, begotten on Nágalámbiká the sister of Básava, herself an incarnation of Párvati, by the spirit of Siva. According to the legend, Bijala calling in question the spiritual origin of Nágalámbiká's pregnancy, she was delivered in presence of his whole court of a child resplendent with all the attributes of Siva, and whose divine nature was consequently fully proved and acknowledged. The incarnation of the Pranava was for the purpose of instructing Básava, or the incarnate Nandi, in the tenets of the Virasaiva faith, the establishment of which is thus divided between the uncle and the nephew. Chenna Básava appears to have been more wholly a religious character, although the secular authority of Básava was most instrumental in the augmentation of the Jangama sect. By Virupáksha.

A prophetic account of the Belál sovereigns who ruled at Dwá-rasamudra and who were as follows :—

Hayasála Belála Ráya—reigned 59 years from S. 906 to

			965 or A. D. 1043
Vinayáditya Belála	to S.	995 or „	1073
Yareyānga Belála	„	1036 or „	1114
Vishnu verddhana B.	„	1067 or „	1145
Vijaya Narasinha B.	„	1110 or „	1188
Vira Belála	„	1155 or „	1233
Vira Narasinha Beva	„	1171 or „	1249
Virasomeswara	„	1190 or „	1268
Vira Narasinha	„	1230 or „	1308

The Dynasty is carried perhaps some thing too far back at the commencement, but the list probably is not very far from correct. The last prince was taken by the Mohammedans, and his capital destroyed in their first invasion of the Dekhin, about A. D. 1310-11.

This work next gives an account of the foundation of Vijayana-gar, and the princes who ruled over it, with its subversion by the Mohammedans as well as their capture of Srirangapatam and Chandragiri.

The work also gives an account of the author's own death or absorption, and the share he took in the transactions consequent on Bijala's death, which are here described in a different manner from that noticed in other works. The following is the account.

Siddha Ramáya, Allama Prabhu, Básava and others had acquired the knowledge of Shat Sthala, (the six seats of meditation by which Siva is manifested) from Chenna Básava and had departed, all but the first who demanded of his teacher what would come to pass. Chenna Básava replied; You will depart your life at Sonala pura. Allama Prabhu after wandering over many regions, and visiting various shrines in the mountains of the north, as well as the South of India, will come to Básava, and be received by him with great veneration; which will displease many of Básava's disciples, and they will depart. Allama Prabhu will then feed miraculously one hundred and ninety-six thousand Jangamas, and will then depart to Srisaila where he will convert Gorakh and other sages, and will be absorbed in a plantain tree along with Mahádevi. In the year of Sáliváhana 696 (A. D. 77.) on Tuesday the 11th of Phalguna, Básava will be united with Sangameswara, and his wife Nílámbiká with the Lingam she wears, as will others of the disciples with their respective Lingams. Afterwards Vijala Ráya, will appoint Chenna Basava his minister—Jagaddeva, Bomana and Malaya will murder the Ráya and Mádivala Machaya defeat his army, and take his son prisoner. Then Nágalámbiká (the mother of Chenna Básava) will request her son to liberate the youth, and raise him to his father's principality.—He will reign for sixty years and the Jains and Mohammedans will prevail—Chenna Básava will then send Madivalaya to the village of Hippálíká and will then be absorbed into his Guru, Linganárya. The disciples of Siva to the number of thirty-six thousand will eat and sport in his abode, and will then all disappear."

11.—Yama Básava Kálajnyána.

a paper.—b. Palm leaves.

A prophetic account of the situation of the Dekhin after the coming of the Mohammedans and the destruction of Anagundi or Vijayanagar, comprising an account of the establishment of the Jangama religion by Básava at Kalyánpur. The following may convey some notion of the prophetic style of this and similar works.

Rudra muni said, " Evil days will occur, the spires of the Temples will fall—Jupiter shall enter into the mansion of the moon.—The moon shall appear to the people as divided—Kirita Ráma Rája will lose his kingdom—The trees will fall—The sky be overcast and the earth will shake—A famine will happen, and grain be scarce in the city of Kalyána, for about six months. Afterwards Vira Vasanta will be born in the year Ananda on the first of Kártika on Friday, about the middle of the day, of a woman named Devaki in the race of the *Kshétriya*s ; his hair will be erect, and he will have a mark on his forehead. In the fort of Bedira, a force of six lacks of troops shall perish. The country of Káleswara shall be ruined by hurricane. In the year Durmukhi, females will be increased ; a great battle will take place near Balibhandar. At Anagondi a virgin of seven years old without a husband, will bring forth eight sons, seven of them will instantly die, and the eighth will pronounce the birth of Virabhogavasanta and then die,—Three eclipses will occur in the course of one day, which will fall on the day of full moon in the month Margasira. Allamaha Prabhu will be re-born from the plantain tree ; and Chenna Básava again be incarnate in the earth."

Yamma Básava said, that he was desired by Jambunáth, the deity of Kumbhabharat to impart the prophecies which he promulgated in the world.—An army of three thousand and three hundred crores will assemble and go to the northward, and lay waste the villages and slay the people, and set fire to the palaces. People with Tiger-faces shall come to Kalyána and capture it, and the Mullas shall take possession of the country. A king of the principal part of the country shall destroy the enemy in the north. Thence he will go to Kási and return to his own country. The enemies will again follow him, and lose a great many soldiers. Let the disciples of Siva hear this.

12.—Báswana Purána.

a. Palm leaves—b. do.

The original catalogue calls these works, the Yama Básava Purána, but each wants the beginning and end, and the name therefore cannot be verified. The first is a dialogue between Ohenna Básava and Allama Prabhu on the principal events and doctrines of the Jangama faith. The second is a prose narrative of the origin and progress of the Jangama religion in the same strain as the other works of this class.

Discourse between Prabhudeva and Chenna Básava.

Prabhudeva said I have come to know the Almighty from you, a knowledge I have acquired, but I still wish to hear the particulars of my birth from you. How else can I appreciate Sangana Básavana, as he is known to you. I have explained to the people the nature of both eternal and transitory things. I have ascertained God, and abandoned the world. I have discriminated the acts of the body, and mind, and holy wisdom, I have attained the limits of true wisdom, and am worthy to hear the story of Básavana who is the disciple of Guhyeswar.

The junior minister, Chennah Básava being satisfied of his possessing true wisdom, thus replied. When the world is blank and there is nothing, when the fourteen Bhuvanas are not, when no person beholds the Lingam, and he that sees the Lingam in himself is entitled Adwaita, then Básava is found in the centre of the universe of fifty crores of worlds, on Meru which is one crore twenty-six lacks and eighty thousand Yojans high, on its peaks and at its angles, Brahma, Vishnu, Rudra, Iswara, Sadasiva, Nandi, Mahákála, Virabhadra, eighty thousand Rishis, and innumerable Ganas, the twelve Adityas, Nárada, the eight Dikpálakas, and eleven Rúdra, surrounded Siva in his court. The extent of Jambudwipa which is below Meru is related likewise in the Purans.

Prabhudeva asked him ; is there any other region. He replied ; the circumference of the earth including the seven oceans and islands, is three and seventy lacks and fifty thousand Yojans, beyond this the mountain Rajitadri is ten crores of yojans ; beyond it, is darkness for five hundred crores of Yojans, the constellations, planets and other celestial bodies are over this. Prabhu, Siva, Sidharámaya, Sámadevi, Ahilia, Udbhatia, Sadhojata Isána, Panchavakra, Adilinga, were all created by Sangana Bāsavana who was the primary person, the original master.

The date, week, influence, star, conjunction of the star, and week, the change of the months, and years, were all fixed by Sangana Bāsava, as were the eighteen ages, Ananta, Adyuta Kamanda, Taraja, Tandaja, Bhinnaja, Bhinnayukta, Adbhuta Amadyukta, Manirama, Manneranna, Viswarana, Viswavasú Alankrita, Kritayuga, Tretayuga, Dwaparyuga, and Kaliyuga.

In the first age Sarvajna was born, in the second Párvati was born, in the third Náráyan was born, from whose navel a lotus was produced, in which Brahma was born, in the fourth age he assumed the name Aja, in the fifth a Mundane-egg was produced, in the sixth age, the egg was hatched, in the seventh the clouds and Parijata trees were created, thereby the earth was produced, in the eighth the eight mountains were made, in the ninth the seven oceans were formed, in the tenth the best, middling and worst things were born, and eighty-four lacks of living creatures and the stars, in the eleventh age the moon and sun appeared, in the twelfth age the spirits of heaven and gods were born, in the thirteenth age the boons were born, in the fourteenth war was waged between the deities and men, in the fifteenth age a war was declared between Ráma and Rávana, in the sixteenth, a conflict took place between the Kurus and Pándavas—in the seventeenth age hostilities occurred between the Maurvas and Kadambas.—The following are the names of the kings of the different ages.

In the origin, Náráyana ,	His son Maricha ,
His son Brahmá ,	His son Bindu ,
His son Bhrigu ,	His son Lavala ,
His son Indra ,	His son Paritapi ,
His son Nayanéndriya ,	His son Sila Gopála ,
His son Kálasevala ,	His son Nanda Gopála ,
His son Dundumahanta ,	His son Vasudeva ,
His son Trisanku ,	His son Srikrishna ,
His son Harischandra ,	His son Sildappa ,
His son Lohitáksha ,	His son Dhigu ,
His son Nala ,	His son Raghu ,
His son Kurupasya ,	His son Aranya ,
His son Gunarási ,	His son Mrigarája ,
His son Paritái ,	His son Dasaratha ,
His son Amara ,	His son Ráma .
His son Mándhátá ,

They are all destroyed at the dissolution of the world but Sangana Bāsava exists alone himself.

Hear the incarnations of Bāsava.———

In the age Krita, when Iswara destroyed the Asurs he was Pramatha Ganerwar, when Iswar killed Gajásur and assumed his hide he was called Ugra Ganeswar, when Siva beheaded the Asurs, and wore their skulls as a string, he was entitled Nisanka Ganesa, when Siva affectionately treated the deities he was called Sankara Ganeswar, when Siva slew Jalandhara he was called Vichitra Ganeswara, when Siva killed Pitasur, he was called Mátápi Ganeswar, when Siva killed Tálásur he was called Talaganeswar. After the destruction of the world he was called Janana mārana Ganeswar, when the world became void he was called Adi Ganeswar, when Siva married Párvati he was called Kálalochana Ganeswar, when Siva killed Andhakásur he was called Nilalochana, when Siva destroyed Tripura he was called Skanda Ganeswar, when he beheaded Brahma, he was called Nilakantha, in this Kali age he is called Sangana Bāsawana.

When Bāsava moved his body in sport the world shook, and the deities and giants were terrified, he was entitled Nandimahakala, and Banda Ganeswar when he stood before the third eye of Basava that the world might not be destroyed. At the time of the celebration of the marriage of Párvati, he was entitled Kálalochana, when Siva slew Andhakásura he was entitled Nilalohita, when Siva reduced the three regions he was called Skanda, when Siva beheaded Brahma he was called Nilakantha, when he united his spirit with the Lingam he was called Vrishabha, when he was incarnate in the different eighteen ages he was called Nándikeswár, in this present age Kali, he is called Kudali Sangama Bāsawana. Prabhudeva having heard this speech was highly pleased with his accurate memory, and prostrated himself before him, and declared that Bāsawana was before all things. Then Chenna Bāsava said, Bāsava is the first of all who assumed the Linga, and as the Linga, was borne by Bāsawana, so do his disciples the Jangamas bear it.

a Paper.—b—c. Palm leaves.

An account of the origin and acts of Allama Prabhu a celebrated Jangama teacher, who appears to have been equally instrumental with Bāsava in establishing the faith: the work gives also an account of the birth and actions of Bāsava, and of some of his chief disciples. The following account of the birth of Allama Prabhu, as more particular than any contained in this work is taken from No. XVII.

Story of Allama Prabhu subduing Maya.

On the mountain of Kailas, when Siva was sitting in his Court—Chandeswara stood up in his presence, and saluted him with a single hand. Párvati Devi observing it said to Siva, “ Oh Parameswara, every one salutes us with both hands—what is the reason that this person salutes with but one. Parameswara then became two-fold, or half Siva and half Parvati. Chandeswara beholding it, remarked ; although foul or fragrant odours may be wafted by the wind, or the shadow of the sun reflected from a jar of water, yet are they not one existence—Materiality is the source of all confusion, you Parameswara are distinct from matter, unproduced, inconceivable, you are omnipotent through the three regions. So saying he turned to the right half, and saluted it alone. Párvati then being highly enraged, spoke thus, Chandesa, I am the material mask of the spirit. How can you refuse to acknowledge me—you are under my command as long as you are enveloped with a body. Is it proper to disregard me. Chandesa said, though gold may be found in soil yet it is not united with it, though the pearl is produced in the water yet it becomes not water, though the lotus float upon the pool yet it remains unmoistened. In like manner, I have a being free from matter : so he quitted his mantle, the material Devi, and directed the god of wind to display his power, in doing which he hurled down eight lacs of mountains : then Siva considering him as his principal disciple placed him on his knees and fed him with nectar. Chandiswara then became Bhringiswara with three legs, at which the Ganas were surprized, and called him Ganeswar the exempted from matter. Parvati beholding Siva, said that she had conferred half of her body on him, and Bramha and Vishnu and the rest were centered in her, which then was greater, Bhringiswara or Siva himself. Siva replied to her, that she might send a part of her essence to the mortal world, and he would send Bhringisa there, and she might then examine his spiritual truth. Párvati accordingly sent a spark of her essence to be borne as Máyá on Mohinideva the queen of the king of Banavasi named Mamakara raya. This Máyá became a harlot and associated with the musician of the temple of Madhukeswar at Banavasi. The spirit of Bhringiswar or Nirmaya Ganeswar was born by Nirahankára on Sujnánadevi at Karure, and his parents gave him the name of Allama Prabhu, and nourished him. When he was grown up he said to his parents that he was born to them for their faith to Siva, and wished to teach the prayers of Siva to the disciples in the different regions, and he shewed them the mode of attaining liberation. He went to Bánavasi, and subdued the musicians and Máyá there and obtained the title of Niranjana, and wandered throughout different parts of the world, and wrought many miracles for the disciples of Siva.

An immense collection of legends, partly Pauranic, and partly of more modern invention, and local credit relating to the supremacy of Siva, and the marvellous actions of his most celebrated votaries. Of the former class are the burning of Káma; Siva's assuming the moon for his crest; his taking the ganges on his head; his residing at Kási; and the subversion of Daksha's sacrifice; the history of the solar and lunar races is also given, and the overthrow of all the principal Asurs, as Rávana, Mahishásura, Andhaka, Jalandhara. Raktavija, Táraka, Tripura and others. In the second class, narratives of the devotion of various princes of the Chola and Pándya dynasties are given, as well as of Básava, and his disciples. The work is named after Bhairavendra, or Bhairavánka, of whose origin the following account is given.

“Nareda having come one day to Siva at Kailás, reported that the worship of that deity had very generally declined, and men were immersed in iniquity. Siva looked round amongst his attendants, and selecting one of them, named Kálasahasra desired him to assume a mortal form, re-establish the true faith upon earth, and annihilate the sects of unbelievers. Accordingly, Kálasahasra was born as the son of the king Sangama Raja, of his wife Haimávati in the town of Morpur in the Andhra country, and was named Bhyravánka: he studied the sciences in his youth, and was married to Mahadevi. His favorite diversion was listening to the narratives of the Rámáyana Bhágavat and Bhárata, and his chief delight the company of the disciples of Siva. After a time, being warned by a vision, he distributed all his jewels and wealth to the pious, and proceeded with his wife to Sosali, and having wrought many miracles on the way, he was received there with great reverence by the prince, named Sambhu Ráya, and after a while was united at that place with the deity Someswara.”

An account of the incarnation of Básava and the acts of that teacher, of Chenna Básava, and of other worthies of the Virasaiva religion: By Chanapa Kavi. The following is an account given in this work of an incident in the early history of the sect.

"Formerly, when Siva was sitting in his Court, on the Kailas mountain, Nandisa being desirous of seeing the world of mortals, requested his lord's permission, to descend upon the earth. Having received the solicited indulgence, he visited all the islands and continents and in the course of his travels came to the Malaya mountain. There he beheld a king named Animishaya engaged in a hunting party, but who sought an opportunity of paying his adorations to the type of Siva. Finding no Lingam to worship, and remarking Nandikéśa he addressed him and communicated his wants, declaring if he could not procure a Lingam, he would starve to death. Nandikéśa compassionating his situation, granted him his own Lingam, and repaired himself to Kailas where the warder refused to allow him to enter as he had lost his Lingam. Then Siva, knowing what had occurred through his divine knowledge, went to the gate, and rebuked the warder, saying, that there was no difference between him and Nandi, and being angry, with him cursed him to be born as Bijala the Chaulukya king. Then the warder asked him when his curse should terminate, to which the god replied, when Vira Madivala, Malle Bommaya and Jagaddéva shall murder you, then, come back to Kailas."

25.—*Vijala Rāya*Cheritra.*

Paper.

Account of Vijala or Bijala Rāya who is said to have ruled at Kalyāna pura in the eleventh century, and to have had as his minister Bāsava the founder of the Jangama faith. Vijala being a Jain persecuted the Jangamas, and attempted the destruction of Bāsava, who retaliated by seeking to compass the death of the king.

The following is the account here given of this transaction and its consequences.

“Vijula Rāya having marched against and subdued the Raja of Kolapur was on his return to his capital: Whilst reposing in his tent Bāsava sent to him a Jangama disguised as one of the Jain persuasion with a poisoned fruit. The seeming Jain presented the fruit, which the Raja had no sooner smelled than he dropped down senseless. His son Immadi Bijala and his attendants hastened to his assistance, but it was in vain. He revived however for a short period, and being aware who had perpetrated his murder enjoined his son to put Bāsava to death. Immadi Bijala accordingly ordered Bāsava to be apprehended, and all the Jangamas wherever seized to be executed. Bāsava on hearing this threw himself into a well, by which he perished, and his wife Nilāmbā poisoned herself. After the resentment of Immadi Bijala was allayed, Chenna Bāsava the sister's son of Bāsava presented his uncle's treasures to the Rāya, in consequence of which he was admitted to favor and to a ministerial office at court.

This account differs materially from preceding narratives—(see pages 313 and 316.) By Dharani dharendra a Jain priest.

26.—Rávana Siddheswara Cheritra.

1.—Kumára Ráma Cheritra.

a. paper—b. do.—c. do.—d. palm leaves—e. do.—f. do.—g. do.—h. do.

Account of Kumára Ráma, the son of Kampila Raya of Hosadurga near Vijayanagar. By Nanganda Kavi. The name and chief circumstances appear to be connected with the capture of Kampulá in the Carnatic, by Mohammed the third, in 1338, as related by Ferishta—Kampula is probably Komply on the Tambudra near ancient Vijayanagar. The work is apparently that to which Major Wilkes alludes as a life of Kampula Raja in the Mackenzie Collection. (South of India, vol. I. p. 11; note,) and as he seems to attach to it more importance than it deserves, the following summary of its contents may be of service :—

“ Singeri Náyak, a zemindar in the woody part of Karnáta, having been obliged to quit his home, in consequence of the increasing numbers of his family, repaired to the Court of Ráma Ráya the Raja of Devagiri and was entertained by him in his service. He afterwards found a treasure, and obtaining a grant of ground erected a dwelling on the spot. After a while, he had a son, to whom he gave the name Kámpila, and married him to Hariyammá, daughter of Gujala Kati Náyak. The Sultan of Delhi having marched against Ráma Raja of Devagiri, defeated and taken him, and laid waste his territory, Singeri Náyak returned to his native country, where he was well received by Malla Raja, whom, on his dying without issue he succeeded, and considerably extended his territorial possessions. He was succeeded by his son Kámpila who was a still greater conqueror, and reduced all the petty Rajas of Karnáta to subjection. Kampila had five wives—and sons by each : by the eldest of them he had last of all, the especial hero of the narrative, Kumára or Prince RÁMA. Amongst the sovereigns who were the neighbours of Kámpilá the Raja of Guti was his rival, and demanded tribute of him, which Kámpilá resenting, sent his son Ráma then only twelve years of age with an army against Guti. Ráma defeated the Guti Raja, and took him prisoner, and brought him to his father, who liberated his captive on his consenting to become tributary to him. Amongst the booty were ten horses which Ráma reserved to himself—his brothers asked him for them to which he replied ; Why do you not gain similar prizes by your own prowess. This taunt they reported to their mothers who thence became inimical to Ráma, and in order to accomplish his destruction incessantly urged the Raja to send him on perilous expeditions. Ráma at last vowed to conquer the seventy Rajas, or not to return, and with this view repaired to the Court of Pratápa Rúdra at Warankal—where Linga Setti became attached to him and made him known to the Raja—at first, Ráma was well received, but Pratápa Rudra becoming jealous of the encomiastic titles lavished upon Ráma for his heroism by the bards and heralds, desired him to forbid their being applied to him. Ráma answered it was easy for him to acquire fresh honors, but he would not part with any that he had ever won—and the enmity of the Ráya being thus incurred, Ráma accompanied by Linga Setti left Warankal. Pratápa Rúdra detached a force to bring them back, but Ráma defeated it, and in a subsequent action with a larger army was not only victorious but took Bolla the favorite horse of the king, and his son who commanded. Ráma then subdued the Reddis of Kondapilli and the Raja of Madugala and returned with augmented reputation to his father. On shewing his booty to the Court, he desired his brothers to ride the horse of Pratápa Rúdra which they severally attempted in vain, when Ráma sprang upon him and managed him with ease—and his brothers were much ashamed.

At this time the deity Konda Brahmaya directed Ráma in a vision to institute the festival of the Súla or trident, which he accordingly did with great splendour, erecting a trident of gold in honor of the god. All the Rajas and Chieftains of the south attended. The youngest wife of Kámpilla named Retnáangi having ascended the terrace to see the great personages who were present, and who were individually described to her by her confidential attendant, Rági, was so much struck with the beauty of Ráma that she became passionately enamoured of him, and impatiently waited an opportunity of an interview, which at last occurred by accident. Kámpila being out hunting, Kúmára Ráma was amusing himself at tennis, when his ball flew over upon the terrace of Retnáangi's apartments. Not choosing to send a menial to recover it, the Prince went himself, when Retnáangi saw him, and importuned him to gratify her desires. Finding him inexorable, her love was changed to hatred, and she complained to Kámpila on his return, that Ráma had attempted to violate her person. Kámpila in a rage ordered Ráma to be put to death instantly with his four chief leaders Kátana, Káliya Narasa, MammadiSinha, and Lingana Setti. The minister Bachapa, however, secreted Ráma and his friends in his palace, and decapitating five ordinary criminals, produced their heads to the Raja as those of his intended victims. Retnáangi preserved that which was said to be the prince's at first out of revenge, but as her passion subsided, as an act of love. Kámpila soon repented of his haste, and the death of Ráma was the subject of universal sorrow. His wives refused to survive him, and declared their intention of burning themselves. A pile was accordingly prepared under the superintendence of Bachapa, who contrived a subterraneous passage leading from the enclosure into which the women entered, to the chamber where Ráma was concealed, and with whom his faithful wives were then reunited.

When the king of Delhi was well assured of the death of Ráma he despatched to Gumati an army of one hundred and ninety-six thousand men under six Khans. Kámpila on hearing of their approach, now more than ever regretted his son's death, but being encouraged by his minister, assembled a large force to oppose the Mohammedans. The armies met and fought a whole day without any decisive result—at night Bachapa told Kámpila that he had engaged the services of a distinguished warrior, who was so like to the prince Ráma that he would not know the difference, and having persuaded Ráma to take the field, that hero mounted on his horse Bolla appeared on the second day's battle, and overthrew part of the hostile army, slaying and decapitating five of the Khans who commanded, and sending their heads to Kámpila. On the third day, the sixth Khan was killed, and beheaded, and the invading army utterly defeated. Then Bachapa made Ráma known to his father, and told the latter what he had done, at which Kámpila was exceedingly rejoiced. Retnángi on hearing of Ráma's reappearance hanged herself, by which Kámpila was satisfied of the innocence of his son.

When the broken remains of the army returned to Delhi the Sultan was highly incensed at the cowardice of the commanders, and raising a larger force, placed it under the orders of Mátangi a female warrior of a low tribe. On learning this new danger, Kámpila retired with his family and treasure to Hosakota, leaving to Ráma the defence of Gumati—as soon as the enemy appeared at this place, Ráma marched to their encounter and drove them back four kos—but subsequently Mátangi seduced the Telugu soldiers in Ráma's army, and they treacherously introduced the enemy into the fort during the night—when Ráma was apprised of what had occurred, he sprang from bed, and hastened to the battle desiring his wives to prepare for their fate in case they should hear of his death. Proceeding to the scene of conflict he speedily plunged into the thickest of the affray, where encountering Mátangi he seized her nose-ring and shaking it told her, he disdained to take the life of a woman. His bravest soldiers surprised and overpowered by numbers fell fast around him, and he was left alone. After maintaining the conflict for a long time, and killing vast numbers of his assailants, he was at last slain, and Mátangi cut off his head, and carried it to Delhi. The Sultan placed the head, on the palace gate, where in the night it made so hideous an outcry that he was glad to get rid of it, and it was thrown into a ditch four kos remote—there the cry was repeated, so that numbers died of the fright it occasioned. The Sultan ordered it to be carried to a still greater distance, but every attempt made by men and elephants to move it from the spot proved ineffectual. In this dilemma it was suggested that the bards of Ráma should be employed to recite his praises, and messengers were sent to Kámpila to solicit their assistance. Devaya their chief was accordingly sent but his panegyrics at first were in vain—at last being so instructed in a vision he saluted Ráma as the subduer of the Sultan of Delhi, the Supreme Sovereign of the world, on which he was able to lift the head with ease—being permitted to take it away he carried it to Kampila who after weeping over it sent it to Kasi to be plunged to the holy waters of the Ganges.”

2.—Maisur Arasú Púrvabhyudaya.

Paper.

An account of the sovereigns of Mysur from Appana Timma Raj Wadeyar about the year, 1530, to Rava Karasa the second of that name, who died in 1713, with a list of the Dalavais or Governors of Sirangapatam and the territories conquered by the Mysore princes. By Nagarada Putaya. The substance of this work, and different extracts from it are given in Major Wilkes's history of Mysur, and the following account of it is found in his Preface :—

“ A Persian manuscript, entitled an Historical Account of the ancient Rajas of Mysoor, was found in 1798 in the palace at Seringapatam ; it purports to have been “ translated in 1798, at the command of the Sultaun, by Assud Auwar, and Gholaum Hussein, with the assistance of Pootia Pundit, from two books in the Canara language :” this Persian manuscript was conveyed with other works to Calcutta, and I had not the opportunity of perusing it until the year 1807, when my friend Brigadier-General Malcolm obtained a copy from Bengal. A book in the Canara language, of which the contents were then unknown, was given in 1799 by Colonel W. Kirkpatrick, one of the Commissioners for the affairs of Mysoor, to Major, now Lieutenant-Colonel Colin Mackenzie, and has since been translated under his direction with scrupulous care. It is the Canara manuscript from which the Persian translation was made, and is entitled “ The Succession of the Kings of Mysoor, from ancient Times, as it is in the Canara Cudduttums, now written into a Book by command, by Nuggur Pootia Pundit.” It is divided into two parts, as noticed in the Persian translation : the first contains the historical narrative ; and the second, the series of territorial acquisitions. In the first the dates are recorded in the year of the cycle only ; and in the second they are reckoned by the number of years which had elapsed from the compilation of the work, or, in the language of the original, so many years ago. The apparent embarrassment of fixing the chronology was easily surmounted by Lieutenant-Colonel Mackenzie. By ascertaining a single date, all the rest were at once arranged, and the manuscript was proved beyond all controversy to have been written in the year 1712-13.

The circumstances which regard the discovery of this manuscript are well known. On the death of Cham Raj Wadeyar, the father of the present Raja, in 1796, the family was transferred from the palace to the miserable hovel where they were found on the capture of Seringapatam in 1799. Among the plunder of every thing useful or apparently valuable, which was on that occasion carried off to the stores of the Sultann, were accidentally thrown two Cudduttums, which attracted his attention nearly two years afterwards when he ordered them to be examined and translated : and two old Cudduttums, which Lieutenant-Colonel Mackenzie received along with the book in 1799, prove, on examination, to be the actual originals from which it was copied and are probably the two books mentioned in the Persian translation. A short time before the real compilation of this document, the Raja, Chick Deo Raj, who died in 1704, had directed an extensive collection to be made of historical materials, including all inscriptions then extant within his dominions, which were added to a library already reported to be voluminous : the abovementioned work is probably one of the memoirs prepared in conformity to his directions, but it appears to have been presented to his successor, and is a brief but correct record of events up to the year 1712. It is, however, to be regretted that the author furnishes no incidents beyond a mere chronicle of events, after the occupation of Seringapatam by Raj Wadeyar in 1610, probably restrained by prudential motives in respect to living characters. The Sultan, in removing the Raja's family from the palace, had intended to destroy the building altogether ; and gave orders for that purpose, which were afterwards changed. It was reported to him that several large apartments were full of books, chiefly of palm leaf and Cudduttums, and he was asked how they were to be disposed of. "Transfer them," said he, "to the royal stables, as fuel to boil the cooltee" (grain on which horses are fed) : and this was accordingly done. A small miscellaneous collection was preserved from this destruction by the pious artifice of a bramin, who begged the apartment might be respected, as containing the penates of the family. This room was opened in the confusion of the 4th of May 1799, and a large portion of the contents fell into the hands of a British officer."

1.—Somasekhara and Chitrasekhara Kathá.

a. palm leaves—b. do.—c. do.—d. do.—e. do.

The adventures of two princes, sons of Vajramukuta king of Retnapuri, comprising a number of amusing incidents, several of which are familiar in western story telling—as will appear from the following summary :—

The king of Retnapuri, Vajramukuta, had two sons by the favour of Siva, Somasekhara and Chitrasekhara who in addition to the ordinary accomplishments of princes became expert jugglers and thieves. Having heard of the beauty of Rupávatí, the daughter of Vikrama king of Lilavati, and being desirous of humiliating his pride, the princes in opposition to the wishes of their father, proceeded to that capital, determined to secure the hand of Bupāvatī for one of them. Notwithstanding the city was guarded by ten thousand giants who had baffled and destroyed the emissaries employed by Indra to bring him a description of the charms of the princess, they effected their entrance. They next obtained admission into the palace, and in spite of every precaution plundered the king and queen and princess of their jewels, and stripped their majesties and all the maids of honor of their garments—leaving a written paper stating they would not cease from their depredations, until the king consented to give his daughter in marriage to one of them, and threatening if he withheld his consent to carry off the princess. The king was compelled to yield, but coupled his consent with the condition that the pretender to his daughter's hand should kill a fierce Lion that guarded one of the gates of the palace. The princes attacked and slew the lion, who turned out to be a prince metamorphosed. They carried off part of the tail as a trophy. The washerman of the palace finding the head, produced it as evidence that he had killed the lion, and claimed the princess. Preparations were made for the wedding, when the princes discovered themselves, and the washerman was put to death. The princess was married to the younger brother, Chitrasekhara.

After a time, a bird-catcher brought a curious parrot from Cashmir which was purchased by the princes, and told them, that it alone had escaped the destruction of all living things at Hemavati, which were devoured by a giant in resentment of the king Verasena's refusing to give him the hand of the princess Suvernadevi. The princess was kept captive by the giant. Somasekhara undertook to set her at liberty, and departed alone, giving his brother a flower, the withering of which would indicate his falling into some calamity, when his brother Chitrasekhara might come to aid or revenge him. On arriving at Hemavati, he made himself known to the princess, married her, slew the giant, and induced people to return to the country over which he ruled as king.

On one occasion Suvernadevi having dropped her slipper in a reservoir, it was found by a fisherman of Kusumakesari, who sold it to a shopkeeper, by whom it was presented to the king Ugrabāhu. The prince on seeing the beauty of the slipper, fell in love with the wearer, and offered large rewards to any person who should find and bring her to him. An old woman undertook the task, and succeeded in tracing the shoe to its owner, to whom she introduced herself, and made herself agreeable. Finding out that Chitrasekhara owed his personal immunity from danger to a charmed ear-ring, she contrived to steal it from him whilst asleep, defaced the impression of Siva which it bore, and threw it into the fire, on which Chitrasekhara became as dead.

Suvernadevi would have slain herself, but was prevented by the Crone, who to console her, promised to get her another husband in Ugrabāhu, and this proposal, as holding out the prospect of revenge, was seemingly assented to by the widow. She set out for the capital of Ugrabáhu, shutting up her husband's corpse in a chamber, and leaving with it a written note to Chitrasekhara, informing him what had chanced, and whither she was gone, and promising to wait a month for his arrival, at the end of which term she would put an end to her life.

The wife of Chitrasekhara at the time of her brother-in-law's decease was apprised of the event by the decay and death of the flower. As soon as this was known to her husband, he set off for Hemavati. On his way he met a monkey, who in his gambols plunged into a pool and came out a man, and a little further on leaped into another pool, and issued a monkey as before. Some of the water productive of these changes was taken by Chitrasekhara, and carried with him.

On arriving at the place where his dead brother lay, and reading the note which Suvernadevi had left, Chitrasekhara searched for the charmed Ear-ring, which he found defaced and injured, but not wholly destroyed, on which account the body of Somasekhara had so long resisted decay. Chitrasekhara set himself to work to repair the ear-ring, and as soon as it was restored to its former condition, Somasekhara revived. The brothers after communicating to each other, what had passed, proceeded to Kusumakesari to release Suvernadevi and punish Ugrabáhu. For the readier accomplishment of these ends, Chitrasekhara assumed the garb of a religious mendicant, and changed his brother to a monkey with some of the water of the pool that produced this metamorphosis.

The Brothers thus disguised appeared before the king, to whom Chitrasekhara represented himself as a magician, and at whose request he undertook to win the consent of Suvernadevi to become his bride without delay. Having then made himself known to Suvernadevi, and restored his brother to the human form, they devised the plan to be adopted, and Suvernadevi gave a seeming assent to be married to Ugrabáhu—a new mansion was prepared for the purpose, to which Ugrabáhu repaired to be wedded by the supposed ascetic to the princess—but on his entering the private chamber, Chitrasekhara sprinkled him with the magic water, and he was changed to a monkey. Chitrasekhara going forth, produced a written order from the king, that he should be his deputy for some months in the administration of the kingdom, in which the officers of the Court acquiesced. The princes then wrote to their father-in-law Vikrama, to come to their aid, with a sufficient force, with which he complied, and their authority was thus established over the kingdom of Ugrabáhu, who in his form of a monkey was sold to a beggar, and compelled to perform tricks for his master's benefit. After settling their new acquisitions, Somasekhara and Chitrasekhara with their wives Suvernadevi and Rupávatí and the father of the latter, paid their own parents a visit, much to their astonishment and delight. After a due period of power and prosperity, the different princes were admitted to the heaven of Siva.

a. paper—b. palm leaves—c. do.—d. do.

Story of Karibhanta, son of Márabhupa king of Dhár, who was invited by Velála Ráya to come and marry his daughter. On his way through the pass called Karibhanta Kamava, a bird with golden plumage led him to where he met Pundarikákshi, a maiden of the race of ogres, who had been promised a youthful and handsome husband by Párvati when about to destroy herself in despair at being forced by her mother to marry Bomma Rákshasa, her brother. The young couple repaired to Pundarikákshi's bower, where the Ogress her mother smelt a man, and thus discovered Karibhanta—a contest ensued, in which the human hero subdued both the old Ogress and her brother, and was only prevented from killing them by the intercession of his bride. The parties were then seemingly reconciled, and the mother presented her son-in-law with a handsome anclet. Pundarikákshi however suspecting mischief removed this secretly from her husband's leg, and fastened it in the night on that of her uncle. The Ogress, when she thought all were asleep, proceeded in the dark to stab Karibhanta as he slept, ascertaining his identity as she supposed by the anclet, in consequence of which she killed her brother instead. Pundarikákshi knowing that her mother's animosity would be now inflamed by revenge, prevailed on her husband to continue his journey, which he did and proceeded to Karur. When the Ogress discovered what she had done, she vowed to pursue Karibhanta through earth, heaven and hell, and disguising herself as a woman with a child at her back, she went to Karur, where in high market she beheld Karibhanta, and claimed him as her husband, accusing him of having abandoned her and her child. The matter was referred to arbitration. Karibhanta insisted that his life was in danger in the company of the Ogress, but the arbitrators, seven in number, thinking this only mockery, decided against him, and shut him up in a chamber with his wife, promising if any harm happened to him, they would give up their lives. In the morning Karibhanta was found dead; on hearing of which Pundarikákshi, the mother of Karibhanta, and his intended bride, the daughter of Velála Ráya, all hastened to Karur to perish with the body : a funeral pile was prepared accordingly in which the seven judges, Pundarikákshi and the mother of the hero, successively perished. When the princess was about to follow them, she repeated an invocation to Siva, who immediately appeared to her, and promised to grant her any boon she might solicit. She requested that her husband and the rest might be restored to life, which accordingly came to pass, and Karibhanta returned with his two brides, and his mother to his paternal kingdom, over which he reigned long and happily.

CANARA BOOKS.

The manuscripts of this language are written on Kadettums of which the following particular and accurate description is given by Col. Wilkes.

Cudduttum, curruttum, or currut, a long slip of cotton cloth, from eight inches to a foot wide, and from twelve to eighteen feet long, skilfully covered on each side with a compost of paste and powdered charcoal. When perfectly dry, it is neatly folded up, without cutting, in leaves of equal dimensions; to the two end folds are fixed ornamented plates of wood, painted and varnished, resembling the sides of a book, and the whole is put into a case of silk or cotton, or tied with a tape or ribbon; those in use with the lower classes are destitute of these ornaments, and are tied up by a common string: the book, of course, opens at either side, and if unfolded and drawn out, is still a long slip of the original length of the cloth. The writing is similar to that on a slate, and may be in like manner rubbed out and renewed. It is performed by a pencil of the balapum, or lapis ollaris; and this mode of writing was not only in ancient use for records and public documents, but is still universally employed in Mysoor by merchants and shopkeepers. I have even seen a bond, regularly witnessed, entered on the cudduttum of a merchant, produced and received in evidence.

This is the word kirret, translated (of course conjecturally) palm-leaves in Mr. Crisp's translation of Tippoo's regulations. The Sultann prohibited its use in recording the public accounts: but although liable to be expunged, and affording facility to fraudulent entries, it is a much more durable material and record than the best writing on the best paper, or any other substance used in India, copper and stone alone excepted. It is probable that this is the linen or cotton cloth described by Arrian from Nearchus, on which the Indians wrote.—Vincent's Nearchus, p. 15. Ar. 717.

MALAYALAM BOOKS.

Kerala Utpatti.

Palm leaves.

A general account of the province of Kerala or Malabar, giving a description of its origin, and a summary history from the time of Parasu Ráma by whom, it is supposed, the province was obtained from the sea, to the reign of the Oheruman Perumal who adopted the Mohammedan religion. The greater part of the work is however a statistical description of the divisions of the province, and the institutes that prevail amongst the Nairs. The composition is ascribed to Sankara áchárya and the original of some portion of it may have been his work, but a great part is of a much more recent period as it notices even the coming of the Portuguese. Some use was made of the Kerala Utpatti by Mr. Duncan in his account of Malabar (Asiatic Researches, Vol. V, article 1) although he speaks of it as not a little confused and incoherent. Amongst Col. Mackenzie's papers are two incomplete translations of it, from which it would seem probable that copies vary considerably, the translations offering many irreconcilable variations. The following specimens will convey a notion of this work.

To thee Oh Ganapati !—to Saravati !—to Krishna !—to Srí Parvati !—Srí Bhagavati !—to Srí Bhadrakáli !—to Ayapen !—and to Arumukan ! be prostration—and also to thee O Guru ! be submission profound !—

1. Now I begin to declare the intention of this work.

2. In the Krita, Treta, Dwápara, and Kali, in all these Four Yugams were many Rajas who ruled the earth properly, with equity (or with a regard to justice and to the public good.)

3. Afterwards wicked Rajas arose in the Kshetriya Tribe, and in order to destroy them Srî Parasu Râma was incarnated.

4. Wherefore Parasu Râma in ancient times, in twenty-one different battles destroyed the crowned Rajas.

5. On that account, that he might be released from the Vîra Hatya Dosham or sin of slaying heroes, he went to Gokarnam in order to perform sacrifices.

6. He stood on the hill of Kal-malla and prostrated himself to Varuna. He also made his obeisance to Bhumî Devi, the ocean he made to withdraw, and the land of one hundred and sixty Kadams was created.

7. And that the land of Malayalam might receive protection, he established one hundred and eight Iswars.

8. But the trembling of the land did not cease; therefore Srî Parasu Râma in Kerala created Bramins, and brought Bramins from many points and placed them in Keralam. But they would not stay there always, and they all went away to their own countries.

9. The cause of this was, that into Keralam the snakes came in numbers, and remained, and thro' fear of their venom no one could remain there with confidence.

10. Therefore Srî Parasu Râma having considered from the Uttara Bhûmî (or land of the north) he brought the Arya Bramins and settled (or placed) them there.

11. These Arya Bramins formerly set out from the saints of Ahi and came and resided in the Kshetram of Samanta Panchakam, otherwise called Kuru-Kshetram; from thence Srî Parasu Râma brought the inhabitants of the sixty-four villages and settled them in this foreign land.

12. He promised to grant to each an Agaram and a Gramam, and having told them thus, he brought them and placed them first at Gokarnam, and made them wear the lock of hair on the forehead.

13. For the Pûrva-Sikha (or fore lock) is very disgraceful in foreign lands, and by their using the forelock, he considered that if they went away, their tribe would not receive them; he therefore made them wear the lock on the forepart of the head.

14. "Enjoy the land as a Brahmana-kshetram" he said, and then to the people of the 64 villages he presented flowers and water.

15. Afterwards he established places of 48 feet square, and then he strewed gold dust and stamped coin, and thus he stopt the quaking of the land.

16. Afterwards he said to the people of the 64 villages—"Do you want weapons—Receive them from me"—Those of the Bharadwaja Gotram then received arms from Ráma.

17. Then Srī Parasu Ráma granted the Sastra Bhiksha (or alms of weapons) with the consent of all, and the Bharadwaja Gotram having presented their hands accepted the weapons.

18. For that reason those of Valiúr assert, that they require no other authority to put people to death—some think this power results from their Tapas-Sakti or virtue of their devotion—but it is not so—and they themselves assert it is because the people of their tribe then received the Sastra Bhiksha, and took the Vál into their hands : hence they are denominated Vál-Nambí or trusting in swords.

19. All this being done by the order of Srī Parasu Ráma, he sent for the 64 villages and commanded "You are to give one share out of the property of the Bramins to the serpents, which lately terrified you (and who are to be considered as local deities) and to protect you : accordingly every one granted each one share from their lot and acquired their favor, and afterwards they (the snakes) remained as the local deities and the fear of snakes thus ceased in Keralam.

20. He afterwards made or established 108 places of 42 feet square and in each of these places he placed an image of the gods who preside over arms and arts and then lamps were ordained, and Púja was performed.

21. He also established 108 images of Durga Deví, on the sea shore, and besides erected a snake and Goblin.

22. He sprinkled the gold dust and coined money and formed a buried treasure.

23. In this manner having stopped the quaking of the land, the Arya Bramins continued to reside with constancy in Malayalam. This being heard by those that went away at first, they returned again, and these are called the Pallan-Tuluvar (or the ancient Tuluvar) ; but having originally come from different quarters and of different tribes the Pallan Tulavar still use different languages.

24. Afterwards Srī Parasu Ráma assembled the sixty-four villages and established them at Vallapa Nát Karra near Palahad.

25. Afterwards to some of those who returned again he granted the duty of menial service in temples ; to the people Tarana Nellur in the village of the 64 Gramams he granted the duty of holding a cup at certain ceremonies, and to some he granted the Puránas but the people of the 64 Gramams have no menial offices.

26. The gift with water and flowers which was given at first to the Arya Bramins is called the Raja-Amsa (or share of the Raja) and what was given to those who returned the second time is called the Anu-Bhogapen Jenmam (or right of enjoying hereditary property.)

27. The rights which were granted at first to the Taravadu (or chief householder) of each village by Ek-Udakam (one water poured out for one grant) to the Gramams (or villages.) When two Anneyuncyam or opponents in disputes of litigated property are to perform the ceremony of ordeal, they must in that case declare it to be Anu-Bhogam, right by succession but the inhabitants of the other villages on swearing must declare their right of Jenmam right by birth. Of the Ek-Udakam, or those who received by water, there are but few and if any of them swear (or dip) to the Jenmam, it will affect or destroy their claim. In the Gramams there are not many Taranmar (or people acquainted with the particulars of the subjects) and very few know it; in consequence of which the authority and influence of the Smartanmar the Bramhmans who follow law, as expounders, is considerably diminished.

28. Afterwards Srī Parasu Rāma transferred his Vīra-Hatya-Dosham (or sin of manslaughter) to the inhabitants of Ramnad-karra and granted to them considerable gifts of lands or property: he also named them Warala Parasu, and afterwards they all went to their quarters, and there remained. Hence in Vallapa-Nad there is no Gramam without property and houses.

29. In this manner Srī-Parasu-Rāma having established the Kerala country and granted the Udaka-Dānam (or gift with water) to the Bramins of the 64 villages and committed them to the protection of Devendra, he afterwards went to the forests to perform Tapas.

30. That the Jennungul (or people) of Keralam should be in equal felicity with the inhabitants of Deva-Lokam, and that Keralam should be equal to Deva-Lokam, Srī-Parasu Rāma on due consideration committed them to the care and protection of Devendra.

31. Rain was required for six months, that abundance of corn, of fruits, &c., might be produced in the Rājyam and of Annam (or rice) of Pushpam (or flowers) and of Nir (or water); that piety should flourish and wealth should be obtained, by which Iswar should be served and honored and Pūja performed with due respect in honor of the gods and to the ancestors, and that cows should increase; for all this that there should be abundance of water and grass; having well thought of all these, he committed them to Devendra, by which rain falls for six months, and afterwards is six months of Vennul (or hot weather.) Thus he ordained, and for this reason he ordered the sunny season for six months, in order that all the under-mentioned ceremonies might be performed in honor of the gods of heaven, of Kavu (or temples of the secondary deities) of Ayapen-Kavu (the temple of Hari Hara-Putren), of Bhadra-kali-Vattam, (the temple of Bhadra-kāli), of Ganapati-kavu (or the temple of Ganaputty.)

32. The Names of the different Vala (or ceremonies).

Wutu,—Offerings of food.

Pātu,—Singing hymns while this ceremony is performing.

Utsavam,—The grand ceremonies.

Vala,—The lesser ceremonies.

Vellaku,—Lamp illuminations of the temple.

Tiyatu,—Ceremony of running over fire.

Barnani Val,—Ceremony performed in the month of Kumbam under the Star Bharani.

Arattu,—Carrying the god in procession to a tank, and performing ablutions to it.

Calaiyattam,—Ceremony of singing and dancing performed by women in honor of the goddess Bhagavati.

Purem Vala,—Ceremony performed in the month of Kumbam under the star Pura the anniversary of the death of Kama (or Cupid.)

Daiva-Matam,—Wherein a man disguises himself like the god and dances.

Tanir Amortu,—Offering of cakes, &c., to the god.

Tala-Puli,—Ceremony of women carrying raw rice and flowers round the temple.

Vaya-Visakham,—The 28 days ceremony in the month of Vyasi at the temple of Terucharikonam.

Mamaga-Val,—The grand festival of 28 days celebrated once in 12 years, when Jupiter enters Cancer.

That all these ceremonies might be performed he ordered that there should be six months bright sunny weather.

33. Thus in the land created by Sri Parasu-Rāma, the Brahmans should all bathe at dawn of day, and live virtuously, performing religious duties, worship and offerings of rice to the elements at the Kshetrams or holy places and Kavus (or lesser temples) and that the sorrow and sickness which are incidental to mankind, might be removed from the people they were to cause to be performed Iswara-Seva-kul (or worship to god) by.—

Homam,—Fire offering.

Dhyānam,—Meditation on the deity.

Bhagavati Seva,—Devotion to the goddess Bhagavati.

Pushpānjali,—Worship with flowers.

Andi-Namaskaram,—Prostration in the evening.

Teru-kala Puja,—Worship at dawn, noon, and sunset.

Ganapati Homam,—Fire sacrifice to Ganapati.

Mruten-Japam,—Prayer or Invocation in the name of Mrityu (or death) to avert accidents.

Munu Laksha Sahasra Namam,—The ceremony of repeating of the 1000 names of Iswar three lacs of times.

Brahmana Sahasra Bhojanam,—Distribution of victuals daily to a thousand Bramins.

Maha-Mruten Japam,—Prayer to Mrityu.

34. Thus many rites, were ordained, and that nothing might prevent the performance of their own ceremonies the Deva-Bramhanar received the land from the Arddha-Bramhanar according to the orders of Sri Parasu Rāma.

35. Upon which they divided that Land into different Desams (or Cantons) in their names, to which Desams they gave different names, and in each they erected a Kshetram (or temple) and consecrated it and placed an image in them, and performed Puja with lamps, and adorned the whole with garlands, and they placed the protecting deities or Sthana-Devam, Dharma-Devam, and Sthala-Para-Devata in their houses, and performed worship to them ; also they established Urpalli Devi in their own Desams, and performed the prescribed ceremonies.

36. They also established Adama (or bondage) and Kuddema (or husbandry) and protected the Adiar (or slaves) and Koddia (or husbandmen) and appointed Tara (or villages) and Tara-vaatu-kar (or heads of villages) and by their means took the duties of Kanna,—Kye,—Kalpana—Avahasam. And protected and preserved them from lessening and falling.

37. They then established the privileges of their respective stations, to the Kuddia, the Kilykur (or state of inferiors) ; and to themselves (the Taravatukār) the Mailaykur (or state of superiors) ; to the Kuddia the Kanam or custom of taking Lands on lease, and to themselves the Jenmam or privilege of holding lands in property.

38. In this manner they established and continued the custom of Kanam and Jenmam ; and erected Houses for the Bramins in each village, who then resided in the Gramams and performed their religious duties or Deva Puja, and also their Pitri-Puja ; and with the Bramins of the 64 Gramams the Arddha-Bramhanar are remaining.

39. The origin of the name of Arddha-Bramhanar is because they received land from Sri-Parasu-Rāma, one-half of their braminhood was diminished, on which account they are called Arddha-Bramhanar (or half Bramins.)

40. The distinction of Veda-Bramhanar arises from their study of the Vedams, and Sāstrams, and they have four Vedams and six Sastrams—hence they are denominated Veda-Bramhanar.

41. The Vāl-Nambi and Pattana-Nambi are both Arddha-Bramhanar. To the first were assigned the duties of—Ayudah Panikul,—Bearers of weapons, or arms.

Pada-Nadaka,—Collecting.

Pada-budaka,—Going to Battle.

Rajkur-mar Mumpil, Agumpadi nadakuka,—Escorting the Rajah.

From their performing these duties they obtained the name of Vál-nambi or Swordsmen.

42. To the Pattana-Nambi was assigned the Sunkha (or shell) and Kuda (or Umbrella). If in the execution of their duty any person offer them up to death or treat them with contempt, they are not to resist, and in these cases they are only to blow the shell and remain without food ; hence their name Pattana Nambi.

43. In this manner when sixty-four Gramams and twenty-one Desams were established, the sixty-four Gramams assembled and ordained or fixed that a Baksha Purusha should be elected once in three years in order to punish and protect.

44. There were also appointed Nál-Kullakams (or Four Courts or Assemblies) at

1. Punniur ; 2, Pruvu ; 3, Chenganiur ; and, 4, Parum Chellur.

In this manner there are four.

45. In order to appoint, if these four Kullakams agree or concur in the election it is sufficient ; so they settled.

46. But some say that of these the Chenganiur Kullakam, is not included in the sixty-four Gramams ; but they who say so are not well informed.—The cause of their saying so is this.

47. The people of Chenganiur-Gramam assembled and received the Kshetra-samandam (or management of the holy places) from the sixty-four.

48. Afterwards numbers of Tamuller came thither and between the Tamuller Bramins who came, and the Brahmanar who were already residing there, arose disputes about the ceremony of burning a dead body—Upon which all the Tamuller assembled, consulted together, and took the people of that place, with the sixty-four who granted the Kshetra-samandam and pulled away the dead Corpse and threw it into the River—this was done by the people of Chenganiur Gramam and therefore some say they are not included in the 64 Gramams. But how they became Tamullar and what the truth was ? and how the Brahma-Hatya which had been incurred, was cleared from them ? Iswar only knows.

49. Besides the said four Kulakams that were established, were four Verna Kulakams or assemblies of the representatives of the four Castes.

1. Irungn'yani-Koda is the Bramhana Kulakam.

2. Muly-Kolam is the Kshetriya Kulakam.

3. Paravur is the Vaisya Kulakam.

4. Ayerani-Kolam is the Sudra Kulakam.

In this manner there are four Verna-Kulakams or assemblies or courts representing the four castes.

59. When they made oath and accepted the weapons they took the oath at ten places, viz. :—

- | | |
|----------------------------|---|
| 1. Gokarnam, | 6. Munatur Rallinikel, |
| 2. Terusiva Parur, | 7. Kudal-manika Tenda Nadayel, |
| 3. Teru-navayel, | 8. Teruvanji kolam, |
| 4. Teru-kana-vayel, | 9. Teru-vyerani-kolam, |
| 5. Teru-kariur, | 10. Vullapa nát-kura or Teruvalatur. |

In this manner they made oath and took weapons at these ten places.

60. And the 64 Gramams assembled, in order to perform religious duties at regular times, took an oath at the ten places following, viz. :—

- | | |
|-----------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| 1. Gokamam, | 6. Mannam, |
| 2. Teru Siva Parur, | 7. Mánikam, |
| 3. Parichodu Teru navayet, | 8. Munja kulam. |
| 4. Teru-kana, | 9. Allakodu Ayerani kullam, |
| 5. Kartur, | 10. Nella Vullapa nad. |

At these ten places they made oath.

61. Haste Ho! The Bramins of Keralam that they might perform their religious duties and that their ceremonies might be protected in Malayalam which was created by Parasu Ram, there were four provincial divisions made, viz :—

1. South of Gokarnam and north of the Parum river in Tulu Nad was the Tuluva Rajyam.

2. South of the Parum river in Tulu Nad and north of Pudu Patnam was called the Kuva-Rajyam.

3. To the south of Pudu Patnam and north of Kannati was called Keralam.

4. To the south of Kannati and north of Kanya Kumari was called the Mushika Rajyam.

62. Parasu Ráma to remove the Vira-Hatya Dosham (or sin of slaughtering men) having now brought many Bramhanar and placed them in the four Kandams, and established the Brahmswam (or property of the Bramins) suspected that they would go away on account of the trouble of the serpents ; and Sri Parasu Rama being grieved in his mind, called the eight chief snakes together with Anandon, &c., and prayed to them, saying " Trouble " not the Brahmanar whom I with great difficulty have brought and placed " here.—You must reside one in each different Kshetram and remain on " one side, and preserve the offspring and houses of the Brahmanar who " will also protect you"—Thus he said and received their consent.

63. While it was so in Arya-Vartam, the Ayra-kurra Bramhanar and a great concourse of people having assembled at Kuru Kshetram, Sri Parasu Ramen having heard thereof, he immediately went thither, and paid his respects to the Bramins and thus said :—

64. "I have established Keralam in order to grant it as a gift to you ;
" therefore you must come to reside there and perform the different duties
" of religion by which I hope or desire to obtain salvation."

65. At that time the people of the sixty-four Gramams assembled together, were composed of fourteen Gotrams (or tribes) ; and they had the three Vedams, and he brought them all to Malayalam and granted the land in gift as a Brahma-swam (or property to the Bramins). Afterwards he granted Dipam (or lamps) to avert the malediction that he had incurred.

66. At another time when he was considering and suspecting that the sin of the slaughter of heroes was not yet fully propitiated or released, he acquainted certain Bramhanar thereof, and granted them gifts of one share as a Brahmaswam (or property to the Bramins) and because they held up their hands and received that Dosham (or sin) they were called Wurala Purusha, on which account they with the remaining people do not perform the Jnāti-kāryam (or rite of betrothing) together.

67. The sixty-four villages assembled, considered as follows " which is the best way for us to preserve this Rajyam ?"—thus they considered—the sixty-four Gramams then assembled resolved " We should appoint a protector amongst us," which they did accordingly, and appointed that the person they elected should reside at Teruvunji Kollam to govern the sixty-four Gramams ; and that after three years pass the sixty-four Gramams should assemble again at Teruvunji Kollam, and change the person, and appoint another in his place for other three years, and thus they ordained.

68. It passed thus for a considerable time, when they found they had no truth, the sixty-four Gramams assembled ordered that from the Nāl-kulakams, or

1, Parum Chellur ; 2, Panniur ; 3, Chenganiur, and 4, Paruvur.

From each of these four places they should take one person, and place them along with him (the Raksha Purusha) in the management of affairs—so they ordered and appointed one person from each of the four Gramams, who were called Avaroda-Nambi and they ordered that after three years were passed again they should change and appoint others—thus they ordered. Among these Ava-rodanmar, no married men could officiate.

69. In this manner having ordered, it afterwards for a long time so passed, and even these, it was found, had no truth in them, and they became arrogant and tyrannical in their duties of punishing and protecting, therefore the sixty-four Gramams assembled, consulted ' If we procure not a king of the Kshetriya race to rule this Rajyam it will not do."

70. And having accordingly determined they afterwards gathered together, and went, to a Para Desam (or foreign country), brought a king, erected a great palace at Kodangalur, and performed the ceremony of Installation of the Raja to Ocharumán Parumál as sovereign, in order to preserve and punish. They also then ordained that the Pennu (or girls) that were born there to him should be taken by the Brahmanar in Viváham (or marriage.)

71. In this manner it passed, but after a long time they found that injustice prevailed instead of protection. Wherefore the sixty-four Gramams assembled declared "In future let us know the protection and punishment," and they also ordered and appointed one Talliadrimar from each of the four assemblies; and to each they assigned a Kshetram (or house) at Kodangal-lur, and placed them there; besides they ordered that no act of Government should be done without their knowledge; but no married person was to be employed in that office.

72. The Kshetriya who was brought at that time was named Ocharumán Parumál. The Raja in Chola Mandalám was Ohola Parumál and the Raja in Pandya Mandalám was Pandya-Parumál. From being the first that was brought into Keralam he was also called Kerala Raja.

73. In Keralam there are eleven An-Acharams, but in the foreign countries there are twenty-two An-Acharams.

74. When the Brahmanar had brought the Raja, and were installing him, they (the Bramins) held his hand and made the following agreement: That which we cannot do, you must perform, and protect us. The Raja must not object to the interference of the Brahmans in the management of the State, nor judge of any complaint of which they may judge, or in which they are parties. At least not in Kerala, in other countries the Raja will settle every thing.

75. Having made known all these, they assigned lands to the Raja and to the Bramins of the fourteen Gotrams who came from Ahi-kshetram and they poured water, and granted that land which is called Viruti and was the Royal demesne, some countries they granted to him and some to the Bramins themselves, and some as benefices of temples to be enjoyed in Keralam.

76. In this manner was the Mana-nád governed for a short time; then they, (the Bramins) considered how to prevent the Rajas from getting too great strength or power, and they divided this Keralam of one hundred and sixty Kádams extent and formed it into seventeen Náds and eighteen Kandams in which the Raja-Karyam (or affairs of the Raja) were to be conducted by an assembly and council, and without neglecting this the Raja was not to consult and determine at his pleasure. Therefore the sixty-four Gramams assembled, consulted and besides the aforementioned four Kulakams they appointed three other Kulakams inferior to the four Gramams in order to transact the Nitya-Karyam or daily business along with the Raja—there were besides Paruvur above-mentioned the following, viz :—

1. Ayerani-Kolam; 2, Muli Kolam; 3, Irungu'yáni-koda.

Thus they ordered and directed that the Parum-kovilakum (or palace) at Kodangalur-Gramam should be the residence of the Raja, and near that place four Taly (or houses) for the residence of the chiefs of the four councils were erected, viz :—

1. Mail-Taly ; 2. Kil-Taly ; 3. Nadeya-Taly ; 4. Chengapuram.

In this manner in these four Taly they were residing, and ruled by the title of Talayadri-mar.

1. The Kil-Taly belonged to Ayerani kolam.
2. Chengapur belonged to Irungn'yani koda.
3. The Nadeya-Taly belonged to Paruvur.
4. The Mail-Taly belonged to Muly-kolam.

In this manner there were four Tala.

77. As at Panniur, Parum Chellur, and Chenganiur, they all resided at a distance ; therefore, the four Kulakams were established near Paruvur, in the time of Parumál, viz. :—

1. Ayerani-kolam ; 2. Muly-kolam ; 3. Irungn'yani-koda, together with Paruvur.

The other Kulakams had been established in the time of Parasu-Ráma.

78. Their written Titu (or decrees) were to be called the Talayadri Titu.

79. There were also chiefs of the following places who assisted the Raja.

- | | |
|----------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| 1. Karingumpali Soruvam , | 3. Yelumpara-kota-Soruvam . |
| 2. Kárimukal-Soruvam . | 4. Chinnani-kotatu-Soruvam . |

80. The Taly-adris in these Soruvams being inferior Talyadris, they did not give the sixth in Mana nád to the Raja but only granted the Viruti. The Shat-Bhágam (or sixth share) from the lands of all was enjoyed by the Raksha-Purushumars ; but that sixth share was a second time enjoyed by the Talliyadrimar. The same sixth share is at present enjoyed by the Kshetriya. Thus the Raja and Taliadrimar governed for sometime.

81. Afterwards when the Kali-Yug advanced the 32 villages north of the Parum Pula and the thirty-two on the south of it were separated from the custom of betrothing and intermarrying.

Here follow the Names.

106. Besides—The Tulu Nambikal of Tulu-nád (or those who went away to Pancha-Dravida and came back again) were then called Palum-Tuluvar ; but now they are called Tula-náta-Tula-Nambikal. Having come from different Gramams and formed different Gramams here, each was denominated by a distinct name, and they assert it as a fact that they were included in the thirty-two.

107. Some time afterwards when a little was past of the Kali-Yugam, the Boudenmar came and saw Parumál, and explained to him the Prámányam (doctrines or principles) of the Bauddha-Sástram and they persuaded Parumál that this was the true faith, and the Parumál of that time accepted of the Bauddha-Mayam and that Parumál told the Mana-nád (or Malayalam) to follow that way. At which time on hearing what was said, all the senses of the Bramins, were confounded or lost: they all went to Teru-Káriur and there remained together, and there preserved the Valeya-Purusha (respectable men, the Ancients or Elders) of the Gramams. They were obliged to serve under different people to obtain a livelihood, and at that time not being able to prevent pollution and preserve their purity, they were grieved.

108. Then by the favor of Iswar, a Maha-Rishi (or Great Sage) came thither, whose name was Jangaman; and the whole of the Bramins who were there, assembled together, and declared their Sankatam (or trouble) to the Maha-Rishi when the Maha-Rishi answered, "I shall whisper you a Prayaschitam (or form of purification) to expiate the sin of pollution which arises in your cooking places; for which purpose after sunset you should place lamps, and the Bramins should make the Pradakshinam round the lamps, dressed in the Táru, tying Máilmundu over it and putting on the Pavitrám (or ring on the fourth finger) holding the Karam-dulu (a kind of grass) and in that place, you are to worship, and believe that to be the true-religion of Siva.

109. He then recited to them a Gánam (or Hymn) which is the principal Mantram in the Sám-Vedam, and which Gánam consisted of four Pádams; and he said. "If you perform worship in this manner you will be released from your troubles."

110. The Maha-Rishi also said. "The cause of this calamity happening to you is, because into the Rajya granted by Parasu Ram you brought a Kshetriya, who was his enemy; and made him a Raja; this loss of his favor has happened to you. In future you are to be slaves and to pay them (the Pauddanmar) Acharam (or submission) and Ocharam (or respect) and then their generation and power will decrease." In this manner did the Jangama-Maha-Rishi make known, and then disappeared.

111. According to these directions the Bramins prayed; and while they were staying at Teru-Káriur six Sástris came from Para-desam whose names were.—

1. Batten Narainen.
2. Batten Vasudeven.
3. Batten Mayuren.

4. Batten Kumáren.
5. Batten Vijayen.
6. Batten Vánen.

In this manner were 6 Sástris.

112. The Disciples of Buddha-Muni were four viz. :—

1. Vybhāshikam ; 2, Madhyāmikam ; 3, Yogi-Acharien, and 4, Saw-trantikam.

In this manner were four Disciples.

And many inferior castes came from foreign countries, viz :—

1. Aatuvidi,—An inferior tribe of cultivators.
2. Kody-patam,—Fishmongers and salt manufacturers.
3. Andalam,—Cultivators.
4. Chati,—Merchants.
5. Konkanien,—Natives of Conkan.
6. Naikunmar,—Tauk-diggers.
7. Mainayen,—Cultivators.
8. Shoraken,—Barbers.
9. Mugradāri.
10. Pandien,—Natives of Pandia Desam or Madura, &c.
11. Kosaven,—Potters.
12. Arien,—Beggars.
13. Ohuden,—A low caste of cultivators.
14. Yonaken,—Arabs, Labbis, Moplis.
15. Nasrani,—Nazarenes or Christians of St. Thomas.
16. Sikaven,—Unknown.
17. Chaleyen,—Weavers.
18. Dipa Mandan,—Unknown.

Thus these were Jádikal (or castes) of Tamular who came to Malayalam. They are Hina Jádi (or out castes) and are called the eighteen tribes of foreigners. Water, butter and milk ought not to be received from them ; and concubinage ought not to be formed.

113. If the undermentioned castes meet a Bramin they should perform the Chemmurti.

1. Kanesan,—Astrologers.
2. Koravan,—Thieves, Mat-weavers, Fortune-tellers or Indian Gypsies.
3. Kueavan,—Potters.
4. Palur,—Snake inspired.
5. Pánen,—Makers of Umbrellas.

In this manner are five castes (Anji Jāti.)

114. All the books that were composed by Buddhachari, were laid in the middle yard of the Batta-Manna (or house) and burnt, but among these, three books were not burnt, viz :—

1. The Amara Simham ; 2, Dharam Kirti ; 3, Ashtanga Hridayem.

Thus were three saved ; of these the Ashtanga Hridayem is not read by the Bramins, because it contains surgery.

115. While they were without reading it, in that time a Bramin came from Para-Desam whose name was Vykaden, who read it. From him eighteen Bramins of Para Desam learned it, who came to Malayalam, but because they drank of Muteya (or Toddy) mixed as Aushadham (or Medicine) and exercised the Art of Sástra Kriya (or Surgery) therefore the Bramins ordered that they were not to be admitted into the Pandi-Bhojanam (or line of Bramins eating together.) These are called the eighteen Mutanmar.

116. To them the Nambi-Kuru of the Kulakams granted the Adhikári Sthanam or sole Administration of the following Kshetrams.

- | | |
|----------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. Yellankalur , | 7. Tanalur , |
| 2. Chembaka-chari , | 8. Teru-Nalur , |
| 3. Kalpulah , | 9. Kon'yur . |
| 4. Wulapa-Mannu , | 10. Kirung-nád , |
| 5. Wypura , | 11. Yedámana , |
| 6. Kunur-kotam , | 12. Jaya-chari , |

These twelve form the Avaroda-Nambi-Curu (or Council) of Teru-Kuna-Puli-Kshetram.

117. When the Adi-yentram (or Council) assembles, these Kshetrams should furnish the curtains which surround the Tika (or southern) Vadul-Módum and the Vadaka (or northern) Vádul-Mádam, or Mantapams at the gates.

(Here follow the articles to be provided by other places.)

120. The names of the 6 Sástris who came from Para Desam were formerly mentioned. Those Sástris and the Bramins having met together went and saw the King who had lost the true way, and said "Ho ! O ! King ! Why did you commit this fault ?" After they had asked him this, Parumál answered : "This alone is the truth:" then the Sástris said "If so ; We and these Baudamar shall dispute ; should we lose, you may cut out our tongues and banish us from the country. Should the Baudamar lose, you should cut out their tongues and banish them from the Nád." So they agreed ; they then began to dispute with the Baudamar, whose doctrine was proved to be false, and their tongues were cut out, and they were banished out of the land ; and it was ordered, that in future if any Baudamar came back to dispute, the Raja should not again desire them to dispute with the Vedantis, but punish them : they took an oath to this purport from Parumál whom they then established.

Afterwards they granted a separate Estate to the apostate Parumal and kept him separate. That Parumál's name who was set aside was called Palli-Mánur who on another Parumál being appointed in his room went to Mekka. Therefore the Boudámar say that Charuman Parumál went to Mekkam and not to Swergam (Paradise). That was not Charuman Parumál but the Kérala-Raja for after four Parumál had ruled—the fifth Raja, name Charuman Parumál ruled.

121. After the Kérala Raja who went to Mekka, Kula-Sekhara-Parumál ruled, who at the end of his reign went in his mortal body to Swergam (Heaven)*

HINDI BOOKS.

1.—Amritádhára.

An exposition of the Vedánta system of Philosophy, in fourteen chapters, taken from the Sanscrit, by Bhavánanda Dás.

2.—Chit vilás.

Paper.

A treatise on the objects and end of human existence, describing the creation of the world, the formation of the gross and subtle body and the means of acquiring emancipation. By Balirám.

3.—Jnyána Samudra.

A work of a philosophical character in the form of a dialogue between a teacher and disciple—the latter of whom enquires—Who am I—What is the world—Whose are birth and death—What is the relation between God and life, &c. ; to which the Guru replies by detailing the doctrines of the Vaishnava quietists enjoining faith and adoration as purificatory of the spirit—describing the nine kinds of faith or Bhakti, the eight exercises of Yoga or devotion—the two principles of nature Purusha and Prakriti, and the illusive effects of the latter—the organs of sense, the nature of the body and spirit, and the three conditions of existence, waking, slumbering, sleep ; with the fourth state or perfect knowledge and the means of its attainment. In five chapters, by Sundara Dás.

4.—Vijnyán vilás.

An extensive treatise on the different philosophical tenets of the Hindus, recommendatory of those of the Vedánta and of a life of asceticism in the form of a dialogue between a Guru and Sishya or spiritual preceptor and pupil. By Gangapati, dated Samvat 1775 or A. D. 1719.

5.—Yoga Vasishtha.

A work on the principles of the Vedánta philosophy, in which Ráma in conversation with Vasishtha, Viswamitra and other sages discusses the unreality of material existence, the merits of works and devotion and the supremacy of spirit. Translated from the Sanscrit, in twenty-six sections.

6.—Nrisinhopanishad.

Paper.

A translation of an Upanishad known as the Nrisinha or Nrisinha tāpaniya one of the appendices of the Atharvan Veda, in nine khandas, treating of the difference between life and spirit, the nature of Pranava or mystical syllable or Brahme—the letters of which it is composed, and the identification of the individual and universal spirit. The character of the work is as much mystical as theological, partaking rather of the Tāntrika than Vaidika system.

7.—Chhandogya Upanishad.

Paper.

A translation of the Chhandogya Upanishad of the Sāma Veda.

8.—Parsi Prakās.

A description of the Hindu and Mohammedan modes of computing months, years, the rising and setting of the sun and moon, the lunar asterisms, planetary aspects, eclipses, &c., with an explanation of the Arabic and Persian terms used in astronomy and astrology—composed by Vedānga Rāya at the command of Shah-jehan.

9.—Chhatra Prakās.

A minute account of the origin and actions of Chhatra Sal, Raja of Bundelkund, tracing his descent from the solar race of kings through the house of Ayodhya, and detailing his victories over the petty Rajas in his vicinity, and his contests and connexions with the Mogul princes Aurangzeb and Bahader Shah. In twenty-six sections by Lal Kavi. This work is a valuable accession to the original materials for a correct history of Hindustan.

10.—Kavi Priya.

a. paper—b. do.—c. do.

An extensive work on Alankāra, the rhetorical ornaments of poetical composition, in 16 books by Kesava Dās, dated Samvat 1658 or A. D. 1602. The system is taken from Sanscrit. The two introductory chapters contain the following genealogies of the patron and the poet.

- 1 Gahirwar was a prince of the solar family descended from Ráma.
- 2 Kerna his son made Benares his capital.
- 3 Arjuna Pála.
- 4 Sahan Pála.
- 5 Sahajendra.
- 6 Noniga deva.
- 7 Prithwi Rája.
- 8 Rámachandra.
- 9 Rámasinha.
- 10 Medinimalla.
- 11 Arimerddana.
- 12 Arjunadeva.
- 13 Mallakhána.
- 14 Pratáparudra.
- 15 Ranarudra, who made Orchha, his capital.
- 16 Bharatichandra.
- 17 Madhukara sahi, his brother.
- 18 Rámsáhi.
- 19 Indrajit, who made Kachhwá gerh, his capital, and patronised the poet, whose descent is traced as follows :—
 - 1 Kumbhavarā, was descended from Sanaka rishi.
 - 2 Devananda.
 - 3 Jayadeva, patronised by Prithwi Raja.
 - 4 Dinakara.
 - 5 Panditarāja, patronised by Ala ud din.
 - 6 Gadhádharma.
 - 7 Jayánanda.
 - 8 Trivikrama, patronised by the sovereign of Gopáchala.
 - 9 Bhavasermá.
 - 10 Surottama misra.
 - 11 Haranáth.
 - 12 Krishnadatta, patronised by Rudra Sinh.
 - 13 Kásináth, patronised by Madhukara Sahi.
 - 14 Kesavadás patronised by Indrajit.

If the line of princes be correctly given, it ascends to the beginning of the 13th century, but if by Prithwi Raja be meant the prince who was killed in the end of the 12th century, it can scarcely be considered as correct. The work is of interest as one of the earliest existing specimens of Hindi of defined date. Kesava Dás is the author of other works one of which the Rasik priya is dated 1648 answering to A. D. 1592.

11.—Rámachandrika.

Paper.

An abridged translation of the Rámáyana in 39 sections by Kesava Dás—see the Kavi priya.

12.—Sripála Oheritra.

Paper.

Tales of Sripála king of Malava in four Khandas or Sections.

Sect. 1. Sripála has two daughters one of whom Mayana-sundari offending him he marries her to a common leper, who turns out to be a Jaina, converts the princess to that faith, and is cured of his leprosy.

Sec. 2. Sripála subdues Dhavalesa king of Kausambi, and marries his daughter Madanamanjúshá.

Sect. 3. Sripála marries Madanarekhá, Gunasundari, Trailokya Sundari, Sringárasundari and Jayasundari princesses of different cities whose hands he wins by various devices.

Sect. 4. Sripála defeats Ajitsena king of Champa and takes the city; in the description of which the excellence of the Jain religion is expatiated upon, and its leading tenets explained and illustrated by narratives of Srikantha king of Hiranyapur—this last part is called the Navapada Mahima or excellence of the nine fundamental principles of the Jain religion. Composed by Vinaya-vijaya gani.

13.—Mánatunga Oheritra.

Paper.

Story of Mánatunga king of Avanti and Manavati his wife, who having offended him soon after their marriage is confined in a separate mansion: she makes her escape and under different disguises enjoys her husband's society, becomes pregnant, and, whilst he is absent on a visit to marry the daughter of Dalathamba king of the South, is delivered of a son : on the king's return an explanation takes place and they live happy. The work is of Jain origin, and is interspersed with discussions on that faith and the injunction of its tenets, by Mohanavijaya.

14.—Labal abab.

Paper.

A work translated from the Persian of Mohammed Haider on fortune telling, detecting thefts, discovering hidden treasure, anticipating secret purposes, &c., constituting the science called by the Arabs Remel.

The work is cited by Scott., 1. 33.—

2.—*Habib as seir.*Octavo.—Nastalik.

The third volume, incomplete, containing the history of the Moguls from Abul kasim Baber, the great-grandson of Tamerlane to Bedia al Zeman, the last of the dynasty of Timur that reigned over Khorasan, see Stewart's Catalogue, p. 4.

3.—*Tarikh Khafi khan Muntekheb al Lebab.*a. Folio. 2 volumes.—Nastalik.—

b. Do. 2 volumes.— do.

A History of Hindustan by Mohammed Hashem Khefi khan. Stewart, p. 13.

c. Octavo. 1 vol. Shekesteh amez.

This contains the portion of the work only which relates to Aurangzeb, commencing with his birth, and terminating with the last year of his reign.

d. Octavo.—Shekesteh.

A portion of the same from the commencement to the reign of Shir Shah.

4.—*Tarikh Heft kursi & Kholaset al Tawarikh.*Octavo.—Shekesteh.

The first is a history of Bijapur during seven reigns from Yusef Beg Adil Shah founder, to Ali Adil Shah, the last independent prince of the dynasty, by whose orders the work was written by Ased khan of Lar.

The second of the contents of the volume is a compendium of the History of Hindustan from the creation to the 40th year of the reign of Aurangzeb Alemgir or Hij. 1107.

The Author's name is not mentioned but he describes himself as the Translator of the Sinhasan Battisi and the story of Padmá-vati and of a Rájávali or list of Hindu kings into Persian.

5.—*Tarikh Ali Adil Shah.*Small Octavo.—Nastalik.

A History of part of the reign of Ali Adil Shah the second, and last prince but one of this dynasty: composed by his orders by Seid nur Allah.

The value of this work, and of the first tract in No. IV. will be better appreciated by the following note from Scott's History of the Dekhin.

"The history of the reigns subsequent to that of Ibrahim Adil Shah second, the Translator laments being too concise, but more detailed accounts were not to be obtained, though no enquiries have been spared in the search for them." I. p. 342.

6.—Tarikh Alem Arki Abbasi.

I vol. folio.—Suls. Ch.—

The history of Abbas the great, in two parts, the first divided into three books commencing with the genealogy of the Sefavi princes, and terminating with the thirteenth year of the reign of Shah Abbas in Hij. 1025—the second beginning with the thirty-first year of his reign and closing with his death in Hij. 1037.

The author Munshi Sekander—The first portion only is described in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 10.

7.—Tarikh Abbasi.

1 vol. Octavo.—Shekesteh.

A history of Abbas the second from his birth Hij. 1041.—To the seventh year of his reign, written by Mohammed Tahir wahid by order of the Itimad ad dowleh or prime minister.

10.—*Kitab Timuriya.*Quarto.—Nastalik.

A history of Timur Leng, from his birth to the death of his son Omar Sheikh an event that happened Hij. 796 ; according to D'Herbelot.

The author of this work states his having composed it by desire of Sultan Ibrahim grandson of Timur : his own name does not appear : the work is incomplete being the first volume only, and a part of the commencement is misplaced ; it is not improbably part of the same work as the Kitab Timouryeh of Stewart's Catalogue, No. XVII, p. 9.

11.—*Baber Nama.*Folio.—Nastalik.

The Persian translation by Mirza Abdal Rahim of the commentaries of baber—see Preface to Leyden and Erskine's translation, page XII.

12.—*Tarikh Ferishteh.*a. Large, Folio.—*Nastalik.*b. Small do. 3 volumes.—Nastalik.

The entire history of Mohammed Kasim Ferishtah, both handsome copies : especially the first Stewart's Catalogue, p. XII.

13.—*Tarikh Jehangiri.*Octavo.—Nastalik.

The reign of Jehangir from his accession to his death—author unknown.

14.—*Tarikh Kuteb Shahi wa Hadiket as Salatin.*Octavo 2 vols.—Nastalik and Shekesteh.

A history of the kings of Golconda : the first work, of which the author's name does not appear, begins with the founder of the dynasty, and terminates at the accession of Mohammed Kuli Kuteb Shah, whose reign he promises in a future work : the second accordingly continues the history of the same prince during sixteen years of his reign, but whether it be the work of the same hand is uncertain. The author of the Hadiket as Salatin is Nizam ad din Ahmed.

15.—*Tawarikh Kuteb Shahi.*Folio—Nastalik.

A history of the Kuteb Shahi kings from the founder to Mohammed Kuli Kuteb Shah, written in verse by Hiralal Khushdil, the Munshi of Hyder Kuli Khan.

This and the preceding appear not to have been known to Major Scott, who has derived his brief account of the Golconda princes from the Leb al Tawarikh alone: Preface, p. VII.

16.—*Tarikh Hakimani Hind.*Octavo—Nastalik.

A history of India; comprising an introduction, twelve sections and supplement.

Introduction. The sovereigns of India from Shem the son of Noah to Anand Deo.

1st. Sect. The Sultans of Lahore from Nasir ad din Sabactagi to Khosru son of Khosru Shah.

*Report of Babu Rao, Maratta Translator to Col. C. Mackenzie, of his Journey to Pondicherry, Karacal, &c., along the Coast, for the purpose of collecting historical information, coins, &c., from the 24th December, 1816, to 27th May, 1817.

December 24th, 1816.—Having received the money, ordered for my expenses from Kavilli Venkata Lakshmiyah I left Madras and arrived at Vanien Chowdi.

25th.—Thence proceeded to Mahabalipuram collected some coins, on the way at Patipollam, Devanairi and Salvakupam and the other places along the Coast where ancient coins are usually found.

26th.—By order I waited upon Messrs. Clark, Gwatkin and the other gentlemen, who were on an excursion here, they ordered me to shew them all the curiosities, accordingly I shewed them all the remarkable places as Mahish Asura Mardhani and Ashta Grama Devati.

27th.—Proceeded with those gentlemen to Sadras and shewed them the Kasi Modu or eminence where coins are found at Kalipakam on the further or south side of Sadras; at their desire I procured some ancient copper coins, which I shewed them: they did not return me the coins.

28th.—Mr. Clarke sent for me and expressed his wish to visit the *Mantapam that was lately discovered on the south side near Salvakupam together with Kassi Modu, I accordingly went and shewed them all the curiosities there.

29th and 30th.—Having given every information of Mahabalipur to those gentlemen, in token of their satisfaction with my assiduity they offered me four star pagodas which I declined to receive for fear of losing my character with my master.

31st.—I proceeded by myself to Salvakupam and Devanairi and procured some coins. I then wrote a letter to my master and delivered it together with the coins and the account of the temple of Oadambadi Devi, into the hands of the Tindel Reddi.—(See Letter; No.)

January 1st, 1817.—I left Mahabalipur and arrived at Sadras collecting coins at Kalipakam and other places.

2nd and 3rd.—Thence I proceeded to Alampara, called upon the woman who had formerly discovered some Roman gold coins and had promised me any others she might find: she assured me that she had been searching every morning and evening with her bags but had not yet got any; as before when she had found two ancient gold coins, (supposed to be Roman,) on that height, she made no doubt but that she might procure some other coins before I returned from Pondicherry; afterwards I assembled about 20 fishermen, and searching in the eminences, found some copper coins, beads, &c., &c.*

4th.—Thence I went to Kunimodu, where is a large ruined fort, and obtained some coins.

5th.—Thence I arrived at Pondicherry and at 2 gows south of it, collected coins upon different heights between Kunimodri and Pondicherry, waited on Lieut. Sim and delivered my master's letter to him, who on perusing it ordered me to come to his tent at the village of Sorapet, and promised to give me every assistance that I would require.

6th.—I left Pondicherry and went to the villages at 2 gows' distance west, waited on Lieut. Sim, who supplied me with some money on my master's account and sent a peon to accompany me to Teruvakaira† and to enquire any curiosities there, and to get particular accounts of them.

7th.—I left Sorapet and arrived at Teruvakaira.

The Tradition of this place relates that a Rakshasa, named Vyaghra Asur, son of Ohakra Asur, formerly performed Tapas to Chandra Sekhara Swami in order to obtain the gracious visitation of that deity; god pleased with his devotion graciously appeared,‡ and desired him to ask what he wanted: he requested that he should be exempted from the trouble of death to which mortals are subject; the god accordingly bestowed the divine Varam, upon which the Rakshasa became arrogant, and became to persecute all the Devatas, who then complained against him before god, who thereupon sent for Badhra Kali and ordered her to slay the Rakshasa; which she did; at that time the two sisters Vairi and Mahishi prepared * Laddu, and offered them to the Devatas to release their brother from death. In proof whereof several round stones resembling cakes together with a great tree of stone the vestiges of the Rakshasa are still found upon the hill.

‡ The Hindu idea is that the deity propitiated by a severe ———— Tapas of the Ascetic condescended in person to manifest his appearance and to confer the Beatific Vision on his much-favored Devotee. This apparition or appearance of the god in dreams chiefly is considered as the most distinguished favor and is the cause of the peculiar attachment of certain families to particular deities. C. M.

I went there and saw all the curiosities, the caverns, &c., procured accounts of them and of the Devatams by means of some aged people and Pujaris, besides I collected several pieces of the stony tree and cakes.

8th.—Thence I went to the village of Vedur, where is a Devalam and ten houses of the Jainas, visited Vanacar Nainar and Apanda Nainar, learned men there, and requested them to give me particular account of their Rajas and caste and of the old Bastis, accordingly they gave me a small cadjan book to copy, on which I employed a learned Bramin, who copied it off for me.

9th to 11th.—Leaving Vedur, I proceeded on my way to Kaddalur and arrived there; I bought some coins in the bazaar, and copied some inscriptions on stone in the Devalam of Terupaipalur.

12th.—I wrote a letter to my master and delivered it to Lient. Sim to be despatched to Madras.

13th to 17th.—I left Kaddalur and arrived at Verampatam, north 8 miles' distant, where formerly Palia Raya and Ponia Raya, nephews of Raja Tondaman of the race of Adivira Ram Pandian built Verampatam: It is said that he had there a great fowl, called Ponayen Savel; it was of the height of an elephant and ornamented with a large iron chain on his neck; that its strength was so great that it could throw down a house by the flapping of its wings. This extraordinary circumstance being known to their uncle Ray Tondaman he considered with himself that some great danger would happen to his own fowls, and therefore killed the aforesaid Ponayen Savel by an arrow; then Palia Raya coming to the knowledge of this circumstance, made† war with his uncle, and they both lost their lives in the battle at Verampatam, upon which Ponia Raya being greatly grieved at the death of his brother and of his uncle, placed a Val (or a large nail) on the ground, and sat down on the top, and departed this life.

* Laddu, round balls of paste of wheat, rice, &c. C. M.

Some time thereafter Adi Padachi and Naili Padachi and other Polligars came from the western country and peopled this place: Having procured the particular account thereof together with some coins, I returned to Lieut. Sim at Pondicherry.

18th.—Leaving Pondicherry, I proceeded to the Talook of Trivadi, with a letter from Lieut. Sim to Mr. Hyde, and obtaining the Collector's orders to the village people, I copied off a few stone inscriptions in the Devalam of Teruvadi wherein I could not find the year of Salivahan but only the month and date. As I considered useless for my master, I did not take off fac-similes, and I procured some account of the Jainas and Kurumbas, who ruled in Tondir Mandalam, together with some coins in the bazaar and arrived at Pondicherry, and on the 17th I despatched a basket containing the books, various stones, coins, &c., by a cooly to Madras.

February 1st.—I waited on Lieut. Sim, who gave me a letter from my master received from Madras, and told me that he was going to Karical and Tranquebar, and that I should hold myself in readiness to follow him to collect accounts and coins at those places, but that I should meantime prepare the account of Devanampatnam.

2nd.—I left Pondicherry for Devanampatnam 10 miles south of it; collecting coins on the road, on different heights.

3rd to 10th.—I went to Devanampatnam and enquired for ancient books of the establishment of that town, the people said that they had lost all the accounts and documents, &c., during the disturbances of Hyder Ali, upon which I collected about twenty aged men, from whom I procured accounts, together with some ancient coins, upon that height.

11th to 16th.—I copied the inscriptions that were in the Devalam of Teruvenjapur and Verupapalur, wrote a letter to my master, and delivered it to Lieut. Sim for despatch to Madras.

17th to 19th.—I was employed enquiring for the account of the ancient Chola Rajas and Pandia Rajas who ruled in Tondir Mandalam, from the learned men living at Pondicherry.

20th.—I wrote a letter to my master and despatched it to Madras by a cooly with a basket containing books, coins, and five kinds of earth, procured on the hill of Tiruvenjepur together with the account of Devanampatnam in the Mahratta language.

21st to 26th.—I was employed translating the account of the Jainas and the Kurumbas who ruled in Tondirmandalam, which I procured at Truvakaira, Terawadi, Teruvenjepur and Devanampatnam and other places, meantime I received a letter from Lient. Sim, saying that I should first follow his baggage to Karical, and that the business which I had to do here, could be finished on my return from Tranquebar, I accordingly finished the translation and was ready to proceed.

March 1st to 3rd.—I was attending on Lient. Sim, and delivered a packet containing the original and translation of the Jainas, for him to frank and despatch to Madras ; and then took leave of him to go to Karical.

4th to 8th.—Leaving Kaddalur I proceeded to Tranquebar, six gows south by the way of Sehetamber, Shi Ally, and Videswar Kovil, collecting different coins in the bazaar together with the accounts of the Chola and Pandia Rajas from the learned people.

9th.—I waited upon Lient. Sim, at Tranquebar who directed me to procure the account of the Rajas and some ancient coins there until he returned from Karical.

10th to 11th.—I proceeded to the different heights, procured coins, purchased some in the bazaar from the shroffs ; I visited Mr. Allcur, who has a collection of different coins, and requested him to shew them to me, he desired me to come the next day and that he would shew me every thing as I wished.

12th.—I waited on Lient. Sim and acquainted him about the coins of Mr. Allcur upon which he took me to Mr. Allcur's house, shewed me all the coins and told me to look out for any Roman gold or copper coins, accordingly I searched for about two hours, but could find no Roman coins.

13th.—Lient. Sim gave me 10 star pagodas with a letter to Mr. Thackeray, Assistant Collector at Tanjore, in order to get a particular account of the Puduvul Goporam of Buddha which is situated about a quarter of a mile north of Nagapatnam together with the coins of Karical, Nagur and other places.

14th.—I left Tranquebar and went to Karical 5 miles south, I went by the sea side and searched for coins upon the heights* there but could find none, bought some coins in the bazaar.

15th.—Left Karical and arrived at Nagapatam at 8 miles south by the road of Nagur, collecting some coins on the way in the bazaar.

16th to 17th.—Waited on Mr. Thackeray and delivered Lieutenant Sim's letter to him who on perusal gave me an order to the village people, together with a peon, and ordered me to shew him all the histories and curiosities I am collecting in his district, with which I complied and took leave of him to go to the neighbouring villages.

18th to 20th.—I copied the Sthala Purānam of Sunder Raja Swami and Kanyarohen Swami of Nagapatam; and the Silpi Sastram or art of making statues for the Bouddhas and Jainas and constructing Devalams, &c., together with the account of Puduvole Gopuram which says that while the Bouddha Rajas were ruling in the commencement of the Salivahan Sakam, they built the temples at Teruviyat, Kelananamchari, Nelapadi, Mara-dambat and other places together with a large Gopuram at a quarter of a mile north from Nagapatam and carved the images according to the Bouddah Sastram and built a large town, performed every kind of ceremonies to the god, and ruled there; as the Bouddhas used to eat fish, there arose a great difference between Hemasital Maha Raja and Amukha Varashen Maha Raja who conquered them in four Sastrams and drove them out to Khandy† Desam (a foreign country.) At that period the Baud- dahs threw all their property into the wells, hid their images under ground and run away. At that time a Bouddha Sanyasi named Hemawanta finding no means of carrying off the property of the said Puduvole Gopuram, he hid it in several brass pots which he secured in the midst of the temple, placed a large Chakram,* on the top, and by virtue of his Mantrams it continually revolved with such a quick motion that no person dared approach it, and then fled away with the other Bouddhas.

After the Bouddhas had fled, and the Jain Government was established, many people tried to carry off the property from the said Puduvole Gopuram, but they could not; at last a Brahmin priest of the Sri Vaishnava sect named Terumenje Alwar came to this place and tried very much to obtain the treasures of Puduvoli Gopuram but could not; he then enquired of some old people, by whom this Puduvole Gopuram was built, and in what part of the country they are now; they answered that in the commencement of the Salivahan Sakam, during the reign of the Bouddha Rajas, they built this Puduvoli Gopuram but some time afterwards they were banished to Khandy country by the Jaina Rajas; about that period a Bouddha Sanyasi named Hemawanta secreted much treasure in that Gopuram, and placed a Chakram over it to guard the treasure, wherefore if you go to Kandy, the Bouddha people will explain to you the best means of procuring the treasury of Puduvoli Gopuram. Accordingly he proceeded to the Kandy country visited the Bouddha Sanyasis who then enquired of Terumenje Alwar. "Who are you and from whence do you come?" Terumenje Alwar replied, "That he came from Ohola Mondalam." The Bouddha Sanyasi enquired, "Did you ever see our Puduvoli Gopuram at Nagapatnam which is surrounded by a large Chakram on the top?" Terumenje Alwar answered, "The Chakram that revolved round on the top is entirely stopt." The Bouddha Sanyasi said "As that country contains a great abundance of plantain trees, the Chakram has stopt;" He then enquired "Whether the Mohara Oullu (or great stone slab of the gate) is still standing or not," Terumenje Alwar answered, "It is placed." Then the Bouddha Sanyasi said, "As the country is Punji Perta (or abounding with cotton), it is placed;" Afterwards the Bouddha Sanyasi asked "Whether the Garbha Guddi and the Ponyaru or steps of the tank Kamala Ayala (or Teruvalur were completed;" he answered "Yes they are completed," The Bouddha Sanyasi said "As there are plenty of Vralmin in that country it is therefore completed.

Terumenje Alwar keeping these things in his heart, came to Nagapatam collected one or two hundred men got some plantain trees and planted them round the Ohakram on the top of Puluvali Gopuram, by which the movement and virtue of the Chakram was entirely stopt. Terumenje Alwar then entered into the temple, broke down the first Ankanam, and carried off all the valuable property upon carts. On arriving near the village of Terukonagudi, the morning broke, whereupon he buried the treasure and sat down there with his people. The villagers coming with their bullocks in the morning to plough, desired his people to get up; but Terumenje Alwar told them, "This is our own place: no one can plough here without our consent" Whereupon there arose a violent dispute among them which lasted till 5 o'clock, then Terumenje Alwar pronounced a malediction that "No water should spring in that Null" and as this quarrel was not settled in a satisfactory manner he cursed that "No disputes should ever hereafter be settled in this place" as he was troubled here for want of sleep, he cursed, that persons under a tamarind tree should not sleep during the night in this place. All which continues till this time as described in the following Tamul verse :

Wuranda Kanner
Varumgada Palli
Tirada Vallaku
Terukanaguddi

No cool water ever spring
 Nor sleep fall under the tamarind during night

 At Terukanaguddi.

Next morning Terumenje Alwar carried off all the treasure, to the southern country and established several Devalams together with said Kamal Alayen and Vrihadiswar Kovil and established there all kind of worship and festivals, &c.

A particular account of these, and of the Jainas and Bouddhas is particularly detailed in the Kyfiyat.

Four months ago as an inhabitant of the Devalam of Kanyarohana Swami of Nagapatnam named Sabhapati was ploughing at a quarter of a mile east of Puduval Gopuram, the ploughshare struck against a Bouddha image which was highly gilt; the man from its glittering appearance thought the image was of gold, and willing to avail himself of his good fortune, he went directly and acquainted the Stanikulu and took them to the place; the image was taken up and carried into the Devalam on a certain night, and finding on examination that it was only gilt, they produced to rub off the gilding, 8 or 10 pagodas' weight in the gold, intending to rub off the rest and then to melt the image into brass pots secretly to save their character and prevent its coming to the knowledge of the Circar people. Hearing of this, I immediately went to the Devalam, visited the Stanikulu and requested them to shew me the image, but they denied any knowledge of such image at first; I then went to one Timmapiah the head inhabitant there and acquainted him of the circumstance, together with the accounts I had received of the place of the image, and promised him a reward for assisting me to get access to the articles, but after much pains to discover the image, he told me he could not discover it.

Resolved however to trace the facts I sat down before the gate, and after much discourse with the Stanikul, he produced the image which they agreed to dispose of for sixteen or twenty star pagodas, upon which I advanced them two pagodas and promised to pay the rest within fifteen days. Having thus settled, I acquainted my master by letter, thereof. Meantime some other head Stanikul having got notice of my negotiation, went directly to the Devalam and saw the image, and coming to my lodging, they returned the money advanced declaring that they would never agree to sell the image even for thousands. I thereupon resolved to wait for my master's orders before I should apply to the Collector; but acquainted Venkat Rao the head Seristadar of the Cutcherry, and meantime forbid the Stanikul to melt down the image, (as we were apprehensive of) without the Collector's permission; I went myself to the place where it had been dug up, and employed four coolies to dig to the depth of a man but finding only a stone image of Bouddah and two covered Bouddha wells, I suspended further search and returned to my house.

21st.—I went to the village of Nelapadi, six miles west, where, during the Government of the Bouddha Rajas, a large Nagar had existed and in a Devalam according to the Bouddha Sastram, two stone images had been placed, and worshipped with all kind of ceremonials. At present the Devalam is entirely destroyed and sunk to the earth, and only the two images remain, their faces towards one another; there I visited some Jaina people and enquired for the ancient history of the place; as they were inimical to the Bouddhas; they would give no direct answers, and only said "they understood nothing of these things save what regarded their own religion," therefore I took down some account of the Jainas from these people.

22nd.—Thence I went to Kelanamemchari, where I found some old Pandarams and enquired for the ancient histories and traditions of the Chola Rajas, Chera Rajas and Pandia Rajas, and they gave me some account of Cuna Pandia, Somasundar Pandia, &c.

23rd to 30th.—Thence I proceeded to Terwallur by the way of Teruviat and Maradambat, &c., there are some stone images of Bouddha of the height of from one or two men. Formerly during the Government of Virya Vadenga Solen, son of Manuneta Solen, a widow of the Tondaman caste that was living at Adi Yeka Mungul Gramam, one mile east of Teruvalur, had a son, whose parents had buried much treasure in that village: when the lad was of an age to read in the Pallicutam it happened that a certain Panchangi (or Calendar Bramin) named Sundariah who used to go to the neighbouring villages to rehearse the Panchángam in the way of his calling, on the road passing by where the treasure was hid, he repeatedly met the Pisachi (or Demons) that used to watch there, who appeared to him like sepoy: at their meeting he used to repeat to them the Panchángam as he returned to his own house; in this manner it continued for some time; the Demon at last said to him "Why do you come here every day to read the Panchángam? What benefit do you expect from us?" The Panchángi answered, that "He wanted nothing but their favor." The devil then told him "There is a certain widow's son who reads in the school in this village, whose ancestors buried a great deal of treasure in this place. We are demons, and are therefore guarding it here, if you go to him, and bring a draft from him for the sum you require, we will give you the money." The Panchángi then went to the widow's house, saw the young lad and desired him to shew his writing; but the boy being young was not able to write but from that time the Panchángi used to feed him and give him instructions in the Alphabet, &c., and having obtained some knowledge, he one day told the boy to write upon a Cadjan leaf an order for a thousand pagodas payable to the Panchángi in order to see a specimen of his handwriting: the boy accordingly wrote this and the Panchángi carried and shewed it to the Demons who immediately paid the sum. This continued for some days, the lad grew up day by day, and obtained the complete favor of the Chola Raja and a very lucrative employment; at the expiration of some time, the Raja having raised an army against the Kalinga Raja left the charge of his Government to the youth, conferred on him the title of Karanákar Tondaman and marched to the northward.

Meanwhile the circumstance of the hidden treasure came to the knowledge of Karanákar Tondaman, who went to the aforesaid place took possession of the whole treasure, built the temple, Muntapam, &c., at Teruvallur distributed abundance in charity, placed several inscriptions on the south, west, north and east walls of the Karanákar Tondaman; from that time the place where the treasure was buried is generally called Gadaram Kundam.

Virya Vadengan having conquered the northern country, returned to Teruvallur where he saw all the charities of Karanákar Tondaman and desired him to fix the charity in his name as he was ruling instead of him; this he refused saying "he could not;" afterwards the Raja asked him to give to him the charity of the water of Kamal Alayem where the cattle drank at noon time, to which he would not agree, whereupon the Raja was highly enraged and caused the head of Karanákar Tondaman to be taken off.

When the Rajah returned from the northward, he brought with him the images of Vigneswar Durgá and Mahishasura Mardhani and placed them in the Devalam, wherein they remain to this day.

I also took a complete copy of the Kamal Alaya Mahátmam of Teruvallur, an account of these Rajahs is particularly given in the Kyfiyat.

I thereafter went to Dipamgeddi a village five miles west, where formerly during the Government of Chittarasu and Puvarasu the Jain Rajahs built a Devalam, with seven courts and walls and set up an image, and peopled or founded the Gramam and established festivals, &c.

While it was so, on a certain day the Jain people intending to make a procession in the village, lighted many flambeaus and went into the village; but the neighbouring Palligars came with their followers, attacked them, raised a great disturbance, extinguished the lamps; from that time the village has been generally called by the name of Dipam Guddi.

Afterwards in the Salivahan Sakam year 1522 in the cycle year Plavah a certain Jain Sanyasi named Manibhadra, finding this ancient temple at Dipam Guddi in ruins, reared a new and smaller one, built about twenty houses for Jainas, and established worship without procession in the village (Gramam.)

About six months ago a Jaina named Mailvadhar proposing to form a well for the use of the Devalam, began to dig up the soil; at one man's depth, they discovered an earthen pot full of small brass images of Párswanáth Tirthankar which they secured in the Devalam; when I went there understanding this circumstance I went to the said Mailvadhar and requested him for the sight of the articles, I asked him for some of the images at a certain price, which he would not agree to, but at last with difficulty I got one.

I there obtained some account of Dipam Guddi together with that of the images that were found in the earth near the Devalam; while I was preparing to go to Teruvalur, an inhabitant thereof named Tandava Rayen gave me notice that at half a mile south was a place, where was buried abundance of treasure by Kulutunga Solen; accordingly I proceeded thither and employed four coolies to dig to the depth of a man, but I could only find some earthen pots and some round black stones, &c.

April 1st to 7th.—I went to Rajamanar Guddi and copied the Sthala Purānam of Raja Gopal Swami together with the particular account of the Jaina Devalam there.

It says that when Maredatta Maharaja was ruling at Rajamapur he prepared to celebrate the festival of the goddess Chenda Mari in the month of Chittree, before all the courtiers; he then ordered a Taliari named Chandra Karmen, to go out of the town, and seize one male and one female and bring them directly to be sacrificed to Chendamari in order to perform the rites of the festival. At that time one Sudhātāchari attended by his Sishya (or disciples) 500 in number happened to halt in the said Devalam, who had permitted two of his disciples, a male and a female named Abhaya ruchi and Abhaya-mati, to go without the town to take their food and to return directly; the Taliari meeting them seized and brought them to Maredatta Maharaja, who was much pleased and took a sword in his own hand before Chendamari the goddess; then the whole of the courtiers blessed the Raja and requested them to be sacrificed soon; meantime they both said “You being a Raja Chandra or cold like the moon, ought to support all people as your children.” The Raja was much surprised to see the boldness of the young men, laid down his sword and enquired of them, “What is the reason that you assumed the Bramhacharee Vrittam in this youthful state,” they answered, “Our circumstances ought not to be explained to such a cruel person as you are; but only to virtuous people, therefore mind your business”. The Raja becoming fearful, prostrated at their feet, and earnestly entreated them to explain their circumstances at full length, saying that they will no doubt obtain Kailasam on hearing their circumstances: they began as follows:—

“While Asoka Maha Raja was ruling at Vujainpatnam, he had a son named Yasodhar by his consort Chandramati, whom after he had attained the age of sixteen years he got married to a

Princess named Amurtapati, who bore him a son named Yasomatteyen. On a certain evening, while Asoka Maha Raja was sitting with his wife on the top of his palace, a thick cloud gathered in the sky, and in a moment afterwards disappeared. Then Asoka Maha Raja considering that life was uncertain, left his family, installed his son Yasodharen, and went himself to the woods to perform Tapas (or penance.)

Afterwards while his son Yasodhar Maha Raja was ruling over the Rajyam on a certain day as he was in bed with his consort Amartapatti in the palace about 4 o'clock in the morning a Mahaut (or elephant-driver) named Ashtabhanga began to sing very charmingly. Amurtapatti hearing this beautiful song, become enamoured of him, and immediately sent one of her female slaves, named Gunavati to bring him to her—she went there, and finding that it was a nasty elephant-driver was singing, she came and acquainted her mistress of it, who then said “Whomsoever a woman has fixed her affections on, he is the husband, therefore go and bring him to me immediately;” the slave accordingly went and brought and introduced him.

After the expiration of some days Yasodhar Maha Raja finding that his wife had not that affection and regard for him that she had before, began to watch her, and on a certain day the Raja found his consort with the said Ashtabhanga but considering that it was not proper to kill such a sinful woman with the Val (or sword) that he held in his hand, which was only to be drawn against renowned Rajas like himself, went away to his palace; next morning, he went to his mother Chendramati and told her that he last night dreamt that the brightness of the moon had quitted her, and had conjoined itself with the darkness of Rahu; Chendramati answered “As the dream is a very bad one, you must sacrifice several fowls and sheep to the goddess Chendamári.” Yasodhar Maha Raja shut his ears with both his hands at hearing such sinful words. Chendramati said “The person that refuses to obey his mother's orders is not honest.” Saying this she ordered him to make a fowl with flour, and sacrifice it to the goddess Chendamári; he accordingly made a fowl with flour, and painting it like a real fowl, a Demon that lived in the neighbourhood, entered its body, and in the month of Alpissie on Ashtami (or the eighth, the first quarter of the moon on Tuesday in order to perform according to his mother's directions, the Raja having taken his sword and no sooner cut off the head of the fowl before Chendamári, but the Demon that was inside crying out like a fowl fell down and died, the Raja then being very uneasy at hearing the voice of the fowl, swooned away, and considered that he must be absolved from this sin by any means, by performing Tapas (or penance) in the woods.

This circumstance coming to the knowledge of Amritavati she came to the Raja and said, "As you are a chief among Kshetrias, I beg you will forgive my fault, instal your son Yasomatti, and be pleased to dine with us in his house, after which you may proceed to the woods to perform Tapas;" having thus satisfied him she called him to her house, mixed some poison in the milk, served it up to her husband and mother-in-law, who after drinking it, both died, and she gave a loose to her amorous pleasures with the said Ashtabhanga.

The Raja having died with the sin of having killed a fowl of meal, attached to him, was reborn as a pariar at Vindhanagar and his mother as a bitch in the Karad Desam and after their death, having passed their souls into different births as porcupine, sheep, snake, crocodile, and having died often, they were at last born as fowls at the house of a pariar at Vujeni-patnam, who some time afterwards presented the fowls to the Raja who then delivered them to the care of Ohendakarma.

While it was so on a certain day, the Raja and his Queen, went to the woods on an hunting excursion: seeing Muniswar there the Raja requested him to tell him what had passed and what was to happen; meantime the said fowls having prostrated to the Muniswar stood before him with their wings closed; then Yasomati took a sword called Sapta Bhadi and cut off the fowl's heads, on which they immediately entered the womb of a certain Queen: after which a boy named Abhaya Ruchi and a girl named Abhaya Matti, were born. In our infancy we went to Sudhatáchári and learning all his particular circumstances, we obtained the rules of a Bramhachári and came with Sudhatáchári accompanied by his five hundred disciples to your Raja Mahapuri Patnam. To-day Sudhatáchári having ordered us to go to town to take our victuals, and return immediately, and accordingly when we were on our way, your Taliaree came, seized upon, and brought us to your majesty ; as we killed a fowl made of flour, we have been born in so many different shapes and have undergone all this trouble. Máridatta Maharaja, hearing this circumstance, was seized with fear and postponed the sacrifice, meantime Ohendamari having appeared in her original form prostrated herself to them and ordered her disciples not to kill any fowls or other animals hereafter, but to offer the five kinds of food, from that time the Jainas do not kill any animals : the particulars of this are stated in the Kyfiat of Raja Manor Guddi.

8th and 9th.—Proceeding by way of Nachar Guddi, I arrived at Kumbhakonam, collecting some coins thereof from the shroffs.

10th.—I visited the chief priest of Sankar Achári, expending four Rupees on fruit, &c., to introduce myself, and requested him to give me a copy of the copper inscriptions he had in his Mattham, but some of the Kayesthalu (or managers) of the Matthan directly denied that there were any inscriptions on copper plates, being afraid of losing their original documents which they had saved through many years from the destruction of different wars. I encouraged them much assuring them that I would take no original but only wanted a copy ; they answered if I assured them that only a copy was to be taken, and that I would give them a recommendation to my master regarding their discontinued Jagir, and obtain their restoration of any of the discontinued villages, that he would get me a particular account of the Cholen, Cheran and Pandian together with that of the Rajahs of Bijanagur as he was the Guru of all Rajas. I accordingly gave them a recommendatory letter ; then confiding in my assertions that I had only come to copy inscriptions, and collect historical information he was much pleased, and promised to get me a particular account of the Rajas that had ruled from the commencement of the Kali-yugam, he took me into his Agraram and shewed me about 125 copper Sasanams each contained in five or six plates : he gave me a copy of two, presented me with a piece of cloth worth five Rupees, and gave me leave, promising to get me a particular account of the Chola Rajas together with several coins, if I recommended him personally to my master at Madras, and got any assistance to recover their discontinued villages.

11th.—I went this day to the Mattham of the Lingam Katti people, visited the Sanyasi thereof and requested him to give me a particular account of Mattham, sect and the different titles derived from the several Rajahs; accordingly he gave me two books, viz.

1st. Bharani which contains an account of Utu Kuten, a Vidwan (or learned man), who became a convert to the Lingam Katti sect, and composed different Slokams or hymns to Virabhadra.

2nd. Sthala Puranam of the Mattham of the Lingam Katti sect, in which a detailed account of their sect is given; how they acquired different titles when and by whom this Mattham had been established, how many disciples of this Mattham and what Rajas had composed Grunthums.

After I had copied these books, I returned the original to the Sanyasi, who then told me that he was the chief or high priest of all the Lingam Katti and Kurambers, &c., that are in the country from Ramnad to Benares, he was able to get for me a particular account of the forty-eight Chola Rajas and sixty-four Pandia Rajas and Kurambers, with their dates; together with the Matsya, Kurma, Varaha and other gold coins for 2 or 3,000 years back; upon which I desired him to get me the aforesaid accounts, &c., he promised that he would prepare the greatest part of them very soon, and send them to Madras, by his Kayestha (or head manager): after making this promise, he told me, that he maintained himself by an annual contribution levied on his followers from several years: after the Hon'ble Company have sequestered the country, many of them are still obedient, and pay the allowance, but some are refractory, and decline giving the customary allowances, and at times, if he attempts to punish them according to their religion, they threaten that they will complain against him to the Judge of the Zillah, who will in that case send for both, and make them stand equal without regarding the quality of the priest, and enquiring the matter: for fear of this dishonour, he takes no notice of the refractory conduct of his disciples : he therefore wishes to have some document from the Hon'ble Company authorizing him to receive the annual allowance from his disciples. As the Kurambers that ruled in Tondir Mandalam and other places were all his disciples, he promised to procure me a particular account of them with dates within a month, together with some gold coins.

12th.—From thence I went to the village of Ohola Maulega, three miles west, where

Karical Solen,
Manu Alenda Solen,
Manuneta Solen,
Alaparamda Solen,
Kaveri Karaconda Solen,

Klottunga Solen,
Jembagi Solen,
Virya Vadanga Solen
 AND Oarur Solen

having built a large fort, containing Devalams, palaces, &c., peopled the town and governed there for several years, but the forts, &c., are now entirely destroyed and there is only a Konam (or corner) of the wall of the palace of the Ohola Rajas, the account of which is stated at full length in the Kyfiyat.

13th.—I went to Teravanguli four miles further west ; formerly in the Government of Kaveri Karakonda Solen, the Oaveri river being left to run at its pleasure was encroaching and destroying several Gramams, the Raja resolved to construct embankments on both sides the river, to restrain its inundations, and proceeded to the westward, as far as Sargagiri Parwall and began to build embankments extending as far as the sea, when he had completed the embankments as far as Teruvangali a great Bila-dwaram or hollow and cavity of the extent of half a mile appeared into which the water plunging disappeared ; he tried very much to lead off this water, but could not, he then went to some ancient people who dwelt there, and prostrated himself before them, and requested them to explain the remedy ; they replied “ In the village of Oatur, a Rishi named Harunda Maha Rishi performs Tapas under a Kota tree, if you go there and consult him, he will tell you how to overcome this difficulty : he accordingly went thither and visited the Rishi and prostrated to him and acquainted him of all the particulars, the Rishi answered. “ Either a king like you, or a Rishi like me should jump into that hollow, and on being buried in it Caveri will flow on forward ;” accordingly taking leave of the Rishi he came by the Billadwar, and prepared to jump in. Meanwhile the Queen coming to the knowledge of this, immediately went to the Rishi and prostrated to him, who blessed her with Dirgha Sumangala Bhava or may you live as a family woman until your death. She prayed to the Rishi, and said, “ May your blessing not be in vain, but my consort is now ready to jump into the Billadwaram, (abyss) if he does so, your blessing will be fruitless. The Rishi then immediately went to the Billadwaram, and no sooner threw himself into it than he was swallowed up, and a small Lingam rose there of itself ; upon which the Raja was enabled to complete the embankments founded, several villages, &c., and ruled there, the detailed account whereof is mentioned in the Kyfiyat.

Waited at Kumbhakonam to get the account of Nemi Iswar Tirthankar of the Jainas and to procure coins, &c., and on the 16th I wrote a letter to my master and despatched it to Madras, I also wrote a letter to Lieutenant Sim to Karacal.

I left Kumbhakonam and went to Tri Bhuvanam and Madhyarjunam wrote the particular accounts of those places together with the copies of eight inscriptions on stone. I then wrote a letter to Lieutenant Sim to Pondicherry and on the 19th at noon I received a letter from Lieutenant Sim enclosing one from my master, ordering me to come directly to Madras after receiving ten pagodas from Mr. Thackeray on his account.

20th.—Leaving Teruvadhura, I proceeded to Mayavaram to the Collector, who already proceeded to Nagapatnam after having left the said ten pagodas with his head Serishtadar, with directions to give them to me ; as soon as I went to the Cutcherry, the Serishtadar delivered the ten pagodas, after taking a receipt from me in the name of St. John Thackeray, Esq.

21st.—I arrived at Nagapatam, and shewed all the books, &c., to Mr. Thackeray which I had procured in his district according to his desire ; I afterwards went to the Devalam visited the Stanikulu and asked them to give me the Bouddah image for sixteen pagodas, but they gave me a direct answer saying "That they will never sell the image not even for thousands," when in the interim of acquainting the Collector with this circumstance, and of waiting for orders from my master to purchase the image, I requested the head Serishtadar to give strict orders to the Stanikulu not to melt or sell it without the Collector's permission.

May 1st and 2nd 1817.—I halted at Nagapatnam to collect coins at Nagar and Terumalraypatnam and other places.

3rd.—I wrote a letter to Lieutenant Sim to Pondicherry and also to my master at Madras, went to the Collector took leave from him, and leaving Nagapatam with his best compliments to my master I arrived at Tranquebar.

4th.—I waited on Mr. Camoerar and took leave of him, I purchased some coins in the bazaar.

5th.—Leaving Tranquebar, I proceeded and arrived at Pondicherry by the way of Chitambaram and collected some accounts and coins in the bazaar there.

7th.—I waited on Lieutenant Sim and shewed him all the accounts I had collected. On the 7th he gave me seventeen pagodas which settled the balance of the account for fifty star pagodas; he gave me orders to return to Madras, meantime I received a letter from C. V. Lechmyah directing me to purchase the Boudha gilt image and return soon to Madras. I then considered with myself and reflecting that if I go to Madras without the image, I may incur the displeasure of my master, I determined without any consideration of the heat or other inconvenience to return to Nagapatam first. I communicated my intentions to Mr. Sim, and that I was ready to go to Nagapatam to get the image, as I have taken much trouble to procure it, whereupon he immediately gave me a letter to Mr. Thackeray, and I went home.

10th to 18th.—I left Pondicherry and arrived at Nagapatnam, on the 18th, I waited on the Collector and delivered Mr. Sim's letter, and acquainted him of the circumstances of the Bouddha image. The Collector told me that if I could get the consent of the Stanikulu and brought the image to him, he would endeavour to get it for me ; on which I went directly to the Devalam, visited the Stanikulu and urged them much ; before this they had weighed the image and found it weighed 187 seers, they had consulted together and agreed that the image should not be given to any gentleman under 187 star pagodas being, at the rate of one pagoda per seer, as it was very curious. This I heard with great uneasiness and was considering with myself how to procure it ; trusting in God I went in the evening to some of the Stanikulu's relations and told them I would give them a reward of three or four pagodas if they came before the Collector and declared that they were heirs of that Devalam and would agree to sell the image according to the bazaar price ; having settled thus I took those people to the Collector's house. Mr. Thackeray sent for the Stanikulu and asked " Will you dispose of the image at a fixed price," they said " yes," on which the Collector told me, if I came in the morning, he would give me the image : next morning the other Stanikulu hearing of this, about forty or fifty of them in number came to the Cutcherri, to acquaint the Collector, that they had not agreed to sell the image : meantime I went and paid my respects to the Collector who sent for his head Seristadar, Venkat Rao, and settled the price of the image at twenty-five star pagodas, and took an agreement from me for that sum and delivered the image into my care. I immediately employed four coolies to carry it to my house, I also wrote to my master enclosed in Mr. Sim's letter and despatched it to Pondicherry.

19th to 23rd.—On the 19th I left Nagapatnam and arrived at Pondicherry on the 23rd, and waited on Lieutenant Sim shewing him the image, and took his leave to go to Madras.

24th and 25th.—Thence I arrived at Alampara and visited the old fishwoman, who had promised to get Roman gold coins, although she had tried every morning and evening she had not been successful, yet however she hopes to get some very soon, and promises to bring them to me to Madras. I then employed some fishermen and tried till one o'clock upon that height and procured one Roman copper coin, and some others ; I desired the woman to endeavour to find some Roman gold coins and returned to my place.

26th and 27th.—I left Alampara on the 26th and arrived at Madras on the 27th.

29th.—I waited on my master and delivered the image, &c., to him.

30th.—From the 30th May to the 2nd June, I was employed in completing my report from 24th December, 1816, to the 27th May 1817, which was finished on the 2nd June.
